SHIPPING SEASON TO OPEN WITH A RUSH ON STROKE OF MIDNIGHT

Fleet Will Clear From Duluth for Lower Lakes.

Captains Are Waiting for Insurance to Go Into Effect.

Will Also Avoid Opening the Season on a Friday.

Navigation for the season of 1910 will begin tonight with a rush.

With the going into effect at midnight of the marine insurance for the present season, a big fleet of boats, lying at anchor in the harbor at the present time, will blow a siren signal of warning and will slip their anchors for the maiden trip down the lakes for the present season.

The going tonight of so many boats is a splendid augury for the business of the present season. With navigation opening at least two weeks earlier than the season of 1909, there is a large fleet that will leave on the instant the underwriters become responsible for any accident that should happen.

The W. E. Rice, Boland, Alec Thompson, McWilliams, R. W. England and Garretson will leave with ore, according to D. T. Helm. These boats are loaded and simply awaiting the going into effect of the insurance.

The Hoover & Mason of the G. A. Tomlinson line, the first ore boat to load here the present season, is ready, but may not leave tonight.

The Chili, loaded with durum; the C. O. Jenkins, loaded with barley; the George Peavey, loaded with barley; the Ward Ames with durum; Selwyn with spring wheat; and the Cornelius, light, will also leave.

The Minneapolis is loaded with spring wheat and may leave tonight. The W. H. Gratwick is loaded with oats and durum, and the North Lake with oats, and both of these boats may start the first trip of the season with the sounding of the 12 o'clock whistle.

In addition to these boats the two

TRADING STAMPS DECLARED LEGAL

State Supreme Court Says They Are Not Barred By Gift Law.

St. Paul, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state supreme court today in an opinion in the case of Attorney General Simpson vs. The Sperry-Hutchinson company, a trading stamp concern, dismissed the writ in a suit to enjoin the company from continuing the issue of trading stamps. The court held that trading stamps did not contain a sufficient element of chance to bring them within the prohibition of the statute which legislated against gift enterprises.

AVIATORS GATHER AT SAN ANTONIO

Aerial Contests Will Begin There April 21---Curtiss Is Entered.

San Antonio, Tex., April 15.—Among aviators who have arrived to take part in the aviation meet to be held here April 21, are Glenn H. Curtiss, J. C. Mars, C. F. Willard, P. S. Young and Jerome S. Fanchiulli. Other aviators to come are Charles K. Hamilton and Capt. Thomas Baldwin.

Capt. Baldwin who built the dirigible balloon purchased by the United States government, will operate a duplicate of the government balloon during the meet.

The program will include contests in speed, high altitudes, endurance tests, passenger carrying trips, long flights and figures.

CHEROKEE CLAIMS TO BE PAID SOON

Will Take Four or Five Millions Out of Federal Treasury.

Washington, April 15.—A big hole in the treasury balance will be made soon when the officials send out warrants in payment of the Cherokee claims with interest, which have been passed on by the court of claims. Principal and interest will amount to between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. Payments will be made from day to day, as the clerical work incidental to the cancellation of the claim is stupendous.

There are more than 30,000 beneficiaries, 23,350 of whom reside west of the Mississippi river. All of them have more or less Indian blood in their veins.

FARGO MAN HOLDS OFFICE IN THE SHRINE

J. FRANK TREAT
Of Fargo, N. D.,
Deputy Imperial Potentate of the Imperial Council, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

Fargo, N. D., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The succession of J. Frank Treat of Fargo to the position of deputy imperial potentate in the Shrine, during the meeting at New Orleans, was pleasing to the Shriners of this city and state. Mr. Treat had been illustrious potentate here for many years and was afterwards a member of the imperial council, being advanced a stage each year. At the next election he will head the imperial council of the entire United States.

AUTO PARTY SAVE WOMAN

Make Quick Run to See Fire and Drag Invalid From the Room.

Night Blaze Near St. Paul Believed to Have Been Incendiary.

St. Paul, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Edward Adan, wife of the proprietor of Oakwood Inn at Bass Lake, narrowly escaped death at 1 o'clock this morning in a fire which did $5,000 damage to the buildings. She was rescued by members of an automobile party, who dragged her from the room in which she lay ill, just before the walls fell.

A barrel of automobile oil, ordinarily kept in the garage, was found against the outside of the house, and part of the contents had been smeared on the floors. Mr. Adan says the fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin.

There were no guests at the place when the fire broke out.

The automobile party was attracted by the glare in the sky, and, turning in from the Rice street road, arrived just in time to help Mr. Adan reach his wife's room.

The place has been closed as a public inn for the last three weeks.

BEET SUGAR MEN UNDER SUSPICION

Federal Agents Seek Evidence of Trust Control of the Business.

Washington, April 15.—Agents of the department of justice and the treasury are looking into certain features of the beet sugar industry in the West. The object, it is believed, is to ascertain what relations, if any, exist between the promoters of that industry and the so-called sugar trust, with a view to determining whether such relations result in any violations of the Sherman anti-trust law, such as the fixing of prices or a combination in restraint of trade.

Just now the department is closing an inquiry into the beet sugar side of the question at Pueblo, Colo. Operations at three or four other points are to be included in the scope of the investigation. The possibility, it was said at the department today, is that indictments may follow.

Alleged frauds against the revenues at New York and at New Orleans are being made the subject of careful inquiry by the department.

SEVENTEEN HUNDRED COUNT NEW YORK NOSES.

New York, April 15.—The count of noses in New York started today with 1,700 census enumerators. The workers in the East side districts were particularly active in their earlier efforts, as it is there that the work is admittedly most difficult and the job of accounting for the polyglot population of that district was expected to tax the resources of the enumerators.

GETS RAIN AND SLEET

North Dakota Is Struck By a Heavy Storm in North and West.

Minnesota Farmers Welcome Moisture After Long Season of Dryness.

Fargo, N. D., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rain of yesterday and early today was converted into sleet during this forenoon which is reported to be heavy in western and northern parts of the state. The extra moisture is being welcomed by the farmers, though it will slightly delay spring work. Farmers who already have their wheat in are expressing great jubilation.

There is considerable wire trouble. The Western Union has lost everything west of Valley City, and the Northwestern Telephone company is reaching points by circuitous service. The Tri-State company is having some trouble in raising points. Clear weather is predicted for tonight.

Welcome in Minnesota.

The rain that came last night and continues today is welcome after the

FOOD EXPORT VALUES FALL

Statistics Show Increase in Value of Manufactures Sent Abroad.

Washington, April 15.—Exports of foodstuffs from the United States for the fiscal year 1910 will amount to $336,000,000 in value, according to the estimate of the department of commerce and labor, for the nine months ending last March, as against more than $450,000,000 in 1906, $500,000,000 in 1900, and over $550,000,000 in 1898.

The report shows that the foodstuffs were higher in price during the last year, while in many cases, the exports were less than half what they were in the previous year.

The number of cattle exported in the nine months, ending with March, 1910, were about 127,000, indicating for the full fiscal year about 175,000. In 1904 the cattle exports were 593,000. The value of cattle exports in 1910 will be approximately $16,000,000, compared with more than $42,000,000 in 1904.

Decrease in Foodstuffs.

Practically the same ratio of decrease prevails in all foodstuffs. The quantity of wheat exported in the fiscal year 1910 will aggregate about 50,000,000 bushel against 157,000,000 in 1892, the high record. The average export value for 1910 was $1.03 a bushel against 73 cents in 1892.

While foodstuff exports have been falling off, the value of exports of manufactures has increased for the fiscal year 1910 will approximate in value $750,000,000 against $453,000,000 in 1902, $250,000,000 in 1896 and $175,000,000 in 1880, thus bringing the value of all exports for 1910 within $150,000,000 of the high record of 1907 and 1908.

SORRY THEY HISSED TAFT

Suffragists at Washington Convention Regret Action Toward President.

Treasurer's Report Shows Association Is Gaining Members in Minnesota.

Washington, April 15. — President Taft's address before the National Woman's Suffrage association last night and the manner in which it was received was the one subject of conversation among the delegates previous to their meeting today as they gathered in groups in the hotel corridors to discuss the incident, which was termed by many as "deplorable." Officers and a great number of the delegates expressed regret at the occurrence. President Taft, the first executive of the nation ever to greet a convention of woman suffragists, braved the danger last night of facing an army of women who want the ballot, had the courage to confess his opinion, and was hissed.

Adopt a Resolution.

In expiation of the hissing last night the convention today adopted a resolution of thanks and appreciation for his words of welcome. The resolution described Mr. Taft as the "first incumbent of his office to recognize officially our determination to secure a complete democracy, thereby testifying his conviction as to its power and growth," and that the president's seriousness, honesty and friendliness had "converted what might have been an empty form into an official courtesy, historic alike for him and for us."

The resolution was adopted unanimously by a rising vote.

Today's session of the convention was preceded by a conference on the practical methods of work, at which Mary Hutcheson Page of Massachusetts presided. The subject was dis-

WOMAN'S SLAYER DIES ON GIBBET

Robbery Motive for Crime Which Brought Him Only $72.

Rockford, Ill., April [illegible].—Clinton St. Clair was hanged here this morning for the murder of Mrs. Mary McIntosh. St. Clair, who was a laborer, 33 years old, entered the home of Mrs. McIntosh, an aged recluse, on the night of Jan. 20 and stabbed her to death. The motive was robbery and he obtained $72.

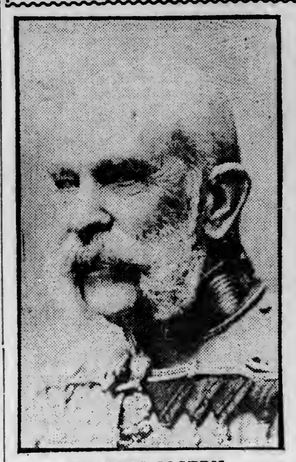
NEGAUNEE MAN BLOWS UP HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN AND HIMSELF WITH DYNAMITE---GIRL ESCAPES

Frank Saarinen Kills Himself and His Wife and Young Son.

Puts Explosive in Bedrooms and Victims Are Badly Mangled.

Reason for the Act Is Not Known---Family Strangers in That Place.



Negaunee, Mich., April 15.—Special to The Herald.—Frank Saarinen, 30 years old, early this morning blew his wife, their 5-year-old son and himself almost to atoms with dynamite. Their daughter, a child of 3 years old, escaped miraculously with only minor injuries. The reason for the act is unknown.

Saarinen evidently put a stick of dynamite in the bedroom occupied by his wife and the little girl, and another in the room in which he and the boy slept. Saarinen and the boy both were terribly mangled by the explosion, and death must have been instantaneous.

Mrs. Saarinen's body also was frightfully mangled, but the little girl, who was in bed with her mother when the explosive was touched off, escaped with practically no hurts at all.

Saarinen and his family all were strangers here, having come to this place only two weeks ago.

RECEIVE ROOSEVELT AT VIENNA

FRANCIS JOSEPH,
Emperor of Austria, Who Gave Him Special Honor.

COUNT VON AERENTHAL,
Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs.

ROOSEVELT INDIGNANTLY DENIES PINCHOT REPORT

Says He Never Said He Would Be Candidate for President.

Ex-President Is Given Cordial Reception at Capital of Austria.

Vienna, April 15.—Mr. Roosevelt was extremely indignant today when he learned that a report had been printed in Paris and cabled to America to the effect that one of the results of the recent conference with Gifford Pinchot was an agreement on the part of the former president to the use of his name as a candidate for the presidency.

Mr. Roosevelt again reiterated that he had not, and would not, "make any declaration in regard to American politics while in Europe." He had received and talked with Mr. Pinchot, he said, as he would receive and talk with any other political friend.

Correspondent "In Bad."

Mr. Roosevelt said he would hereafter decline to receive the newspaper correspondent who had given currency to this report.

The story to which Mr. Roosevelt referred appeared originally in the Secole XIX of Genoa, and was repeated in special dispatches to Paris and to the United States. It stated in effect that Mr. Roosevelt had reached an agreement with Mr. Pinchot that if it became opportune he would become a presidential candidate again.

Col. Roosevelt and his son, Kermit, arrived here at 6:45 o'clock this morning.

The distinguished guest was met by Herr Von Mueller, principal secretary of the foreign office, who was there as the representative of the Austrian government; American Ambassador Kerens, and others of the staffs of the American embassy and consulate; and Baron Hengelmuller von Hengervar, Austro-Hungarian ambassador at Washington.

After an exchange of greetings Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Kerens entered a court carriage and drove direct to the

SHRINERS LEAVING CRESCENT CITY

Duluth Delegation Starts North on the "Twin City Special."

New Orleans, April 15.—The thirty-sixth annual meting of the Ancient Arabic order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, which went into history last night, had its termination finally marked by the departure of numerous temples for their homes throughout the coutry today. Some of the delegations left last night; many more left this morning. The "Twin City Special," probably one of the prettiest trains that ever pulled out of the local station, left the city at 3 o'clock this morning, having on board the nobles from Aad temple, Duluth; Osman temple, St. Paul; Zurah temple, Minneapolis, and El Zagal temple, Fargo N. D.

SAY ESTRADA IS TO BE CRUSHED

Nicaraguans in America Expect News of Battle Any Day.

New York, April 15.—Nicaraguans here expect that a final blow at the Estrada revolution will be struck within a few days. Advices received by them say that the Madriz troops are being pushed rapidly toward Bluefields. It is reported that Grektown will be made the base of operations for the main attack.

It is now the dry season in Nicaragua, when trails over the mountains are good and it is possible to move and sustain troops with greater ease than at any time since the revolution started last October. This, it is believed, will facilitate the government's attack.

Cablegram From Lender.

Washington, April 15.—Senor Castrillo, representative in Washington of the Estrada government, today received a cablegram from Bluefields signed by Secretary of State Diaz saying:

"The enemy cannot advance. He has been able to assemble in Acoyapa scarcely 2,000 men."

A few days ago Castrillo was advised that the Estrada forces were occupying La Mangua, which is about twenty-seven miles from Acoyapa. He believes the Estrada command will advance upon that of Madriz, forcing it either to fight or retire.

PICKING TWELVE TO TRY DR. HYDE

Lawyers Work Without Court's Being Formally in Session.

Kansas City, Mo., April 15.—No regular session of court was held for the Hyde murder trial today. Attorneys were ordered yesterday after the selection of the temporary jury of forty-seven men, to decide today which twelve men they would retain and report the list to the court at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The opening statement probably will be made by the state Saturday.

The depositions taken from members of the Swope family in the suit for alleged slander, filed by Dr. Hyde, will never be signed, according to attorneys for the prosecution. They were not signed when taken. The reason given by the Swope attorneys for their refusal to permit the witnesses to sign them is that the evidence was given before Notary George Kelly, a law partner of R. R. Brewster, one of the counsel for the defense, and are therefore illegal, they say.

PEACE ASSURED IN QUAKER CITY

Calling Off of Car Strike to Be Ratified By Men Themselves.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—The action of the executive committee of the street railway strikers in voting last night to accept the terms made by the traction company a month ago, will likely be ratified by the men, and it is expected that the general mass meeting of the strikers tomorrow will formally vote to accept the terms and officially declare the strike at an end.

Under the terms the old men will be taken back as fast as possible; the cases of the 175 men whose discharge precipitated the strike will be submitted to arbitration; wages to be increased gradually until 25 cents an hour is reached; open shop.

HIGH NORTHWEST WINDS ARE COMING.

Storm warnings of high northwest winds were issued by the weather bureau this morning at 10 o'clock after receiving the message from Washington of the change in the indicator of the direction of the wind. The high winds from the Northwest are expected this afternoon and tomorrow for the entire Lake Superior region.

Fever Expert Going to Islands.

San Francisco April 15.—Maj. Theodore C. Lyster medical corps U. S. A., yellow fever expert in the Panama zone, arrived here yesterday on his way to the Philippine islands, where he goes to study the conditions which permit the existence of yellow fever in the islands.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

Those who were not present at the Jefferson day banquet of the Democrats of Minnesota in St. Paul Wednesday evening can hardly comprehend the fervor and complete abandon of the enthusiasm that was unloosed on that occasion.

There was a unanimity of sentiment expressed, a thorough-going confidence unmistakably evinced, that could not but convince the observer that the party of John A. Johnson is going into the approaching campaign with every assurance of winning a victory that will compare very favorably with those won when the late lamented governor headed the ticket.

That the rank and file of Minnesota Democracy is for Lind first, last and all the time, was patent. Every mention of his name and every veiled reference to his individuality was cheered with a whole-hearted enthusiasm that left no room for doubt about it.

From all parts of the state men who were at the banquet brought word that Republican dissatisfaction is so widespread and deep-seated that it will be no impossible thing to elect most, if not all, of the candidates on the Democratic state ticket, and in the congressional districts there are plain evidences of intense disgust with Republican misrule that give every promise of leading to the election of untrammeled Democrats to the seats now occupied by the machine-bound Republican representatives.

A feature of the banquet that was generally commented upon as one of the most interesting on the program was the speech of Fred W. Johnson of New Ulm, brother of the late Governor Johnson. This speech demonstrated that Mr. Johnson need not depend in the slightest upon the fame of his late distinguished brother for any of the sincere regard in which he is held by the people of Minnesota who have been fortunate enough to become acquainted with him and they are many.

In his talk which, because of the lateness of the hour and the large number of speakers remaining to be heard, did not occupy more than ten minutes, Mr. Johnson followed a clear and logical line of thought and reasoning, presenting his ideas in a pleasing and convincing manner. He held the absorbed attention of the listeners, who were regretful that he was unable to give them more time. The hearty applause that followed the conclusion of his brief address bore eloquent testimony to the effectiveness of his speech and to the regard in which he is held.

Mr. Johnson is being urgently pressed by his friends to enter the field as the Democratic candidate for senator against Frank Clague of Redwood Falls, the Republican incumbent. The Nineteenth district, in which both reside, is composed of Brown and Redwood counties, Mr. Clague living in Redwood and Mr. Johnson in Brown. The personal popularity of the late governor's brother is such that if he enters the field he probably will have no difficulty in defeating the former speaker of the lower house of the legislature.

When the members of the Democratic state central committee were gathered in groups in the lobby of the Merchants hotel in St. Paul yesterday, waiting for the time of convening Chairman A. D. Brown of the Republican state committee, made a cautious excursion into the camp of the enemy. Frank A. Day saw him and hurried forward to shake hands with him. Mr. Brown and Mr. Day chatted for a moment, and then the Democratic Warwick cordially invited the Republican chairman to accompany the committee members to the hall above and preside over the session for a few minutes. However, Brown laughingtly declined, and a few minutes later, making some remark about being in the wrong pew, he took his leave.

The opinion seems to be generally held that Samuel G. Iverson is going to be a very lucky man, up to that date, if he succeeds in landing the Republican nomination for state auditor. Republicans who were willing to talk about the situation in St. Paul yesterday, seemed to think that, no matter what may be the outcome of the fight between Iverson and Thompson in Fillmore county, where both are hopeful of landing the home county delegation, the result cannot but be hurtful to the chances of the Republican nominee. If Iverson gets it, there is said to be a fair chance for him to be nominated but if Thompson gets it and Wells of Breckenridge butts into the game at the last minute to stir things up, the bitterness of the conflict that will be entailed, will serve merely to make it more probable that the Democratic nominee may win in November.

Reapportionment, a square deal in the senate for county option, agricultural schools, downward revision of freight rates applying to small towns and villages and more equitable tax rates, with justice to the small property owner, are planks in the platform on which Samuel Y. Gordon of Brown's Valley, who is in Duluth, is appealing for support in his candidacy for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor.

After holding conferences at St. Paul with politicians, Mr. Gordon came to Duluth to look over the ground locally. He is satisfied with what he learned in St. Paul and says that the outlook is entirely favorable to him.

The Traverse county Gordon club of Wheaton is taking the lead in pushing Mr. Gordon forward. The candidate says that he has entered the race as the result of the action of country papers in his district in urging him to try for the place.

MARINE NEWS

CHARGES GO INTO EFFECT

Storage Rates Will Apply to Goods Held in Warehouses.

Immediate Movement of Package Freight Expected in Consequence.

With the going into effect tonight at midnight of the marine insurance, charges for storage in the dock warehouses will also become operative.

All winter package freight has been stored at the dock warehouses free of charge. After today there will be a mixmum charge of 40 cents per ton per month. This will mean that there will be an immediate movement in package freight.

The Great Northern warehouse at Superior has a large consignment of freight which will move from the Head of the Lakes within a few days. The Soo warehouse on this side of the bay is filled with package freight, as is the Northern Pacific warehouse.

The going into effect of charges for storage means that this freight will begin to move.

Railroads here report that there is a heavy westbound business in sight, which means that a large amount of package freight is coming from the lower lake ports.

The present season promises the biggest lake and rail freight movement in the history of the Duluth harbor, according to present indications.

TROY IS FIRST BIG BOAT IN

Arrives in Harbor a Few Hours After Lumber Barge Bacon.

The steamer Troy of the Western Transportation company, with Capt. Thomas Slattery in command, reached the Duluth harbor at 5:51 yesterday afternoon, being the first of the big boats to reach here the present season.

The lumber barge M. E. Bacon beat the Troy to the Head of the Lakes, but the Western Transportation company boat inaugurates the season for the big freighters.

The Troy came from Buffalo, which port she left Monday, after breaking out of the ice bound harbor. The boat is loaded with merchandise.

Singularly enough the Troy was the first boat to reach Duluth last season. She arrived from the lower lakes April 28, 1909, just two weeks later than this year; after a very hard trip, as the Soo at that time was ice blocked.

There was nothing exciting about the trip up the lakes of the Troy the present season. After leaving Buffalo the boat encountered no ice or any obstacles of any kind.

MAY RESUME RELATIONS

Exchange of Credit Information With Twin Cities May Be Re-established.

Officers of National Association Guests of Duluth-Superior Credit Men.

President F. H. McAdow of the National Credit Men's association, who is credit manager of the Staver Carriage company of Chicago, and F. R. Salisbury of Salisbury & Sattlerlee of Minneapolis, national director of the association for Minnesota, were guests of honor at a banquet at the Duluth Commercial club last evening. The occasion was the postponed regular meeting of the Duluta-Superior Credit Men's association which had been postponed until last night because of the visit to be paid the city by Messrs. McAdow and Salisbury. At the banquet tables were 125 Head of the Lakes credit men and invited guests, including the executive officials of a number of the leading Duluth commercial concerns. The banquet began at 6 o'clock.

The subject of the principal discussion of the evening was a report of the committee of the local organization which recently visited the Twin Cities to make inquiries concerning a possible resumption of the exchange of credit information between the two bureaus. This service was discontinued ninety days ago because of the inability of the Duluth and Twin City associations to arrive at a satisfactory agreement on the question of cost of the service. At the conclusion of the discussion it was decided to form an arbitration committee to reconcile the existing differences. Two members of the Duluth association, one from St. Paul and one from Minneapolis will serve on this committee, which will select a fifth member, who is to be either an official of the national organization or an expert in the employ of Dun or Bradstreets. This exchange of credit news service is of vital importance. The members of both the Duluth and Twin City associations need the information formerly distributed by this means for their mutual benefit.

President McAdow's Address.

President McAdow's address was devoted largely to national association work. He made a strong talk and emphasized the necessity for increased membership, and co-operation between the members of the local organiations. He told of the great field that is open to the national association, recounted the excellent results that have been already achieved and told of what it is hoped to accomplish in the future.

The national president extended to the Duluth credit men a cordial invitation to join the members of the Chicago association on the special train on which they will travel to the national convention, which will be held at New Orleans in May.

In the course of his address, Mr. McAdow told of the auto tour he had made of the city during the afternoon, and commented glowingly upon the marvelous development of Duluth. He said that the location of Duluth was especially fortunate, the fact that it is built on the hillsides being a decidedly favorable contrast to the topography of Chicago, as the monotony of the plains was not present here. He spoke in highest praise of the personnel and management of the Duluth association and made an appreciative reference to the cordiality and warmth of his reception and entertainment here.

Mr. Salisbury was the only other speaker of the evening, and he took occasion to indorse all that Mr. McAdow had said. His talk had to do mostly with the work of the local associations in the Northiwest.

W. B. Cross, treasurer and credit manager of F. A. Patrick & Co., who has been president of the local association for four years, presided at the banquet. It was due to his instrumentality that Mr. McAdow and Mr. Salisbury were induced to visit Duluth at this time. It had not been their intention to come here, but Mr. Cross prevailed upon them to do so for the purpose of addressing the local credit men.

Flaaten's orchestra supplied the music for the banquet.

Mr. McAdow and Mr. Salisbury left Duluth for St. Paul on the late evening train.

Hotel Kranz. Owing to the early hour the streets were almost deserted, and although the driver and footman wore the imperial livery, the passing of the party attracted no attention.

Received Several Americans.

After breakfast with Henry White, formerly American ambassador to France, who came from Silesia especially to meet him, Mr. Roosevelt received several Americans who had awaited him at the hotel and then drove in the court carriage to the foreign office on the Ball-Platz and made an official call upon Count von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister. Returning to his hotel, Mr. Roosevelt received a call from Baron Hengelmuller. The baron remained for lunch, Mr. Kerens and Mr. White being also in the party.

At 2 oclock this afternoon Mr. Roosevelt again entered the court carriage and drove to the Hofburg palace, where he was received in audience by Emperor Francis Joseph. As a special mark of esteem the emperor received his guest in his private apartments instead of in the usual audience chamber. As Mr. Roosevelt entered the courtyard the palace guard turned out and rendered him military honors.

Visited Capuchin Church.

From the palace Mr. Roosevelt visited the Capuchin church, in the vaults of which rest the bodies of the Hapsburgs. There he placed wreaths upon the tombs of the ill-fated Empress Elizabeth and the Crown Prince Rudolph. As Mr. Roosevelt entered the crypt of the Hapsburgs the Capuchin monks who watch the tombs conducted him straight to the wrought iron coffins of Elizabeth and Rudolph, which lie on either side of the bent statue of the Madonna presented by the Hungarian people.

After the wreaths had been deposited the former president was shown the other tombs, among which is the immense sarcophagus containing the bodies of Marie Theresa and her husband, Francis I, and the plain casket of Emperor Maximilian of Mexico.

From the church Mr. Roosevelt set out on a round of official calls.

Saw Review of Hussars.

Later in the afternoon Mr. Roosevelt visited the military riding school and also witnessed a review of the regiment of Hussars commanded by Prince Bronn, at Bretten-see.

At 8 o'clock tonight the officials of the foreign office will give a dinner at which Mr. Roosevelt will be the guest of honor.

A crowd of several hundred persons remained in front of the Hotel Kranz throughout the day and displayed the keenest interest in Mr. Roosevelt's comings and goings. At each appearance of the American these persons raised their hats respectfully, but made no other manifestation.

"Will Stump in New York."

New York, April 15.—Theodore Roosevelt will take the stump next fall in behalf of the Republican candidate for governor, according to a statement published this morning in the World and credited to Mr. Roosevelt's friends. No former president has ever taken the stump in a state campaign. His friends say he will make at least four speeches and that the strongest efforts will be put forth to prevent the state from falling into the Democratic column.

fine weather that has prevailed for the past month or so. The early spring has thoroughly dried out the ground and caused vegetation to sprout earlier than usual. The rain will bring out the buds, cause the grass to shoot more rapidly and be a boon to the farmers and gardeners all through the district in which it falls.

The rain is general throughout the lake region, the Red river valley and the entire Northwest. It has been eagerly awaited by the farmers, who will now be able to take advantage of the early spring to secure bountiful early crops.

In the city, the rain will wash things down generally and remove the dust and dirt that has settled down after the winter. The Lakeside and Woodland garden enthusiast will be able to get out his seeds, place them in the warm damp earth and wait for the wonders that will astonish visitors to the Commercial club next fall.

Will Check Forest Fires.

Fishermen are not entirely pleased for the woods will be wet for the first expeditions of the season tomorrow. The exodus to the streams will be almost as great as it would be in fine weather, however, for the confirmed fisherman does not mind a little rain when he is engaged in his favorite sport.

On account of the dry condition of the woods, forest fires have been springing up apparently out of nothing and unless they are checked their possibilities for damages are almost unlimited.

People coming into Duluth from the Twin Cities say that the fires around Spooner were exceedingly dangerous yesterday. The fires were creeping along in the brush, invading the blueberry patches and burning the plants down to the roots. The continuation of the fires would result in great damage to the blueberry crop, but the rain will probably extinguish them entirely if it continues during the day.

Anchor Line boats, the Delaware and the Muncy are loaded with package freight and may get away tonight.

These boats, however, have been delayed in getting their coal and may not leave the Duluth harbor until some time tomorrow.

The Mutual line has four boats here loaded with flour, but the officials of the Duluth office are unable to state with any degree of certainty whether these boats will get away with the gong. The chances are that some of the Mutual boats will get away between midnight and tomorrow morning.

The big opening, or the grand opening, as it is called, is a surprise to many vesselmen, who had not looked for the clearing of so many boats.

There are a great many of the Pittsburg boats that have either left lower lake ports for Duluth or will leave some time today. There are other boats which cannot leave until the marine insurance goes into effect. The Pittsburg boats carry their own insurance.

cussed by Mary Ware Dennett of Massachusetts and several others.

Report on Campaigns.

When Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw called the convention to order, reports were read from South Dakota, Oregon, Washington and Oklahoma, in which states the association has campaigns pending.

The convention paused in the transaction of business today to pay tribute through eloquent addresses to the memory of Henry B. Blackwell and William Lloyd Garrison, Jr.

The rest of the day was largely devoted to the reading of reports of committee and officers.

Suffrage literature in the book stores, on the news stands and every other place where other literature is found, is one of the plans of the National propaganda, according to the report of Mary Gray Peck, headquarters secretary. During the last year more than a half million leaflets and booklets have carried the doctrine of woman suffrage far and wide through the machinery of the national headquarters, the secretary reported. Miss Peck declared it had been found that the circulation of suffragist literature had increased since the free distribution had been stopped.

Danger of Votes For Women.

President Taft, in his speech welcoming the delegates to Washington to the convention of the Nation American Woman Suffrage association, said he thought one of the dangers in granting suffrage to women was that the women as a whole were not interested in it and that the power of the ballot, as far as woman is concerned, would be controlled by the "less desirable class."

When these words fell from the president's lips the walls of the convention hall echoed a chorus of feminine hisses. It was no feeble demonstration of protest. The combined hisses sounded as if a valve on a steam engine had burst.

President Taft stood unmoved on the platform during the demonstration of hostility—for the hissing continued but a moment—and then, smiling as he spoke, he answered the unfavorable greeting with this retort:

"Now my dear ladies, you must show yourselves capable of suffrage by exercising that degree of restraint which is necessary in the conduct of government affairs by not hissing."

Rebuke Took Hold.

The women who had hissed were rebuked. The president's reply apparently had taken hold. There were no more hisses while the president continued his address, which he characterized as "my confession on the woman suffrage question." At the conclusion of his talk he was enthusiastically applauded and some of the leaders of the convention expressed to him their sincere regret over the unpleasant incident. President Taft assured them that he had not had his feelings injured in the least.

After being introduced to the convention, President Taft explained that he anticipated some difficulty in addressing an audience with whose views he was at variance. He told of being an ardent suffragist himself when a boy, and said that his high school graduation oration was a plea for women suffrage.

"So at that time I was orthodox," he said, accenting "at that time."

Modified Earlier Views.

"But," he continued, "in the actual experience which I have had, I have modified my view somewhat. In the first place, the proper Republican government we approve and support because, on the whole, every intelligent class—that is, every set of individuals similarly situated in a community intelligent enough to know what their aims are—is better qualified to determine how those interests shall be carried forward and preserved than any other class, however altruistic.

"But I call attention to two qualifications in that statement. The first is that the class must be intelligent enough to know their own interests. The theory that the Hottentot or any uneducated class is fitted for self-government I wholly dissent from. But that is not applicable to this situation tonight."

This utterance injected into the concourse of feminine delegates a feeling of good natufe, soon to be dispelled. They laughed heartily.

What Caused the Trouble.

"But there is another qualification, which is that the class which has suffrage should care enough for their interests to take part in the exercise of political power, if conferred upon them. If they do not, then it seems to me the danger is, if the power of suffrage is granted, it will be exercised by the part of the class which is less desirable."

That was the signal of the president's distress and his hearers' upheaval of spirit. The leaders of the convention who sat on the platform surrounding the president blushed as the hisses burst from their comrades' lips. Those in the audience who did not hiss frantically endeavored to restrain their sisters who were hissing, when the president took the situation in his own hands, and told the ladies what he thought of their action. He did not speak at all angrily, and immediately proceeded.

When the president had concluded, he shook hands with Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the association, and other leaders. He then left, accompanied by his military aide, Capt. Archibald Butt. The delegates rose as the president was escorted from the hall. At the conclusion of the session many of the delegates expressed themselves as humiliated over the hissing incident.

Spent Over $10,814.50.

Harriet Taylor Upton, treasurer of the national association, presented her report showing the total receipts of the year 1909 to have been $21,466.08. The disbursements were $19,814.50.

During the year the association spent about $6,000 on organization and sent to South Dakota alone, where a campaign is now on, $2,600. The treasurer's report in part was as follows:

"Miss Emily Howland of Sherwood, N. Y., was the largest individual contributor during the year. The five divisions having the largest membership are, in their order: New York, Massachusetts, College league, Maryland and Pennsylvania. The five states contributing the largest amounts of money in their order are: New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Louisiana and Ohio.

"The auxiliary associations showing the greatest gain in membership are College league, Maryland, Illinois, Kentucky and Connecticut.

Gains in Minnesota.

"Virginia has organized a promising society during the year and is therefore admitted into the fold.

"States showing gain in membership are: California, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, New York, Rhode Island, Texas, Tennessee, Virginia College league."

Girls' Day—Saturday

(No School Tomorrow)

Girls who desire to outdo their school friends—in the things they wear—had better "be said by" their mammas and see the different styles we have to show them. A bevy of juvenile fashions with splashes of pretty color here and there to add to the enjoyment of the wearer and be the envy and admiration of class mates.

Women who have waited for the new Black and Red Capes—Junior styles, will be pleased to know they are here. From 6 to 14 years with "grownup looking" military collars, trimmed with soutache braid, at $4.50.

New Coats—Specially good at their respective prices. They are smart and exclusive. Some are severely plain—others a bit fancy to suit all kinds of girls. Serges, gun club checks and shepherd checks chiefly in black and white, also light and dark mixtures, as well as immaculate models of white serge from $2.75 to $24.50 for the girl of 2 and all other sisters up to 18 years of age.

We devote as much care and pains to Junior Suits as to women's garments. Junior wants are today a "leading issue' with the garment section. We are especially proud of the girlish Elsie Janis suit for lassies around 16 at $29.50.

Dresses too numerous to mention. From the chambray dresses at $1.00 to the check and gingham dresses at $3.50 and up. There is every imaginable wash dress that is correct for romping girls and their more staid sisters.

At $2.00 for instance there are pink and blue dresses—in one-piece with quaint little Dutch necks and kilted flounce.

Post Easter Suits

Styles are individual and exclusive. It is because of the absolute confidence of genteel women in the correctness of S. & B. Co. suits that more women are wearing them. Regular patrons return as regularly as the seasons—bringing their friends. This is the way the S. & B. Co. garment business has grown with the advancing years until today the ultra tailoring and service of this outfitting store is the rendezvous of the "inner social circle" of Duluth women.

Suits at $35.00—Tans, light grays, lavender, rose, blacks and blues. The tailoring is remarkable for its perfect lines. Coats are 34 inches and are lined with well-wearing massaline silk. Happy touches of braid add to the chic appearance of these unusual $35.00 suits. Skirts are both tunic and kilted styles.

P. S.—We wish to say that we are able to tag our $25.00 suits with the S. & B. Co. label because they are the equal of other lines sold round about Duluth at $35.00. Materials are good and the tailoring is well done.

Stout Suits are an innovation this season and are warmly welcomed by women unable to be fitted out of regular stocks. They are from a maker, who turns out nothing but these out-of-the-ordinary suits—that have larger and fuller fronts, more hip room and are shorter waisted in front. Coats are longer and bust measures run up to 49.

Suits at $29.50—Of superior quality serge—flap pockets cuffs on sleeves, with pleated skirt. Coats—full satin lined. Colors are black and blues.

Other "extra size suits" at $35.00 and $42.50 and up. This Special Suit Service can be had at Silberstein's—alone for Duluth.

The Dress Question

can be solved in all its various styles readily and satisfactory here tomorrow.

Silk Dresses at $19.50—In tan, blue, rose, rajahs with net yoke and collar. At this popular price there are Black and White Checkt Taffetas piped in black and distinguisht Foulard Dresses at $19.50

Also Taffeta Dresses—Soutache braided bodice and skirt with tunic plus pleated flounce.

Many more with exquisite trimming details in over-drape effects at higher prices.

A tourist chanced in here last week, after making the rounds of the other stores, on a suit-quest. Had always been accustomed to tailored-to-order suits and said so. Her skepticism was changed to ripples of pleasure at the fit of a grey

Custom-Made S. & B. Co. Suit. She frankly stated to the department head, she coudn't get its equal this side of New York. Her enthusiasm was justified as she couldn't get better—even in New York.

Of course it is needless to state, you can't get these suits anywhere else in Duluth.

"Different" Untrimmed Shapes at Popular Prices.

Millinery de Luxe

We specialize particularly Hand-made Hats—builded under the knowing eyes of our designers by the deft and nimble fingers of our own millinery staff. You will find a distinct relation between them and the picture hats that were brought over from Paris for inspiration, whether the price be $10.00 or $50.00. A peep at the many tables-ful of 'just-made Hats," in our Hat department, where there are groups "of a color" will show you a bewildering gallery of millinery art.

The distinctive styles of this store cannot fail to enthrall "your sense of the beautiful," as they have already captivated hundreds of other Duluth women.

Thoro-Bred Coats

That is is essentially a Coat Season is evidenced every day by the unusual commotion in the coat ranks. Visitors may see at almost any time, some half dozen women selecting the style they like best. S. & B. Co. Fashions enjoy enviable popularity with carefully groomed women.

THESE BLACK and WHITE CHECKT COATS AT $21.50—are seldom mentioned, because, no sooner do they find their way into the cases than some fair motor enthusiast falls in love with them, and they disappear.

AT $29.50—there are some finely tailored black, also blue serge coats. This is the third shipment—arriving in time for Saturday's business.

THE REACTION DID NOT COME

Coppers Hold Firm After Advance---Little Buying Demand, However.

The copper market had a firm undertone today and most issues scored fractional advances or closed on a level with yesterday. Traders had expected a reaction after the recent advance but the slump failed to materialize. There was no inclination to sell. The buying power was small, however, and stocks did little else than to mark time.

The metal market is stronger on short covering in London and the advance in price of lake to 13¾ has led to the withdrawal of offers on electrolytic at under 13 cents a pound which is an advance of ¼ cent. It is estimated that between 20,000,000 and 30,000,000 pounds of copper were sold at between 12¾ and 13 cents this week.

The local market was moderately active. Trading was dull in the East. Butte Ballaklava sold at $9.37½; Red Warrior at $12.12½; Shattuck at $26.50; Warrior at $12.25 to $12.37½; Butte & Superior at $2.25; Calumet & Corbin at 84, 86 and 85 cents; Calumet & Sonora at $20.37½; Carman at $1 to 95 cents; Keating at $1.50; Rawhide at 4 cents, and St. Mary's at 20 cents.

Amalgamated sold at $76 to $75.75, up to $76.12½ to $75.62½ and back to $76.12½. Butte Coalition sold at $22.12½ to $22.62½ and down to $22.50; Giroux at $9 to $8.62½ to $8.50; Greene at $9 to $10 and down to $9.87½; Superior & Pittsburg at $13.50; Calumet & Arizona at $66 up to $66.50; North Butte at $40.12½ to $39.25 to $40.25, down to $39.50 and up to $40.25; Steel common sold at $87.62½ to $88 to $87.25 and up to $87.50.

An official of the North Butte Mining company wired the Boston News Bureau today: "The North Butte has no information relative to rumored strike by drill in the Edith May. We have, however, just struck 140 feet of 5 per cent ore on the 700-foot level in new and undeveloped ground on the east end of the Jessie claim."

Chanticleer Ties!

"'Chanticleer'—a cock, so called from the clearness or loudness of his voice in crowing." —Webster.

The rooster has attained great fame in fashion circles, since the world went crazy over Rostand's great barnyard drama.

The latest is his appearance on neckties.

The ones we've just received are fine black silk ties with a red "chanticleer" embroidered on the broad end.

PIERCE ON STAND AGAIN

Ballinger's First Assistant Resumes Testimony in the Hearing.

Brandeis Once More Criticises Department ef the Interior.

Washington, April 15.—Frank Pierce, first assistant secretary of the interior, who began his service under Secretary Garfield and was continued in office by Secretary Ballinger, was the witness before the Ballinger-Pinchot committee of inquiry when its sessions were resumed today. Mr. Pierce took the stand late last Saturday afternoon, and after detailing at some length the multitudinous duties of the secretary of the interior, he declared that Mr. Ballinger, soon after taking office, turned over to him everything in connection with the Cunningham coal claims. Just as adjournment was taken last Saturday, Mr. Pierce testified that Mr. Ballinger had not at any time attempted to interfere with his direction of the case or to influence his action.

Brandeis Complains.

Before Mr. Pierce resumed the stand, Attorney Brandeis made a lengthy statement to the committee in which he charged that the interior department had failed to furnish certain correspondence called for by him in a letter to the committee dated Jan. 27. Mr. Brandeis said the correspondence desired related to the statement of Attorney General Wickersham that Glavis had been guilty of habitual procrastination in failing to institute suits against claimants of Alaskan lands. He said he expected to show by this correspondence that Glavis had not been negligent in this matter.

Chairman Nelson told Mr. Brandeis to write a letter enumerating the papers needed and he would see that they were forthcoming from the department. Mr. Brandeis said all he could do would be to repeat his request of Jan. 27.

Vertrees Denies Charges.

Attorney Vertrees said he resented the imputation of opposing counsel that papers had been withheld by the department.

"That is not true; there is not a word of truth in it," said Mr. Vertrees heatedly.

The committee then adopted a motion that the department be asked to produce the correspondence demanded by Mr. Brandeis, and Mr. Pierce resumed his testimony.

Mr. Pierce denied that he had told ex-Governor Moore, one of the Cunningham claimants, that he could have his patents without an examination under the new law of May 28, 1908.

He said Land Commissioner Dennett had construed the law differently and had told Moore he could have his patents without a hearing.

During the winter of 1907, Mr. Pierce said, the Cunningham claimants had maintained a strong lobby in Washington and had exerted powerful influences on Secretary Garfield and congress to secure their patents.

Intends Thorough Probe.

"I want to say right here," exclaimed Mr. Pierce, "that no decision will be announced in these Cunningham claims until every one of the twenty-five lawyers in my department has made an exhaustive examination of the record. Then, when this is done, I shall send the record to the department of justice and ask for similar careful attention at the hands of the large force of lawyers there."

"Is this extraordinary care which you propose to give to these cases due to the magnitude of the claims or to the publicity which they have attracted?" asked Mr. James.

"Both," retorted the witness.

At this juncture the luncheon recess was taken.

TAG DAY FOR HOSPITAL

Effort Will Be Made to Raise Funds for Addition.

Every Citizen in Duluth Will Be Tagged May 3.

St. Mary's hospital will be the beneficiary for a tag day to be held in Duluth Tuesday, May 3, by the Sisters of St. Benedict.

It is proposed to build an addition to St. Mary's hospital, which will occupy the ground west of the present site. The new addition will have a frontage on Third street of seventy-two feet and will be five stories in height. The land just west of the hospital is owned by the Sisters and the buildings now there will be removed.

The tag day is in charge of Miss Elizabeth K. Ries, who will be assisted by Miss Lillian Gowan. The city will be divided up into districts and women in the various parts of the city will be appointed lieutenants with as many assistants as they desire.

St. Mary's hospital has done much for charity work during its existance in the city and will continue to do it. This tag day will be the first appeal to the general public for funds for this institution.

Any women who wishes to help in the work of the tag day for St. Mary's hospital is requested to telephone her name to the Sister Superior at the hospital.

LOOKS OVER RIVER WORK.

Man in Charge of River and Harbor Work Is Inspecting.

Crookston, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Maj. Schmunk, in charge of river and harbor improvements in Minnesota, is spending a few days at Warroad, in the harbor of which $7,700 will be expended this year, that being the last rider tacked on the river and harbor bill which will be passed at this session of congress. After looking over the ground here where close to $175,000 has already been expended, he will proceed to East Grand Forks, where the regular annual appropriation of $7,500 will be spent this year in improving the Red River of the North from Belmont north to the Canadian line, by which hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain is hauled to Grand Forks in barges every year.

Maj. Schmunk states that the opening of the Thief river and the Red Lake river to navigation for larger boats is perfectly feasible and can be effected at a very small cost, but that none of that work will be attempted this year, or until there is a special appropriation made for that purpose.

FAITHFUL DOG ALSO DROWNS IN RIVER

Animal Befriended By Man Drowned in Red River Followed Him to Death.

Fargo, N. D., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—True to his new found friend after death and even to his own death, a homeless cur is a kind of a canine hero in Fargo and Moorhead since the finding of the body of Ed Stern and the dog in the river yesterday.

Stern came to Moorhead from Stutsman county, N. D., for a celebration and for several days was around the Moorhead saloons. Being fond of animals he petted an ownerless canine and fed the animal. The dog immediately adopted Stern and followed him like a shadow.

After Stern's mysterious disappearance early in January, those who had noticed the remarkable devotion of the dog to the man, saw the dog watching a hole in the ice over the Ree river for several days. The dog then disappeared.

When Stern's body was found in the river five miles below the city, the body of the dog was seen in some brush only a few rods away.

Whether the dog committeed suicide for grief for, its master by jumping into the river through the same hole that the murderers of Stern had thrown their victim, or whether the dog had fallen in will never be known.

The unusual devotion of the dog for a comparative stranger has caused a lot of comment.

MONEY FOR RED LAKES.

Indians Will Receive About $51,000 From Uncle Sam.

Bemidji, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The members of the Red Lake band of Indians will receive, in a few days, over $51,000 from the Indian department.

As there are 1,375 persons who draw annuities as members of the Red Lake band, the payment per capita will be about $37 for every man, woman and child.

W. H. Bishop, in charge of the Red Lake agency, while here Tuesday, stated that the money for paying the Indians would be deposited in the First National bank at St. Paul most any day now, and checks would be drawn on the bank in favor of each annuitant and sent to him for distribution to the Indians.

AFTER SLICE OF CUSTOMS.

Milwaukee Collector Wants La Crosse and Superior Ports.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 15.—Customs Collector W. H. Devos has renewed his efforts to get congress to rearrange the Milwaukee customs district so it will include that portion of the Mississippi river which forms the Wisconsin boundary of the state and that portion of Lake Superior which forms the northern boundary.

Thus two ports of importance would be transferred to the Milwaukee district, Superior and La Crosse. Superior is now in the Marquette district and La Crosse is in the New Orleans district.

Since the lumber business petered out La Crosse has lost most of its importance as a port, but Superior is growing in importance every day, due largely to the great ore traffic on Lake Superior.

The New Orleans district runs all the way up the Mississippi river. The Marquette district takes in only the upper peninsula of Michigan and a strip of Northern Wisconsin, in which Superior is located.

Mr. Devos would wipe out the Marquette district altogether, throwing the whole of it into the Milwaukee district, or cutting it in two and giving the eastern half to the Grand Rapids, Mich., district and the western half, or that part which is in Wisconsin, to the Milwaukee district.

The imports at Superior do not run high, but the exports do. As there is a duty of approximately 25 per cent it would mean the swelling of duty collections by about $15,000 for this district. The exports amounted to $4,636,000.

The port of Superior last year recorded clearances amounting to $76,631,051 and the arrivals at that port totaled $27,128,537 in value.

You will never get disappointed if the Gopher does your shoe repairing.

MILLIONS IN SAWMILL DEAL.

Canadian Company Said to Have Bought Frozen River Holdings.

Ottawa, Ont., April 15.—It is stated here that the Canadian Western Lumber company, recently incorporated here, has bought the Frazee River company's mills at New Westminster, B. C., said to be the largest in the world. The deal is said to involve between $17,000,000 and $20,000,000. M. D. Mellas of Vancouver intimated that the purchasers are Canadians, but would not give their names. It is understoon one is D. D. Mann of the Canadian Northern railway.

WILL ENTERTAIN MICHIGAN FACULTY.

The directors of the Duluth Alumni association of the University of Michigan met yesterday to outline plans for the entertainment of the members of the faculty who are touring the Northwest. They will visit Duluth April 26. The visitors will be met at the train and taken to the Commercial club for lunch. In the afternoon it is expected that they will be shown the city in automobiles and in the evening it is planned to have a large banquet in their honor. The plans are subject to change later.

Acquire Bemidji Building.

Bemidji, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—M. O. Madson of Mentor and C. E. Odegaard of Aberdeen, S. D., have purchased the building adjoining the O'Leary-Bowser block, known as the old Northern Bank building, and will use it as a mercantile establishment.

Messrs. Madson and Odegaar have let a contract to Thomas Johnson of this city to remodel the entire building.

And they all have their shoe repairing done at the Gopher.

Footwear That's Correct

In these days of high price beef and leather, careful discrimination is necessary to get good footwear. Irresponsible manufacturers are placing inferior leathers on the market "doped" up to look like good shoes.

Our purchases are confined to manufacturers with a reputation of many years standing—makers who would rather "close-up shop" than to make dishonest shoes. They are priced no higher than "common" footwear and there's style, fit and wear to them, that lasts not for a short time, but through weeks of most satisfactory wear.

Strict accordance to anatomical construction must be adhered to—to provide comfort for their tender feet. You will find it here in two and three-strap oxfords of patent leather, gun metal and vici kid, tan and suede, the pair $1.00 to $3.50.

TRAINS MAY HAVE WINGS.

They Could Make 150 Miles an Hour Thinks Englishman.

London, April 15.—Should J. Sutherland Warner, a prominent English railway expert, see his ideas practically realized, there will be no denying that we are living in a fast age. He is authority for the assertion that a speed of 150 miles an hour by railway trains is technically possible today, and will be commercially feasible within the next ten years, so long as the railway serves great centers of population yielding a large amount of traffic.

"The motive power, of course, would have to be electricity," said Mr. Warner. "Naturally, too, the high horsepower required for the attainment of such speed would necessitate motors of enormous size and weight. In order to carry such tremendous weight safely it would probably be necessary to use three, if not four, rails.

"The great problem, however, would be how to deal with the resistance of the air. There are three methods by which this could be met. One of these would be to construct the train cigar-shaped, with the sides of the carriages oiled or varnished so as to make them as smooth as possible.

"Another way would be to reduce the friction on the track by fitting wings, or lifting planes, all around the train, the object being to utilize the resistance of the atmosphere to lift the weight from the tracks and thereby reduce the track resistance.

"The third method would be not to run the train through the air at all. This could only be done by running it in a tube from which the air had been exhausted in advance of the speeding train by powerful pumps."

OPENED FOR THE SEASON

Coney Island Expected to Attract Big Crowds This Year.

People of Gotham's Poorer Quarters Mourning "Battery Dan" Finn.

New York, April 15.—With millions of dollars invested through the thousand acres of its famous seashore stretch, Coney Island has opened its gates for the season of 1910. Already some 100,000 frost-bitten mortals have voyaged over the great pleasure park to sniff the sea air that will soon attract sweltering multitudes from the city. Preparing for the biggest shore season in all the history of the island, the amusement men who seek pay dirt on these sands declare that loose change could never be garnered from the pleasure-bound populace more easily than it can now. Work and wages are plentiful in this opening of the summer season, they argue as they prepare to work the wage earner. With the Coney Island crowds beginning to ebb and flow seaward Gotham has just begun to think of vacation time.

Guard Girlhood.

Roused by the pitiful fate of Ruth Wheeler, the victim of hideous murder while in search of work, New Yorkers are today demanding drastic reform in conditions that compel young girls to seek employment in utterly unknown quarters. While all the forces of the law are trying to convict the man accused of the attack upon this girl of 15, an investigation is being made of the system that allowed her to be summoned to her doom. Before this sad story has been altogether forgotten here, it is intended to provide by law for the responsibility of all persons sending to any agency for a girl worker. Through the competition that drives stenographers and shop girls to search blindly for any position, the ruin of too many girls has already been compassed in this metropolis, it is believed.

Birds and Bonnets.

While Chantecler hats today adorn the majority of women paraders of Fifth avenue and the Bowery boulevards alike, careful census of the spring crop of millinery here still shows aigrettes and the pelts of butchered wild birds displayed by the minority. Though nine out of ten of the mothers and sisters of this town have learned that mother birds are massacred among their young for the aigrettes and valuable insect-eating birds shot off the farmers' fields to provide such plumage, the milliners still seem to be able to induce a few women to give moral countenance to these barbarous practices by wearing the trophies of such plunder. While a few feather dealers from Broadway are today fighting at Albany the Shea bill, that calls for a halt in this indiscriminate pillage of nature's bird resources, few women have been found by them in all this town to support their selfish interests. Even careless Gotham is with the Audumon workers in this struggle against monied interests.

Finn's Fate.

While the flowers are still fresh over the grave of "Battery Dan" Finn, the people of the poorer quarters are today mourning the loss of the last representative of their kind upon the police court bench. Of all the men who filled the seats behind this bar of rough and ready justice "Battery Dan" was the sole survivor of the type that was bred in the tenements. With his death the force of magistrates remains composed altogether of men to whom the troubles of the poor are a study and not an experience. Dan Finn knew and felt to the depths of his warm Irish heart the plea of the poor before his bench, and with unerring instinct he sorted the fake from the true in their tales. Ere lawyers may fill the seat that "Battery Dan" adorned, but never can its simple human functions be performed by them as they were by him.

Circus Comes.

With the smell of sawdust and the crackle of peanuts pervading Madison Square Garden, all Gotham is today alive to the fact that spring and the circus have trooped to town, hand in hand. Headed by Dexter Fellows and a brand new baby giraffe, the perennial show is drawing all New Yorkers who know the touch of youth inside the Madison Square Garden. No better way to be boys and girls again is known to the people of this city than taking a trip to the tentless haunts of the circus while it stops here.

HORSEBACK TRIP.

From Chicago to Virginia Made By Sixty-Year-Old Man.

Big Stone Gap, Va., April 15.—W. C. Hatterman, retired marchant, and his son, Arthur, have arrived here from Chicago, having traveled a distance of over 600 miles on horseback in seventeen days. Hatterman, although about 60 years old, says he did not become fatigued and had much pleasure from the trip.

After two weeks' rest they will go through the mountains via Harlan C. H. to Cincinnati. Mrs. Hatterman and daughter met the party here, arriving by train.

WOMEN OF HAREM DESERTED HAMID

Were Called Upon to Swallow Nauseous Drugs and Potions.

London, April 15.—Abdul Hamid, former sultan of Turkey, has of late been the subject of many reports, one of them being to the effect that he had been deserted by his harem. According to La Turquie, he was in such fear of being poisoned that all food or drink which he took had previously to be tasted by some member of his entourage. Recently he decided to make similar regulations with regard to the physic prescribed for him by his medical attendants.

The result was that the women of the harem were called upon to swallow nauseous drugs and potions, a regimen which soon told upon their health. In order to save themselves further experiences of the kind, they decided to desert the former Commander of the Faithful, which they did at the dead of night, so as to "avoid painful parting scenes with the prisoner."

From an incident at Frankfort-on-Main it would appear that after the dispersal of the harem, some of the women were fascinated by the footlights of the vaudeville stage. The chief attraction at a Frankfort music hall has been eight "genuine odalisques from Abdul Hamid's harem," who appeared under the charge of two eunachs.

A member of the audience learned that one of the women spoke German with a Berlin accent. He complained to the police, who proceeded to investigate the supposed fraud. The Turkish consul being called, declared that the passports proved that seven of the members of the troupe were actually women of the harem. The eighth alleged odalisque, who hailed from Berlin, fell on her knees and implored the consul's protection, declaring that she had been kidnaped by the two Turks in charge of the troupe. The police released the girl and are now making inquiries to ascertain how she fell into the hands of the Turks.

WROTE A POEM.

And an Ohio Workhouse Prisoner Will Be Released.

Steubenville, Ohio, April 15.—Because he penned a poem of seven verses entitled, "The Convict's Dream," telling in a sentimental way of his childhood, Harry Shaeffer, a canton workhouse prisoner, was recommended by prison officials for parole and remittance of time for fine, and local officials will accede to it. His record at the works has been good. He was sent up for larceny from this city. His real name he refuses to give, but he comes of a prominent family in Pennsylvania.

HORSE FASTS FOR 51 DAYS.

Animal Fell Into Deserted Well and Will Recover.

Ell, Neb., April 15.—The question of how long a horse can live without food or water has been solved, to a certain extent, by a 2-year-old colt, the property of George Hamilton, a rancher a mile south of here. Hamilton owns 500 horses and colts. On Jan. 25 he discovered he was ten animals short. The missing animals, with one exception, were found.

Inquiries were made of all of the ranchers within a radius of ten miles, but none of them had seen a stray horse. The animal was given up for lost until St. Patrick's day, when it was found alive, but considerably the worse for a fast of at least fifty-one days.

On the Hamilton ranch there are a number of wells ranging in depth from twenty-five to fifty feet. Those in which there is water are protected by curbing. A hired man, Tom Ramsay, was riding across the pasture at the extreme west side of the ranch, where he came upon a deserted well. As he passed he heard the faint neigh of a horse. Ten feet below the surface he saw the head of a horse protruding through the snow. The animal is being fed sparingly and is gaining flesh, and will apparently not suffer any inconvenience from its long fast.

KEEPS COTTON 38 YEARS.

Farmer Declared He Would Get Sixteen Cents Pound.

Jackson, Ga., April 15.—"I will get 16 cents for this bale of cotton, or I will never sell it," was the declaration made by T. H. Greer, thirty-eight years ago. He kept his promise and got his price, but it took him thirty-eight years to do it.

Back in 1872 Mr. Greer, a prosperous farmer, ginned a bale of cotton by water power. The war had not been over long at that time and cotton was high—higher than it has been since then, with one exception. The market was 16 cents that season, but as this bale was late in being turned out from the press, the market had slumped and after loading the bale on his wagon Mr. Greer took it to town, only to be refused 16 cents. Whereupon he declared he would never sell it at a less figure. Accordingly he carried the bale back home, where it has since remained until last week.

Tuesday Mr. Greer drove to town and an offer of 16 cents per pound was made and he accepted it. When first ginned, the bale of cotton weighed 505 pounds. Only one time since it was first packed has it been repacked, and that was in 1905, when it was found to be in perfect condition. So far as known, this is the oldest bale of cotton on record.

INDIANS TO GET $133 EACH.

Cherokee Award of Five Millions Will Soon Be Paid.

Washington, April 15.—The 30,827 persons found by Special Commissioner Glon Miller to be entitled to a pro rata share in the $5,000,000 awarded the Cherokee Indians by the United States court of claims will soon receive their money. Mr. Miller has been designated by the court to disburse the money.

The persons entitled to share in the distribution are so widely scattered that the work will require some time. Each individual will receive approximately $133. The attorneys' fees, costs, etc., have eaten up about $900,000 of the $5,000,000 awarded by the court, leaving a balance of $4,100,000 to be distributed among 30,827 individuals.

If Uncle Sam had been a little more prompt some seventy years ago he would have had to pay only $1,000,000 instead of five times that amount.

After the exact amount of Miller's expenses are known, clerks in the treasury department will begin the work of drawing individual checks for every person on the roll. These checks must pass over three or four desks in the department before they will be ready for issue, which will entail some delay. However, delay has been the rule in the settlement of this claim first and last.

Miller will have to visit several Southern states and Oklahoma to make the distribution.

PRIESTS TRANSFERRED.

Bishop Trobec of St. Cloud Diocese Announces Changes.

St. Cloud, Minn., April 15.—Bishop Trobec has announced several transfers in this diocese, some to take effect at once. Father Lenger, formerly of this parish, will go to Wadena to take the place of the late Father Wernich. Father Lenger has been stationed at Kent for some time. Rev. L. Brucker will go to Kent to take Father Lenger's place. Rev. Ignatius Wippich will go to Millerville from Mayhew Lake, and Rev. Brender from Millerville to Buckman. Rev. William Lange, the former pastor at Buckman, will be chaplain of St. Raphael's hospital. Rev. Michael Scherer, assistant at the Cathedral, will be the bishop's secretary in place of Rev. G. B. Bucker, who will go to Mayhew Lake. Rev. Scherer will have charge of Elk River and the reformatory.

Rev. D. Schollenberger, who has been at Effington, taking the place of Rev. Father Raster, who has been ill, will be assistant at the Cathedral. Rev. Raster has now recovered from his sickness and will return to his old place at Effington.

ROOSEVELT MAY COME

To National Conservation Congress If Held in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., April 15.—The National Conservation congress may assemble some time this summer or early fall in St. Paul. If it does, ex-President Roosevelt will deliver his promised address to the delegates here.

This was the statement made by Governor Eberhart when it was learned that his private secretary, Ralph W. Wheelock, is trying to arrange at Washington for the meeting to be held here.

Mr. Wheelock was given the power by Governor Eberhart to make all arrangements possible and secure the congress for Minnesota.

"We want the congress," said Governor Eberhart, "and we shall bend every effort to secure it. It is logical that the state which took the lead in starting a campaign for state conservation of resources should be the first to entertain the national body."

EGG PRICES ARE HIGHER

Buying of Stocks for Storage Purposes Makes Market Firm.

Farmers Selling Their Potatoes to Hinckley Starch Factory.

Although egg receipts were unusually heavy this week the market has absorbed them at higher prices.

Butter holds firm with cheap grades slightly higher. The cheese trade is slightly weaker. Potato values are unchanged. A good volume of business has been transacted in green stuff. Meat prices are slightly higher Lard is weaker.

Eg receipts were larger than for some time. Prices, however, failed to reflect the unusual condition and sought a higher level to 22 cents, and remained at an advance of 1c over the figures of a week ago. Trade is on a steady basis. There were no accumulations on the market and arrivals were well disposed of. Some retailers maintained that the advance was unwarranted but it was noticed that supplies were well cared for even at advanced prices and the wholesalers seemed to know what they were about.

The demand for eggs for speculative purposes is urgent and this is the real reason for the advance. The season of 1909 was disastrous but speculators are said to be buying heavily in the country, in many instances paying from 25 to 30 cents a case more for eggs than is paid here, so eager are they to get supplies. Eggs already in storage are said to have cost speculators from 1½ to 2c a dozen higher than was paid for storage goods a year ago. Speculators last year failed to make money and it will be interesting to see where they will land this year, especially since they have been forced to pay higher prices for their storage goods. The quality of offerings is excellent and this has furnished speculators with an incentive for adding to their holdings in storage.

Fancy creamery butter held firm through the week, with no variation in price. Arrivals increased slightly, but the buying power was well maintained and the trade held an active tone. Not only was the local demand good, but the brisk buying call from the ranges, the Copper country and other nearby places supplemented the retail demand here and supplies were kept well cleaned up.

Dairy butter was unchanged, with a fair demand. The receipts came forward in limited quantities and sold briskly. Packing stock was well bought at higher prices. This was the only grade of butter that advanced. Prices advanced from 20 to 21 cents. The nearness of the grass season and expectations that the make of creamery butter will be increased had little influence with receivers. The consumptive demand was broad and the outlet large. In the face of an expected increase in the movement of butter, the supplies were well disposed of at satisfactory prices.

Slight concessions in fancy Americans were made to stimulate interest in the cheese trade which is pervaded with a pronounced weakness. Foreign makes held firm and were sustained at a steady level. Prices of all makes, however, are at a high level. This condition in the face of favorable indications for a large production of new cheese should have a bearish effect on the market. Receipts are fairly large. While business is comparatively quiet, yet it is more active than at this time last year.

There was no improvement in the potato market. Prices did not decline, neither did they advance. The trade is of moderate volume, and the demand is confined to choice stock. Common sprouted and small offerings were neglected. Fancy potatoes are obtainable at such low figures that there is no incentive for buying common stock. A significant feature of the potato situation can be found at Hinckley, Minn., where there is a starch factory. Usually this factory uses the nubbins and the culls, but this year it is getting choice stock from farmers delivered at the factory for 10 cents a bushel. All over the Northwest there are immense supplies of potatoes, and the market is correspondingly depressed. New potatoes are being received in more plentiful quantities, and are being disposed of at steady prices. Sweet potatoes are slow and weak, and purchasers are buying only in sufficient quantities to meet pressing needs.

Strawberries from Louisiana are meeting with a fairly brisk demand, and are sold at steady prices. There are no Florida strawberries in the market. Quiet and firm prices have been the rule for other fruits. Oranges have sold more freely than any of the other offerings. They were liberal in supply and cleared at steady figures. Cooler weather helped the demand for apples, and they sold more briskly, although prices were unchanged. Pineapples met with a good demand, and there was a fair trade in lemons. The cranberry market was neglected.

The meat market was mixed. Prices generally advanced. Beef sold at 10½@13½c, compared with 9@13c a week ago. Supplies diminished, and receipts were light. Mutton sold today at 16c, compared with 15½@16½c a week ago. Pork loins are unchanged. Veal carcasses have met with a brisk inquiry, and values firmed to 11½@12½c from 10½@12½c a week ago. Warm weather makes the handling of veal hazardous, and sales are affected by commission men as promptly as possible. This feature, therefore, played little part in fixing prices this week, but the demand was sufficiently vigorous to counteract the effect of cool weather. Lard is easier, selling at 15½c, compared with 16c a week ago.

The dressed poultry market is unchanged, except with regard to hens, which are selling at 18½@19½c, compared with 18½c a week ago.

Overloading The Stomach

Causes Incomplete Indigestion, weakens the System, and Breeds Dyspepsia.

Trial Package Free.

Gluttony is as vile a sin as drunkenness, and its evil results are more terrible and far more rapid. The human system turns into the stomach and alimentary canal from 7 to 35 pounds of digestive fluid every twenty-four hours. Cram your stomach with food and you exhaust these juices. If your stomach cannot digest the food because it lacks juices to do with, you should either eat less or make more gastric fluids.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain ingredients one grain of which will digest 3,000 grains of food. With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in your stomach the evil effects of overeating are removed, for these little tablets when dissolved stick to the food and digest all the good from it. They won't abandon the stomach and leave a mass of decaying undigested food to putrify and irritate the mucous membrane lining. They give greater quantities of gastric fluid, help the intestines enrich the blood, prevent constipation, and gluttony, while sinful, may yet be made less harmful by the use of these tablets.

THE TWIN CITIES WILL MAKE BID

For the Next Congress of the Conservation League.

Washington, April 15. — Ralph Wheelock, secretary to Governor Eberhart, will make a bid to have the conservation congress which is to be addressed by Former President Roosevelt held in the Twin Cities. Secretary Shipp of the National Conservation league announced yesterday that the congress this year would be held in some city between Chicago and Denver and Wheelock will put the Twin Cities in nomination for the honor before he leaves Washington.

"In view of the interest taken in the conservation movement in the Northwest, I believe the coming congress could be held at no better point than the Twin Cities," said Wheelock today. "I shall see Mr. Shipp as soon as possible and present an invitation on behalf of Governor Eberhart and the officials of the Twin Cities to hold the congress there.

"I am satisfied that I can assure the officers of the National Conservation league that those who attend the congress will be cared for properly. I suppose that President Taft will be asked to attend when the date and place of meeting has been determined, and it would be a great thing for the cities if we could have the president and the only living former president with us at the same time."

CHARITY THAT BEGINS AFAR.

"I dined with Col. James Hamilton Lewis at the Hotel du Palais in Paris last month," said a Chicagoan. "Col. Lewis had just got back from the Far East. He said China would soon start a crusade against her American and European residents.

"Col. Lewis praised the missionaries in China, but at the same time he thought that missionary work should begin at home. He thought we had enough missionary work in our midst.

"He said two women were talking. One asked the other:

"'Where did you get that pretty dress for the baby? It's most as good as new.'

"'The rich folks on the corner gave it to me,' was the answer.

"'Why,' said the first woman. 'I've asked them for help several times, but they always turned me down cold.'

"'Well, you see,' explained the other, 'I didn't let on it was for myself. I pretended I was collecting cast-off duds for the heathen.'"

LAZY LIVER

"I find Cascarets so good that I would not be without them. I was troubled a great deal with torpid liver and headache. Now since taking Cascarets Candy Cathartic I feel very much better. I shall certainly recommend them to my friends as the best medicine I have ever seen."

IS HELD TO GRAND JURY

Valentine Anich Given Preliminary Hearing in Municipal Court.

Testimony Shows Krznarich Was Abusive Toward the Waitresses.

Valentine Anich, accused of manslaughter in the second degree for killing Matt Krznarich in the Oregon restaurant Monday night, was bound over to await the action of the next grand jury, after a preliminary hearing in police court this morning.

The testimony showed that the dead man had been in the habit of coming into the restaurant under the influence of liquor and being rather abusive towards the waitresses. The night he was killed, the saloonkeeper was wrangling with Ida Mattson, one of the girls employed in the place, about the cash register. It is said he claimed that she did not ring up the money he had paid for his meal.

It appears that he had been drinking that night and had already thrown something at Ida Mattson when Anich interfered. The testimony was that Krznarich had called the girl many vile names and was about to throw a ketchup bottle at her when Anich struck him. Krznarich's back was towards Anich, but it seems that he swung him around facing him before he struck the fatal blow, on the point of the jaw. He ruptured an artery in the brain, causing death.

The witnesses examined for the state were Ida Mattson, Joseph Amarzia and John Anich, who, it developed, is no relative of the accused man. Assistant County Attorney W. E. Greene appeared for the state and the firm of Ilsley, Goldberg, Classon & Rice represented Anich.

WANTS SPANIARD TO EXAMINE MAINE

Madrid, April 15.—El Pais, commenting upon the proposed raising of the United States battleship Maine, which sank in the harbor of Havana on the eve of the Spanish-American war, suggests that an examination of the wreck be made by a mixed commission of American, Spanish and French engineers to determine the cause of the warship's destruction.

A WOMAN'S WAY.

Believing, it may be, that it is necessary, now and then, to prove that women are not inferior to men in the management of practical affairs, a contributor to the New York Globe tells of a young woman who recently bought and retired to a small suburban farm, and was busy all the spring personally directing the modernization of the house.

The other day she ordered a telephone installed, and the company's workmen started in. Presently the "boss" called her out to the lawn.

"We can't run the wire in without damaging that tree," he said, pointing to a fine old elm near the plazza. "It can't be done."

"Very well," replied the young woman, smilingly. "Then you needn't put in the 'phone;" and she re-entered the house.

"Did the electricians go away?" asked the correspondent, who assuredly believes that a man should think twice before insisting upon his boasted mental superiority to the other sex.

"No, sir. They put in the 'phone—and without harming the tree."

"A man, now," he concludes, "would have argued a half-hour over the matter."

How to Stop Drinking.

It was formerly customary for the habitual drinker to take the pledge regularly, sometimes once a year, and sometimes in every fit of remorse that followed his debauches, and then—break it.

But now it is gradually dawning on the world that pledges do not stop drunkenness. The nervous system of the habitual drunkard is diseased and he must have treatment that will cure this condition. Orrine is sold under a positive guarantee to cure the drink habit or the money will be refunded. Can be given secretly.

Write for free booklet on the Cure of Alcoholism to the Orrine Co., 457 Orrine building, Washington, D. C. Mailed sealed. Orrine costs but $1 per box. Sold in this city by W. A. Abbott, 129 West Superior street, 930 East Second street, 101 West Fourth street

RAINEY IN BOLD ATTACK

Sugar Trust, Taft, Wickersham and Republican Party Scored.

Message Against Investigation Especially Condemned By Representative.

Washington, April 15.—In delivering a scathing denunciation of the American Sugar Refining company in the house of representatives late yesterday, Representative Rainey of Illinois did not hesitate to make bold suggestions concerning "that most corrupt and rotten trust ever created by the protective tariff system," and also concerning President Taft, Attorney General Wickersham and Henry W. Taft, brother of the president.

Mr. Rainey referred to President Taft's message sent to congress about a year ago in which the president advised against an investigation of the sugar frauds by congress for the reason that "it might, by giving immunity and otherwise, prove an embarrassment in securing the conviction of the guilty parties."

Reviewing the history of the sugar trust, and especially recent fraudulent acts in underweighing raw sugar for the purpose of defrauding the government of millions of revenue, Mr. Rainey said:

"The situation in brief is as follows: "Prominent stockholders and directors of the sugar trust are in grave danger—or at least they were not long ago; the doors of our penitentiaries were opening for many of them. They have, however, succeeded, through their control of the Republican party, in bringing about this most delightful arrangement:

Sinps at Wickersham.

"The attorney general of the United States was, until his appointment, a sugar trust attorney, familiar with the methods of the sugar trust, exhibiting even now a remarkable sympathy for its officials in their difficulties.

"The general counsel for the sugar trust is an ex-assistant attorney general of the United States, loyal to the Republican party, familiar with the methods and with the secrets of the attorney general's office.

"The brother of the president of the United States is one of the attorneys for the sugar trust.

"J. E. Parsons, the father of the ex-president of the New York County Republican committee, is under indictment on account of his offense against the law in Philadelphia.

"And the president of the United States has advised against a congressional investigation of the sugar trust, for the reason that it might prove embarrassing.

Immunity Getting Nearer.

"The last of the frauds committed by the sugar trust occurred on the 26th day of November, 1907. The statute of limitations is running every day and will soon become a complete bar against any criminal prosecution that may be brought. The Republican party is charged with the administration of affairs in this house. Two hundred and nineteen Republican members sit on the other side of this chamber, and since the message of the president of the United States was read in this house, not one of them has lifted his voice against the sugar trust or in favor of an investigation by congress."

In a carefully prepared speech Mr. Rainey proceeded to review many incidents in the career of the sugar trust which he declared reached out through political parties and corrupted men "as no other law-defying corporation has ever been able to do."

"Theft and Bribery."

"For fourteen years, through its almost absolute management and control of the Republican party," declared Mr. Rainey, "the sugar trust has been able to wreck great financial institutions; it has been able to shape tariff schedules, through tariff schedules framed to suit its purposes it has been able to steal indirectly from the people; and, by bribing Republican officials, it has been able to steal directly from the treasury of the United States untold millions of dollars."

Again referring to the president's message to congress advising against an investigation of the sugar frauds, Mr. Rainey insisted that such an investigation would not have granted immunity to witnesses called before a committee of congress, as suggested by the president. He cited the language of the Constitution and of statutes to sustain that contention.

Action of Rules Committee.

"And yet," he said, "that message of the president fell like a wet blanket on the congress. As a result of it four or five resolutions, including one of my own, providing for a congressional investigation of the methods of the sugar trust, sleep the sleep that knows no waking in the committee on rules of the house, and this committee will continue to be in the future as it has been in the past, the graveyard of those meritorious measures which might, if reported out, prove detrimental to the progress of the Republican party."

The annals of congress, he said, would be searched in vain to find another message by a president advising against a congressional investigation under similar facts.

"The attorney general of the United States," he said, in closing, "commences his prosecutions and ends them with unimportant officials and $18-a-week checkers, and the real persons guilty of the most colossal fraud in the history of our government are permitted to go about without punishment, without exposure, still posing as honest men, still willing and still able to contribute to the campaign funds of the Republican party."

"IT PAYS TO PAY CASH."

PRISON SINGER ATTRACTS NOTICE

Inmate of Minnesota Penitentiary Interests New York Readers.

New York, April 15.—Literary circles and no less the general New York public read today with moving interest the story of John Carter, the young poet convict now in the Minnesota penitentiary, where, as he says, to "kill time" and ease his unhappy thoughts, he has written verse that has brought to light his unfortunate predicament.

Robert Underwood Johnson, editor of the Century Magazine, speaking of John Carter, said:

"The young man has written several letters to me. I became interested in his case, not only on account of the merit of his verses, but also from the manly tone in which his communications were couched. He has unbosomed himself to me in his letters.

"I believe this young man is worth saving. I voluntarily wrote a letter to the state board of pardons of Minnesota, asking for a remission of Carter's sentence. He mentioned in one of his letters that he intended to apply to the state board of pardons for freedom, but in none of his communications was there a trace or whine or plea for me to intercede for him. He has learned his lesson, and his release will place in the world a better man.

One of His Poems.

In his cell Carter penned a poem under the title of "Ballad of Misery and Iron," verses of which read:

"Haggard faces and trembling knees;
Eyes that shine with a weakling hate;
Lips that mutter their blasphemies;
Murderous hearts that darkly wait;
These were they who were men of late,
Fit to hold a plow or a sword.
If a prayer this wall will penetrate,
Have pity on these, my comrades, Lord!

"Poets sing of life at the Lees
In tender voices and delicate—
Of tears and manifold agonies—
Little they know of what they prate.

"Out of this silence passionate
Sounds a deeper, a wilder chord.
If song be heard through the narrow grate,
Have pity on these, my comrades, Lord!"

COMPARISON OF CHILDREN

Interesting Subjects for Discussion at Meeting of Primary Teachers.

The Duluth Primary association will hold its sectional meeting tomorrow morning at the high school from 9:15 to 10 o'clock in connection with the general teachers' meeting. The association has been recently organized among the primary teachers of the city with Miss Mary Murdock as president.

At tomorrow's session Dr. Alletzhauser will give a talk comparing the play of American children with that of German and French children and a comparison of the prizes of the foreign people's with those of America. "The Physical Value of Play," will be discussed by Miss Hollahan of the Emerson school.

"How to Further Interest Duluth People in the Playground Movement" will be discussed by Miss Annie Hicken of the Adams school and at the close of the meeting there will be a free discussion of the value of a half holiday of outdoor play compared with the influences of a matinee at a cheap theater. Miss Bowen of the Endion school will lead the discussion.

BILBO ORDERED TO QUIT SENATE

Jackson, Miss., April 15.—Concluding their afternoon session with the adoption of a resolution sustaining State Senator Theodore Bilbo by a margin of one vote, the Mississippi senate late last night adopted another resolution demanding that he tender his resignation and bitterly criticising his actions in connection with his charge of irregularities during the recent senatorial contest.

The resolution attacks the credibility and character of Senator Bilbo and condemns his charge and his statement that he acted in the role of a detective as ntrue. Concluding, it declares him unfit to retain his membership in the Mississippi legislature.

Vardaman Men Bolt.

With the introduction of the resolution, the storm broke. Senator Hebron, president pro-tem of the senate and an ardent supporter of Vardaman in the senatorial contest, left the chair, surrendering the gavel to Senator McLaurin, and joined a group of adherents of Mr. Vardaman, who were forming to march from the chamber in a body. The entire number withdrew and by a vote of 25 to 10 the resolution was adopted. Another resolution declaring it the sense of the senate that the senatorial contest was without improper influence; that the election of Senator Percy was free from fraud or corruption, and expressing confidence in the United States senator, was adopted unanimously.

BUCKETSHOP DAYS PAST

Duluth Investors in Stocks Demand That Exchange Continue.

Insurging Brokers Had Even Less Than Regulars to Guarantee Trades.

"It's a funny thing about these insurgent brokers," said a regular member of the Duluth stock exchange today. "They say they are kicking about irresponsible brokers being permitted to do business on the exchange by paying $100 for the privilege, and that brokers do not have to put up bonds to guarantee that they will make good on their trades.

"These insurgent brokers, while they were insurging, not only had no bonds up for their mutual protection, but they did not even have the support of the Duluth stock exchange. There was absolutely no restraining power connected with their operations. Why, one of these brokers is being sued by a former broker for a fortune. Connected with a deal allied to the one which gave birth to the suit was the case of a broker who had to leave town with an indictment against him. You haven't noticed any scandals around this town in the brokerage business since the stock exchange was organized. This exchange deserves the support of every broker and every customer of every broker. No broker or coterie of brokers can break it up.

"While these men were insurging, there were some members of the Duluth stock exchange who had considerable trouble in getting their trades with the insurgents fulfilled.

"Such sudden virtue and piety on the part of these brokers is to be commended. They could stand a better chance in causing the public to have faith in their protestations if they worked with the exchange and not against it; if they showed by their actions that they preferred to do business under proper regulations. This town is past the bucketshop stage, and the sooner the so-called insurgent brokers learn that fact it will be better for copper stock trading in Duluth, for the exchange, for the brokers and for the many investors at the Head of the Lakes. If some of the biggest brokerage houses in the United States, such as Paine, Webber & Co., Piper, Johnson & Case and Gay & Sturgis do not find the rules of the exchange so loose or so stringent, as the case may be, that they cannot do business satisfactorily, I can't see what basis there is for the kicks from some of the local houses.

"During the period of insurgency the big outside brokerage houses resisted the efforts of the insurgents to induce them to secede. They said this town needed a stock exchange, and they stood by it and are standing by it now. I think the public understands the situation perfectly, and I believe there would be a popular revolt, figuratively speaking, if the executive and legislative power of this exchange was in any degree lessened."

Washington, April 15.—"Mooley," the pet cow and pure milk provider of the White House, is dead. The aristocratic animal was allowed the exclusive privilege of grazing on the White House lawns and the big White House lot. She found an open oat can and helped herself too liberally to a grain intended for horses and work animals. Consequently she became ill and died.

HOW IT HAPPENED

While in New York last week looking around and placing my orders for Fall and Winter goods, one of the traveling men from an importing house there gave me a quiet tip that Cullen & Cullen, the exclusive Wall street tailors were in a bad way financially. That, between speculating on the stock market and fast times on the "Great White Way" their tailoring business was crippled beyond repair. The result was that I made an appointment with them, looked over their stock and made them an offer of 30 cents on the dollar for their entire stock of fine imported goods, which was accepted for cash.

Cullen & Cullen were a new concern, first opened their business early this Spring. This is their first stock. All of the fabrics were this Spring and Summer goods, the handsomest imported woolens I ever saw. I have picked up lots of snaps in my day, but this one is the best I ever landed.

I realize with this big stock, in addition with my large regular Spring stock, I have to hurry to clean up, so I shipped the goods by express, and tomorrow, my customers will get the first choice of the most stupendous bargain ever offered in America on fine tailoring.

This stock is all in single suit length pieces; each pattern distinct and exclusive, so that it will be impossible for me to send samples to my out-of-town customers or cut any samples for the ladies who wish to place an order for their husband or friend. Men who want to take advantage of this sale must come direct to my store in order to pick the patterns. Store open from 8:30 a. m. till 10 p. m. on Saturday—Call early.

I have divided the Cullen & Cullen stock in two separate lots, putting all of their $40 and $50 suit lengths into one lot. Tomorrow and all next week, suit made to order for $16.50.

All of Cullen & Cullen's $55 and $65 fabrics, made to your order in a suit for $21.

This is the grandest opportunity for men in Duluth to get the swellest New York style and patterns from the Wall street district at only a fraction of the New Yorker's price.

Perfect fit and workmanship guaranteed.

Yours truly,

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE

Greatest Religious Gathering of Modern History at Edinburgh.

Fully a Thousand Americans Expected to Go in June.

Boston, Mass., April 15.—Huge religious meetings of a national and international character have been more than ordinarily frequent during recent months, but the biggest of all is that scheduled to meet in Edinburgh on June 14 to 23. It is called the World's Missionary Conference and it will bring official delegates from every nation under heaven, including more than 1,000 from the United States and Canada.

There have been Pan-Anglican conferences, Pan-Presbyterian conferences and Pan-American conferences, but this is a Pan-Protestant gathering. It is utterly official in its character, and its deliberations and actions will have a profound effect upon the religious work of the whole world. While all branches of Protestantism, from the ritualistic party in the Church of England to the Quaker meeting, will be represented in the deliberations, no anti-Catholic bias is intended. So tolerant, indeed, is the gathering toward the Roman Catholic church that none of the missions in Catholic countries, such as the much discussed Methodist Mission at Rome, is included as a basis of representation in this world's conference.

This is the third of a series. The first was held in London in 1888, the second in New York in 1900. During the last decade there have been stupendous advances in all forms of mission work; especially in the United States and Canada has there been a quickening of interest among the laity, which is carrying to Edinburgh scores and hundreds of persons who are unable to go as accredited delegates, because the quota of their denomination is full.

A World Business Meeting.

This is not like the ordinary inspirational conventions, where everybody who can go is welcome. At this early date, practically all the sittings for the assembly hall, which seats 2,000, and for Synod hall in Edinburgh, which accommodates nearly a like number, have been taken. Synod hall is for those who have some sort of official recognition, but are not regular delegates. In addition to these two great simultaneous meetings, there will be other overflow gatherings. The denominations have been limited in the number of delegates by the size of their foreign mission work. Great Britain and North America have nearly the same apportionment, while the continent of Europe has a smaller share, as its mission work is not so fully developed. Included in these parent territories, so to speak, are the men and women missionaries who will come from the remotest corners of the earth.

It is not generally known that there are in the United States and Canada no less than fifty-eight societies engaged in promoting foreign missions. The total expenditures of these for each year is over $10,000,000. The sum spent in the whole world is $24,000,000 a year.

Gathering of Great Leaders.

This Edinburgh conference, for which active preparations have been under way since 1907, will be different from most other religious gatherings, also, in that it will not be composed largely of ecclesiastics. Many of the great preachers of Christiandom will be present, it is true, including the Christian statesmen from the frontier of the church's territories in the foreign field; but the leading laity of both hemispheres will also be present. It is safe to say that not merely because of the size and representative character of the meeting, but also because of the standing of the men engaged, this convention will make an epoch in Christian history. Great business men and politicians will lay aside their accustomed cares to give this ten days to deliberation upon the world conquest which Christianity has undertaken.

From the foreign field will come men and women whose life stories are romances known to constituencies of myriads. There will be men who have seen Islands of the sea transformed from savagery to Christianity. The leaders in the great work in Korea will be present and the men who may be regarded as the fathers of the new China will be there. President Harrison was profoundly moved by the character of the missionaries whom he met at the New York conference in 1900, and by the message they spoke. Still more remarkable will be the company met with in the assembly hall at Edinburgh.

On a Business Basis.

Of late years there has developed a new science of missions. The old forms of missionary work have been radically altered in many particulars. It is felt that with changing conditions throughout all the world, not only is a tremendous increase of activity necessary, but a complete realignment of forces and a readjustment of methods. For three years past leading laymen and preachers and missionary officials have been making a scientific study of the different departments of missions, for the various commissions of the Edinburgh convention. The Edinburgh convention will hear reports from eight of these commissions.

Advocates of foreign missions have not hesitated to claim that they are the most potent factor in international politics today. One of the commissions deals with missions and governments. The chairman is the Lord Balfour who is lord rector of the Edinburgh university, chancellor of St. Andrew's university and chairman of a large number of important commissions. He is a member of the Church of Scotland, and has taken a prominent part in the work of its general assembly. Those activities have been subordinated in the minds of the public, of course, by his participation in the British politics. The vice chairman of this commission is Hon. Seth Low, LL. D., former president of Columbia university and mayor of New York city. Another member is Admiral Mahan, the greatest living writer on naval subjects. Still another is Sir Robert Hart, G. C. M. G., for more than forty years the well-known inspector general of customs in China. Sir Andrew Wingate, K. C. I. E., had a distinguished career in the Indian civil service. John Foster, LL. D., former secretary of state in the United States was counsel of the emperor of China in the peace negotiations with Japan in 1895. R. L. Borden, another member, is leader of the Conservative party in the Canadian house of commons. Prof. Rufus N. Jones of Haverford college is editor of The American Friend, and the leader of the younger generation of Quakers. The Right Reverend William Lawrence, D. D., is bishop of Massachusetts. Such are the men who have prepared the document upon the relation of missions and governments, which will be considered at length during the Edinburgh conference. There will be no set speeches at the conference.

While this Edinburgh convention will probably develop few controversial or sensational subjects, yet it is regarded by leaders in all branches of Protestantism as promising more for the future of Christianity than any other gathering that has been held in the memory of living man. Its effect upon the non-Christian nations may only be imagined.

THE BUBBLE HAS BURST

American Makes Fortune By Roller Rink Boom in Europe.

Gets Out Before Craze Wanes and Others Hold the Stock.

Paris, April 15.—The "Roller Skating King" of Europe, Chester P. Crawford, formerly of Topeka, Kan., has been dethroned. Crawford and F. A. Wilkins of Liverpool, his partner, have just resigned as directors of many of the companies which own a string of thirty-three rinks scattered about England and the Continent.

The "rinking" boom has burst and companies are now being wound up with the same rapidity as they were formed several months ago. Rinks are to let to anybody who will have them. The stockholders of sixteen of the companies met on one day last week to discuss the situation and to invite Crawford and Wilkins to present their resignations.

Public Rushed to Invest.

A comparison of notes showed that the public had subscribed nearly $800,000 at the time when Crawford and Wilkins were capitalizing their enterprises and when the boom was at its zenith. These investments were made on the strength of large dividends paid by a few rinks. It developed also that Crawford and Wilkins had quietly sold out a majority of their own shares at a large profit before the other shareholders discovered that the huge dividends were too good to last.

The two men received, in addition to their profits as promoters and managers, and as a commission on skates imported from America for the several rinks, salaries of $40 a week from each of about twenty rinks. The companies paid the energetic directors a total of about $800 a week, or $41,650 a year, to look after their affairs. When the "king" and his ally involuntarily abdicated last week, they were cut off from access to this royal purse.

His First Success at Coney.

Crawford is a son of L. M. Crawford, who owned theaters in Topeka many years and was once manager of the Gillis theater in Kansas City. He opened a big rink at Coney Island several years ago, and the fad made money. Then he extended his field of operations to this side of the water and was the chief instrument in driving the staid and stolid Britisher "roller skating mad."

Crawford hired Tournament hall, Liverpool, in September, 1907. In the first twenty-seven weeks the receipts aggregated nearly $75,000. Then he secured Exhibition hall, in Newcastle-on-Tyne, and almost duplicated his Liverpool success. After that he invaded London.

He organized a new company and leased Olympia, the convention hall of London, for three months, agreeing to pay a weekly rental of $1,200. He laid a maple floor over the vast assembly area, spent a vast amount in newspaper and billboard advertising, and opened the doors of the biggest skating rink in the world.

Then He Sold Out.

Figures which Crawford allowed to be printed showed that in thirteen months 785,000 persons skated there, paying nearly $195,000 for the privilege. So he renewed the lease, gaining possession of Olympia from December to March during the next four years. Then he began organizing stock companies, and investors flocked to him.

A few of the rinks are still paying handsome dividends, but many of them have failed to realize the expectations of shareholders, and Crawford's and Wilkin's holdings in several cases are said to be limited to a single share each now. The records of Somerset house, London, with regard to seven of the companies, show that Crawford had 17,672 shares two years ago, but that he retains only 5,680 now. He disposed of 11,992 after the original allotment. In the same time the shares held by Wilkins decreased from 8,842 to 4,317. Between them the partners sold 16,517 of their own shares in the seven companies before the public discovered that rinks are not a permanently yielding gold mine.

GREAT SCHEME TO GET WEALTHY

Oklahoma Man's Scheme Has Standard Oil Beaten a Block.

Guthrie, Okla., April 15.—A Guthrie banker believes that the limit of high finance has been reached in a scheme proposed to him by an Oklahoman eager to join the "get-rich-quick" society. These figures are taken from the prospectus.

An investment of $200 paid in by three stockholders, each holding one o fthe three shares of the company, and 300 geese at $1 each; total, $300. The estimated production is three eggs a week from each goose, making nine hundred eggs a week, 26,800 a year, and for three years (the life of the company), 140,000.

None of the eggs is to be sold, but all incubated and hatched, and allowing 40,000 for bad eggs, there would be a total of 100,000 goslings. In three years each goose would produce, "conservatively," three pounds of feathers, which at $1 a pound would amount to $300,000. From 100,000 goose livers would be received $60,000. Estimating twenty buttons from each goose bill, and the price of 1 cent a button, there would be $20,000 from 2,000,000 goose-bill buttons, while from 100,000 marketed geese at $1.50 each would be derived the sum of $150,000.

The operating expenses are estimated at $190,000, to which should be added the $300 paid in by stockholders and invested in goose eggs, making the total outlay $190,300. The total receipts, as enumerated, would be $530,000, making the enormous net profits of $339,700 in three years, or an annual dividend of $37,744 for each stockholder.

This scheme is said to have been thought out by a man living in town who has devoted much time to the theoretical results of poultry farming.

THE NO-TIP RULE A FAILURE.

Waiters in the Senate Restaurant Have Found a Way Out.

Washington, April 15.—A dead senator is valued at $7,500 any way you figure it. Quotations on live ones vary.

The senate always votes an extra year's salary to the family of a dead senator, besides paying all the funeral expenses.

Likewise employes of the capitol force all get an extra month's pay voted to them annually, making their year thirteen months for salary purposes.

But despite these little liberalities the senate has gone on record against tipping.

On every bill of fare in the senate restaurant there now appears this legend:

"Under the regulations of the senate now in force the waiters of the Senate cafe are not permitted to receive tips."

There was wailing and weeping among the negro waiters when the announcement was made. A few days ago a senator who insists upon good service, said to his waiter:

"George, do I understand there is no way I can tip you?"

"Oh, yes sah, we've figgered it out already, senatah," replied George.

"What's the system?"

George explained that the senator was to go away and leave his change as though he forgot it. The negro was to keep an eye on it, and when handed to the senator later he was to disclaim ownership.

And on that basis the tipping regulation has been rescinded.

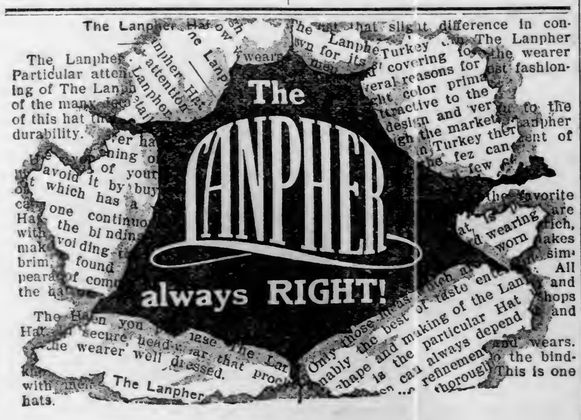
One Sustains the Other



HAUGHTY DAMES BROUGHT LOW.

Quite unpleasant contretemps can occur in a London ballroom, says the Gentlewoman, as witness the adventures of two ladies one evening not long ago. The cotillon was being danced and in one figure the object was to jump through a paper hoop.

This a well known lady succeeded in doing, only to come violently into collision with another who was prepared to precipitate herself through from the other side. At least one black eye and other disagreeable results have followed this inopportune meeting between two fair but overhasty leaders of fashion.

Apparently the ballroom is becoming second only to the athletic field. It was during the season just closed that no less a personage than Mrs. George Keppel, a favorite with King Edward, came to grief in dancing the cotillion.

One of the figures demanded that the lady jump the rope, and in essaying this return to her somewhat distant girlhood Mrs. Keppel had what was described as "a nasty fall," which laid her up for some time.

NELSON CALLS UP BIG WATER BILL

Fight on River and Harbor Measure Is Begun By Burton.

Washington, April 15.—The great river and harbor bill, carrying an appropriation of more than $52,000,000, today temporarily displaced the railroad bill. Almost every senator in the chamber had a personal interest in the bill and the general concern was manifested by a pricking up of ears when Senator Nelson called up the measure for action. In the absence of Senator Frye, the Minnesota senator was in charge of it.

The bill was no sooner laid before the senate than Senator Burton of Ohio took the floor in opposition. Explaining that before coming to the senate he had been for ten years chairman of the house committee on rivers and harbors, he said that he disliked very much to criticise his former associates, as he did to criticise his present colleagues of the senate. Still, convinced as he was of the undesirable character of the bill, he felt that he must speak his mind concerning it.

Denounces the System.

His strictures related rather to the system than to the amount involved. Indeed, he did not consider the sum large, but he felt that under present methods many injudicious and wasteful projects were sure to be included with many that are meritorious.

He was especially severe in his comment on the continuing or peacemeal plan, and as an instance he cited Sandy Bar Harbor of Refuge, on the Massachusetts coast. He said that at the present rate of progress, seventy-six years would be necessary to complete the work, the enterprise being of no use until completed.

SUPERIOR START BOOM FOR LA FOLLETTE

State Senator Says Northern Counties Are Strong for "Bob."

State Senator Thomas Morris of La Crosse arrived in Superior this morning to be the principal speaker at a political meeting held this evening at the Sons of Norway hall under the auspices of the Douglas County La Follette club.

Senator Morris, in an interview, was as insistent as ever, in his declaration that Northern Wisconsin was the stronghold of Senator La Follette and would support him again for the next race for a seat in the United States senate.

In his talk tonight, he will outline the policies of La Follette and will make a plea for his support and the ideas and polices that he is striving to carry out at the national capital. Senator Morris is a candidate for the lieutenant governorship of the state and one of the best known members of the legislature.

INTOXICATED MAN DIES IN SALOON.

Gilbert Weinevold, 40 years old, for fifteen years a resident of Superior and a mechanic by trade, died of alcoholism last night in the rear room of a saloon at 707 Tower avenue. His body was found about 10 o'clock by the proprietor, John Mattson.

Until a short time ago, Weinevold worked at the shipyards. He was also a partner for several years in the saloon business with Mattson, in whose place of business he died. He is well known about the lower part of town and for many years made his home at the Kemmers hotel.

He has no relatives in this country. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Annual Police Ball.

The annual ball of the Superior police department will be held this evening at the Hotel Superior, and despite the weather, it promises to be a success. The advance sale of tickets is unusually large and preparations for the affair have been elaborate. The police of Duluth and city officials of Superior will be guests of honor.

WORK WILL BEGIN SOON.

Great Northern Ore Yard Work in Hands of Contractors.

Schmidt Bros. & Hill, contractors, will start work at once on the construction of the round house and other buildings to be erected by the Great Northern in connection with its ore yards. The contract for the work was let recently.

Lumber and other material for a set of camp buildings have been unloaded at the site of the improvements, which is at a point on the line about midway between Allouez and Saunders. The present yards will be increased by additional trackage to give access to the various new buildings.

The contractors have found it necessary to build camps for their men on account of the distance of the scene of operations from the city.

May Issue Bonds.

Permission has been secured from the state rate commission by the Superior Water, Light & Power company to issue bonds to the extent of $100,000. The securing of authority to do this has no special significance at this time, say officials of the company. The company wishes to be prepared for any emergency and it is probable that the issue will not be put out this year.

Jury Disagrees.

The jury in the personal injury case of Eleaner Zelers against the street railway company, in which she demanded $1,500 damages, disagreed yesterday and was discharged by Judge Charles Smith of the superior court. In her complaint, she alleges that while alighting from a street car late last December, the car started, throwing her to the ground.

Officials Visit City.

Officials of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal company held a conference yesterday in Superior with engineers and contractors, in regard to the work of flooring the immense new dock which the company is constructing on Connor's point. In the party were W. J. Richards, first vice president and general manager; E. H. Mulhoff, general superintendent; J. H. Sessions, Minneapolis, and J. H. Clagett, Chicago. The contract for the work, which will involve about $60,000, will probably be let next week.

SEARCHING FOR DIAMONDS.

Wide World Magazine: From the methods used to locate the stones, the new diamond fields in German South Africa might very well be called a "Tom Tiddler's Ground." The diamonds are very small, but are exceedingly plentiful. They are found in the open desert, where nothing but sand, unrelieved by the slightest sign of brush or shrub, is to be seen for vast distances. The men who search for the stones—needless to say, they are all natives—have ten miles to go every morning from camp. The searchers work on their hands and knees, apparently regardless of the blinding sunshine, sifting the surface sand through their fingers. Most of them are old Kimberley boys, and they are very keen on discovering stones. The district is hardly a paradise for the white man, being notorious for its frequent dust storms and terrific heat.

RACING FOR A GOLD MINE.

Wide World Magazine: The old, sunbaked prospector, shuffling along through an endless desert, is practically a thing of the past. In Southwestern Nevada, where mining is most modern, there is another kind of prospecting, the kind that is done by the "big fellows."

As a matter of fact, it should be called mine hunting, for men who engage in it are looking, not for "prospects" or "colors," but for a mine. They know that it needs but one mine to fix a man for life and leave something behind for his descendants as well.

That kind of mine hunting is not done afoot; it is done in motor cars, and the men who engage in it maintain a regular "intelligence department." They have emissaries all over the gold fields, plodding patiently through the desert, "panning" in ravines or upon mountain tops; other agents are located in the towns, frequenting the saloons and gambling places—fellows who can engage conversation and have good ears. In the garage close to the mine hunter's office is his motor, laden with extra tires, petrol, and grub-box and water; the chauffeur lounges near, ready for duty when called upon.

When the news of a rich "strike" reaches him, Mr. Mine hunter grabs up his overcoat, saunters across the street to the garage, steps into the car, and is off. Beneath the burning sun, under the blazing cars, through desert and oasis, mountain and valley, his big machine whirrs, one day, two days, three if necessary, till he comes to the find. Then he steps off and examines it. If it looks good, he buys it; if not, he goes back his trip in vain. He often returns thus, empty handed, but never impatient; for remember, all he wants is one good mine, and a motor-car is the quickest means of getting him to it.

—Chinese Proverb.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE SUFFRAGISTS.

When President Taft, in welcoming the National American Women's Suffrage association to Washington yesterday, used one of the stock arguments against votes for women, there were hisses. Not a few faint, timid, scattered hisses, but a hearty and robust volume of hisses that must have penetrated rather alarmingly to the president's consciousness, though the reports agree that he accepted this backhanded ovation with composure, and responded promptly with a merited rebuke.

Probably advocates of votes for women are not particularly proud of this incident. Very likely those who participated in it, now that they have had opportunity for second thought, realize that they forgot themselves. Nevertheless, they had heard the president's argument very often, no doubt, and probably had become so wearied of it that its repetition was irritating. One would like to find excuses for their action if it is possible.

Perhaps those who hissed are suffragettes, and those who did not hiss but blushed are suffragists. There seems to be need of a rule to distinguish the two. Maybe this incident provides it.

One is necessarily much impressed, too, by the courage of a statesman who can go before an audience composed of ardent advocates of votes for women, and state his belief that only "the least desirable class" of women would be interested in the ballot.

Nevertheless, in spite of the women who hissed and the president who talked against votes for women, we believe that women should vote, and that it will not be so very long before they do.

"DULUTH OUTDOORS."

The Commercial club has issued an unusually effective folder entitled "Duluth Outdoors," which was described in the local columns last night. Get one of those folders and read it. Read it first from the viewpoint of a man who never has been in Duluth and who is looking for a good place to spend a summer vacation in or to live in. That is the best test of such a document, and unless we mistake you will agree that its eloquence, the eloquence of truth and earnestness, makes it stand this test admirably. After you have applied that test, mail the folder to somebody you know that needs it. Then get another one and read it from your own viewpoint, and see if it doesn't make you realize that there are a lot of beauties and comforts in your home city that you haven't paid proper attention to. That's another good test, which is all the stronger when you go out and see for yourself that these delights are here and have been here all the time.

Next, get a bunch of these folders and mail them out to all those benighted friends of yours who live in other communities and who need the enlightenment thus provided. You will be doing them a favor if you induce them, thereby, to come to Duluth for a visit or to live.

The folder is a bully piece of work. It fills admirably a long felt want.

INSURGENCY IN THE EAST.

In spite of the crushing defeat of a standpat Republican in an overwhelmingly Republican Massachusetts congressional district, the powers that are determined to rule the Republican party or ruin it seem still to believe that insurgency is a local disease confined to the Middle West.

In the Rochester district of New York, George W. Aldridge, a standpat Republican who was shown recently to have accepted a bribe from the insurance companies for assistance in the legislature, and who complacently justified his acceptance of a bribe on the ground that he used the money for party purposes, has been nominated by the Republicans to succeed the late Congressman Perkins. Opposed to him is James S. Havens, a law partner of the late congressman, and a man who, while he has not heretofore taken an active part in politics, is making a lively campaign in which he scores the bosses of his own party and those of the Republican party quite impartially; which sounds like the kind of talk likely to win popular approval at this time. The district is normally Republican by 10,000, and Aldridge is its boss; but the stupid arrogance of the Republican organization in putting up one of its most conspicuously corrupt retainers seems likely to bring about a repetition of the Massachusetts result.

This by-election campaign is showing a temper of the people that should be a warning to those blind members of the Republican organization who seem to think that because President Taft, who has never been in touch with the needs of the people, is amenable to their will, the people are amenable also.

In truth, New England and the East are hot in revolt against the bosses and against the corrupt organization of the Republican party. The Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis News says: "The Republican congressional campaign committee has been investigating conditions in New England, and it is surprised to find hotbeds of insurgency springing up in every one of the New England states. Persons who have recently returned to the capital after looking conditions over in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island assert that there is just as much insurgency within the Republican party in that part of the country as there is in the Middle West states. It may be a different brand of insurgency, they say, but it is surely there. Apparently it is not directed so much against what the Central West calls 'Cannonism,' or against the new tariff law, as against machine control. It is pointed out that the Republican state machines in the New England states have been operated noiselessly and effectively for many years. Senators, members of the house and governors have been products of these well-equipped political machines. The people of the New England states appear to have got the idea that they ought to have a hand in the making of public officials. In Massachusetts there is a genuine revolt against the Lodge machine; in Maine, the Hale machine is encountering many obstacles; in New Hampshire and Vermont the machines are in danger of being wrecked; and even in Rhode Island the Aldrich machine is in trouble. Some persons who have familiarized themselves with the situations in these state are almost ready to predict that Lodge, Hale and Aldrich will fail of re-election to the senate next January, but this seems to be an extreme view."

If the primary election system which has given effective outlet to the independent spirit of the West could be applied to the New England states for one year, Aldrich, Hale, Lodge and their kind would be swept away.

BE READY FOR THE CENSUS.

Last evening The Herald published the questions that the census enumerator will ask you when he comes on his round of duty. It will help a good deal if you clip out that list and prepare yourself to answer the questions promptly when the enumerator comes. Then he will have that much more time to bother with those who are not prepared, and with those who have to be told what it is all about before they will answer the questions.

For instance, if you are a workingman, the enumerator will want to know how many weeks in 1909 you were out of work. Probably you can't answer that question offhand. Figure it out and have the answer ready when the enumerator comes. This information is important, because its aggregate will be very valuable to those who are trying to find ways to improve conditions so that workmen will have fewer idle weeks.

The standing of your city among the cities of the nation depends upon a full and complete census. You can help your city by doing your part to make it full and complete. Your representation in congress and the legislature is based upon population—or should be—and to get full representation there must be a full count.

Help the census in Duluth in every possible way; it is your business, and it is for your good.

THE HUNGER FOR LAND.

Though the drift of the population away from the country into the cities has for a long time been unmistakable and menacing, there are signs that the tide is turning.

High cost of living in the cities means good profits on the farms. Thousands of city workers who have an unceasing struggle to make both ends meet are looking with longing toward the soil, and many are turning their steps toward it. Many others would go if they could. Hard living in the cities and profitable occupation on the farms suggest the obvious remedy—demand creating supply in obedience to one economic law that the trusts haven't yet repealed; city dwellers ceasing the hopeless struggle and going upon the soil to seek comfort and independence.

There is a vast land hunger in the country. Nothing more significant of that fact has come to our notice than the report that even the abandoned farms of New England are being taken up again.

The Willimantic Journal, speaking for that county of Connecticut which the State Missionary society made its horrible example ten years ago, says that there are no more abandoned farms on the market. Instead, it declares that the problem now is to find enough farm land of any description to meet the demand. It reports that one real estate dealer has on his list thirty customers for farms, and not a farm to sell them. Another dealer has a customer waiting to pay $5,000 cash for a farm, and waiting in vain.

There is a lesson in this story for Minnesota. Minnesota has no abandoned farms for sale, but it has thousands of farms yet to be redeemed from their virgin condition.

In Northern Minnesota there are homes for many thousands of industrious farmers, any tract in the lot far better than any rocky, exhausted New England farm.

Here there is soil made rich by deposits of vegetable matter through thousands of years, forming a mold of marvelous fertility. There are markets near at hand ready to consume at good prices all that can possibly be raised. The country is developing rapidly, and sections that were in the wilderness but a few years ago are being opened up and settled. The state owns millions of acres, which it sells at reasonable prices and on terms that make them readily available for almost anybody.

There is a surplus of labor in the cities, making living hard for all. There is an approaching shortage of food supplies in the nation, guaranteeing steady profits from the products of the soil. There is land in plenty to satisfy the needs of the nation when it has three times its present population, if it is cultivated fully and wisely.

The lesson of the situation to the city worker is, Get back to the soil.

The lesson in the situation to Minnesota is, Get the city workers busy on your millions of idle acres.

The lesson to men of means and patriotic intent is, Use your money and ability to help bring the workers and the land together for the good of the nation and its people.

THE RAIN.

If the Northwest had ordered it, and had bought it of an obliging dealer whose motto was "Our aim is to please," today's rain couldn't have been timelier or better. In the city the streets were dry and hordes of germs rode riot in the flying dust. Lawns were parched, and the young grass was having a difficult time of it, lacking the encouragement of moisture. In the country the fields were dry and the soil scarcely held the seeds away from the wind's rude grasp. Then the rain came, a gentle, steady downpour which dampened the city streets and the farmer's fields, laying the dust in the city and cementing the loose soil of the farms into a moist rich mold in which seeds will swell and germinate. Lawns, washed of their dust, burst forth in a brighter green, and in the wheatpit the bear looked more cheerful and the bull more discouraged.

It was just what the doctor ordered, this rain.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THE HIGH SCHOOL LUNCH ROOM.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The trouble with the Central high school lunch room is that it is very poor in service and quality of its eatables. The soup is thin and greasy. For chicken soup they drag a chicken through a pot of water, and, presto, we have chicken soup. The ice cream is a cheap special make. After it starts to melt it becomes sticky and would make a good paste for the drawing room. I heard a teacher say that the pie they had was fine. The Brown Betty is sometimes poor and sometimes good. The cocoa is water with a little milk (?) and water mixed with a little bit of cocoa. This cocoa is made in such a way that the top of the cocoa cup is covered with a scum fully a quarter of an inch thick. The sandwiches remind you of a newspaper. It would take a microscope to find the meat and butter. Besides all this, the room is bare and lonely, and those who get through eating leave their dirty dishes on the table, where others have to eat. There is nobody to clean up the dishes from the table or wipe up the food that is spilled. The dirty tables would turn the pupils away from such a "hole."

To remedy this, I suggest that the board of education give this hall to some restaurant keeper, and also give him free light, water, fuel and rent, and have this restaurant serve the meals to the pupils. The restaurant keeper would keep the job until he began to serve poorly and charge high prices. It would be a good thing if somebody else would suggest a plan for reconstruction of the lunch room.

Yours truly,
V. B. E.

THE TARIFF AND CANADA.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I have read much about the settlement of the tariff question between this country and Canada, but have failed to learn what settlement was made. Was a change made in the tariff, or did the president only refrain from imposing the maximum tariff? The wisdom of imposing the maximum tariff, which would in most cases be prohibitive, it seems to me would be like grasping a sharp, hiltless sword as a means of offense. Yours truly,

JACKSON PHILLIPS.
Chippewa Falls, Wis., April 14.

No change was made in the new tariff law as a result of the settlement between Canada and the United States. Canada made some concessions and the president refrained from imposing the maximum tariff. He also, it is understood, agreed to urge changes in the American tariff, or the making of a treaty, that would involve concessions to Canada on the part of this country. Your idea that the application of the maximum tariff to Canada would be like using a sharp hiltless sword as a means of offense is vividly accurate.—Editor Herald.

MORAL—MORE PUBLIC DOCKS.

Chicago Tribune: "It is conceded," says the interstate commerce commission in a recent opinion, "that the defendant railroads own or control all of the boat lines that transport flour from Duluth to Buffalo." The opinion in question deals with the complaint of the millers of Minneapolis and some other cities in the Northwest that the rail, lake and rail rate on the product to New York was excessive and gave an undue advanatge to the Buffalo millers. The commission found the complaint justifiable and ordered a reduction in the rate from 23 cents per hundred pounds to 21½ cents.

Up to 1908 the regular or package lines of boats on the Great Lakes were independent. Then the rate on flour was 20 cents per hundred pounds. But as the railroads absorbed the lake lines they advanced the rates, first 2 cents and then by 1. The roads wanted more money, and as competition had been extinguished, they reached out after the money.

The roads have not a complete monopoly of lake traffic. They have to divide the transportation of wheat with the tramp boats. The latter handle practically all that is moved during the early days of navigation. They are at the shipping points ready to take on cargoes while the regular or package carrying boats are moving the accumulation of freight concentrated at the different ports. So it comes about that during the greater part of the season the rates on wheat are fixed by the tramp steamers. That is why the Buffalo millers pay reasonable rates on the wheat they draw from the Northwest. This, coupled with the higher rates on flour shipped from the Northwest, accounts for the jump of the output of the Buffalo mills from 966,000 barrels in 1902 to 2,665,000 barrels in 1908.

It may be asked why a tramp boat cannot carry flour, since it can carry wheat. The answer, as given by the interstate commerce commission, is that "independent boats that were originally built and fitted to engage in package freight business are unable to secure and engage in that business because defendants"—the railroads—"control the terminals and wharves and refuse to permit independent boats to load or unload thereat." One of the witnesses for the defendants said frankly that if any tramp boat did secure shipments of flour they would not be permitted to load or unload at the docks of the regular lines. An elevator has to receive grain, no matter who tenders it.

Effective water competition with the railroads has been throttled through the control by them of terminal facilities at Duluth, at Buffalo, at Chicago, and elsewhere. Now one can see the need of public docks and wharves where the boats of independent lines would have facilities denied them at present.

The Writing on the Wall.

Wall Street Summary: The writing is plainly on the wall for all men to read: Republican tariff treachery, trust alliances and party arrogance must end. No longer will political fetiches, such as "protection," that exacts but does not protect, and "party loyalty," that demands but does not give the people that service which they have a right to receive from the men they elect to positions of trust, find favor with the rank and file of our voters. A new era of political independence has been born, wherein the voters do the thinking and not the leaders. The results at the polls at the next congressional election will reflect the views of an awakened, determined, independent electorate, and the yielding of day to night is not more certain than the fact, about to be demonstrated, that never again will a political party survive its betrayal of the people in subservience to the wishes of the "interests."

THE WEATHER

A bountiful warm, spring rain fell last night to stimulate vegetation and extinguish forest fires. Nobody can complain of a little rain at this time of the year, for the benefit it gives more than offsets the discomforts. There will be a change tonight, however, that will not be so welcome. Snow flurries are promised, with freezing temperatures. It ought to be good skating down the hills.

A year ago today was bright and clear.

Although one couldn't see it, the sun roso this morning at 5:20 and it will set at 6:56, giving thirteen hours and thirty-six minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The storm has moved its center from Nebraska to Minnesota. This disturbance has caused light to heavy rainfall throughout the Mississippi, Lower Missouri and Red river valleys and Western Lake region, and somewhat warmer weather from the Mississippi river eastward to the Atlantic seaboard. Freezing temperatures prevail over the Rocky mountains, eastern slopes and the Northwest, as a result of a strong high pressure area central over Idaho, Washington and Oregon. The lowest temperature reported this morning was 14 deg. above zero at Yellowstone park. Storm northeast warnings were ordered at 3:30 p. m. of the 14th at Duluth, Bayfield, Washburn, Ashland, Ontonagon, Houghton, Baraga, Pequaming and Marquette.

"Freezing weather will occur at the Head of the Lakes tonight."

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1890.

At a meeting of the chamber of commerce yesterday, President Baldwin, on behalf of ex-Secretary Phelps, presented the chamber with a handsome oil portrait of himself, which will be hung in the hall of the chamber. City Attorney S. D. Allen and Berlah Magoffin of Lexington, Ky., were made members of the chamber. The main topic of discussion was the proposed canal bridge at Lake avenue. R. P. Edson, who is interested in the matter, addresed the chamber at length in favor of building a bridge. Speeches were also made by City Attorney Allen, Alderman Long, R. C. Mitchell, President Baldwin, C. F. Johnson and Secretary Thompson, and the matter was finally disposed of by authorizing the chairman to appoint a committee of five to confer with the council.

For some time negotiations have been going on between the proprietors of the Hunter-Marshall addition, Munger & Markell, J. C. & R. M. Hunter and O. H. Simonds and the Grassy Point Land company on one side, and W. J. Holmes of Fergus Falls on the other, looking for the establishment of a woolen mill here. Mr. Holmes receives from the Hunter-Markell people $6,000 in cash and site located on the railway track, and from the Grassy Point Land company, $6,000 additional in cash. The main building to be erected will be 42 by 104 feet, of brick and two stories in height. Another brick building, 25 by 50 feet, two stories high, will contain the manufacturing department, where the cloth will be made up, principally into heavy grade pants for lumbermen and miners. This department alone will employ at least 100 people. There will be a storeroom 14 by 36 feet, and a picker room 12 by 20 feet, which will be isolated from the other buildings on account of the danger from fire. The mills will be in operation by Aug. 1.

Governor Merriam has issued a proclamation appointing May 2 as Arbor day.

I. P. Beck has resigned the secretaryship of the regatta association to take the position of cashier in the local office of the St. Paul & Duluth road.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Result Should be n Split.

Monticello Times: The Republican politicians are inconsistent to the last. In Indiana they endorsed Taft and then endorsed Senator Beveridge, who voted against the bill which Taft says is the best ever passed by the Republican party. We wonder if the rank and file of the Republicans of that state can be fooled by such foolishness. What will they do in Minnesota? If they indorse Taft, Tawney and the tariff they cannot consistently endorse Knute Nelson, Clapp, Lindbergh and the balance of the congressional delegation. But they will attempt it. They will undertake to ride horses going in opposite directions. Watch the result.

Old Parties Must Be Good.

Hutchinson Leader: Politicians the country over sat and took notice when the returns came in from the Milwaukee election. The Socialists elected their candidate for mayor and a majority of all the other city officials. Socialism is making rapid headway in all of the great cities and has come to be a factor that must be reckoned with.

A Call for Koll.

Big Falls Compass: N. M. Koll more than any other individual should receive whatever credit may be due for the present indication that Northern Minnesota is about to receive a resemblance of fair play from the state auditor's office. In order to change that resemblance into fair play itself, will it not be necessary to elect this exponent of our needs to that office?

And Here's Another.

Littleport Times: The Bemidji Pioneer suggests that N. M. Koll of Cass Lake should get a bee that sounds like the state auditorship, which legions will approve.

Some Weighed and Found Wanting.

St. Peter Herald: A lot of intelligent voters are waiting with patience to pay their respects to the cowardly near-insurgents who failed their constituents when it came to the supreme test of stripping Cannon and Cannonism of its power.

And They'll Get It.

Wabasha Herald: It appears that the American people are beginning to think for themselves. With every means at their command, those who are responsible for the present tariff have been unable to ram it down the throats of people, because the people refuse to be deceived. They know what thy need, and they want it.

How to Make a City.

Little Falls Herald: A city is but the larger family. The streets, it has been well said, are simply an extension of the home. And so the street should be an expression of the home. That means clean, decent streets. When you invite a stranger into the home you know that the cleanliness and decency is pleasant for him. When a stranger comes into the big family home called a city, what must he think of the dwellers therein, to find some, perhaps many, parts dirty, unclean, uninviting? Clean your city, keep it clean, physically and morally, and the stranger will long to join the family.

Pittsburg Post: "How did you get the black eye?"

"It was caused by the hatrack."

"Accidentally?"

"No; I think it attacked me purposely."

Kansas City Times: "We use the Easter eggs as the symbol of immortality."

"How appropriate. Some of these cold storage eggs seem to have existed always."

Meggendorfer Blaetter: Beggar (returning a penny to the giver)—Excuse me, lady; I can't take less than 3 cents.

"Why not?"

"Them's the union rules, and if I take less I lose my card."

Chicago Post: The prodigal son came hesitatingly to the front gate. His father saw him, recognized him, and rushed out to welcome him with joy. "I'm glad to see you come home in rags!" exclaimed the father. "The neighbor's boy got home yesterday in his college clothes!"

Puck: "I bought it for a song." The owner of a phonograph hurled a newly purchased record out of the window and saw it smash on the pavement below him "and the confounded thing was 'William J. Bryan on the Bank Guarantee Law!'"

Cleveland Leader: "I have a little volume here," began the agent.

"Get out an' shet the door, durn you!" shouted the victim. "I ain't got no use for no sech trash!"

"Yes you have," countered the caller. "This is a treatise on 'Good Manners and Good Grammar.'"

Cleveland Leader: "Why don't you teach you son a lesson by making him live without his allowance for awhile?"

"Goodness! I can't even make him live within it!"

Philadelphia Record: Chief of Detectives—Now give us a description of your missing cashier. How tall was he?

Business Man—I don't know how tall he was. What worries me is that he was $25,000 short.

Puck: Lord Fitznoodle (during the storm) — Take heart, captain! If necessary, we cabin passengers will raise a purse that will make it really worth your while to save us!

Misplaced Ornamentation.

Ruskin: Hence then a general law, of singular importance in the present day, a law of simple, common sense—not to decorate things belonging to purposes of active and occupied life. Wherever you can rest, there decorate; where rest is forbidden, so is beauty. You you must not mix ornament with business, any more than you may mix play. Work first and then rest. Work first, and then gaze, but do not use golden plowshares, nor blind ledgers in enamel. Do not thrash with sculptured flails; nor put bas-reliefs on mill stones.

FOOD AND ARMED STRENGTH GREAT FACTORS FOR PEACE

Lord Kitchener Gives an Interview on Affairs of the World.

Says Panama Canal Is Best Move This Country Ever Made.

Chicago, April 15.—Lord Kitchener "of Khartoum" became "Kitchener of Chicago" for exactly one hour and thirty minutes yesterday afternoon. The taciturnity usually ascribed to him was not in evidence. He surrendered gracefully to a surprise attack by a reporter who boarded his train on the outskirts of the city. With grave humor the genius of things military throughout the British empire arose to greet the newspaperman, who had "flipped" the train.

Gen. Kitchener said with a quiet smile:

"You American newspaper reporters are an odd lot. You come upon us out of the clear sky and start right in to ask the most direct questions. But" and he smiled again, nudging his listener, "I am going to answer you. You ask the questions and I will reply."

The talk, interspersed with questions concerning the stockyards and other matters of local interest, included such subjects as the Panama canal, army and navy growth in the next century, and the part that the Pacific ocean is to play in the history of the next 100 years. On the subject of militarism, Gen. Kitchener spoke guardedly, for as he said, "One must be careful when a thoughtless word might be wrongfully taken to mean something one did not intend it to.

Canada's Military Future.

"Canada's military future? Well, that's hard to say. You see, I haven't visit d Canada. I see no aggressiveness in the future, so far as Canada is concerned. The little navy they are building up there is only that they may sleep a little easier o' nights. You know, you rest better with a 'Bobby' walking around the square. I suppose they will some day begin to increase the army there—just for the same reason, understand.

"I see no reason why international peace should not continue from this very moment," he continued. "One never knows, however, when something will stir up trouble and war does not often announce itself far in advance. It always pays to keep one's powder dry."

"Is that an expression of England's military policy?" Lord Kitchener was asked.

"Well, I wouldn't put it that broadly. England is at peace with all the world, but our surest safeguard of peace is always to be ready. Until such time as some international agreement shall be reached, if such there be, England will, by being ready at all times, lend that influence toward peace. I think I may say that in a general way without respect to my military position there."

Food the Great Peace Factor.

Asked what he considered the chief factor tending to international peace the general replied:

"Food. I think food is one of the first. Your Panama canal has come into the list now as a new factor also. You see, the nation whose food supply is cramped is restless and irritable. It wants to expand—it wants what the other fellow has. It was a comfort to my heart as a peace loving man (I really am, you know), to see broad acres of food-producing land in your country and to hear that Canada could duplicate it.

"The Panama canal was the best move your country ever made. It will bring your East and West close together and be a big factor not only in commerce, but in your military future."

Gen. Kitchener characterized the political aspect of the Pacific ocean as a hard question to answer. He sighed deeply, gazed out of the window for a moment, and replied slowly:

"I wish I knew what the future would bring forth for the Pacific. It is gratifying to us that the canal is being built at Panama, for that helps to simplify matters. But only by the movement of nations in the future can we tell what part the Pacific will take in history."

Navy Must Be Chief.

"My idea of the army and navy of the future," he continued in answer to another interrogation, "is that the navy must be of the first consideration Either in defense or offence the navy must take the initiative, but in pride of my army, let me add that they will have to depend upon the army before any nation can whip another.

LORD KITCHENER

"My whole view of the future is one made peaceably by force of arms. Even with international agreement for peace some force must exist to punish offenders."

"Did you read about Col. Roosevelt's speech in Egypt?"

"Oh! My boy!" he warned. Then he smiled. "No, I haven't heard about it yet."

Then he began asking questions about Chicago.

Hundreds of persons, chiefly Englishmen, crowded the station platform when the distinguished visitor arrived. One of them cried "Cheers for Kitchener of Khartum!" and they were given with a will. The recipient of the ovation seemed somewhat confused at the demonstration, but raised his hat in acknowledgement.

"Why, I thought I could just get over to my New York train without any fuss," he said smiling, as he turned to his "man" who was looking after the baggage.

After a brief ride about the city as the guest of Maj. Gen. Frederick D. Grand, Lord Kitchener boarded the Twentieth Century Limited for New York, where he expects to meet his brother, Frederick W. Kitchener, governor of Bermuda.

A hat must set right to look well—Gordon stiff hats in one-sixteenth sizes.

LYCEUM—Robert Edeson in "A Man's a Man."

"A Man's a Man."

Never before in his career as a popular star has Robert Edeson been provided with a role more entirely to his liking than in his latest vehicle, "A Man's a Man," a new play of contemporaneous American life, by Anna Steese Richardson and Henry Leslie Fridenberg, which will be seen for the first time at the Lyceum tonight.

"A Man's a Man," the action of which is laid in New York city and in the capitol of a Western state conspicuous in the public eye just at present because of the elasticity of its divorce laws, introduces Mr. Edeson in the role of a wealthy young New Yorker of good birth and social position, who, practicing law as a hobby, is retained by a rich mine owner to persuade a Western legislature into the passage of a law that will enable him to satisfy social ambitions born of his sudden rise to wealth and power. Because of the frank and daring manner in which the play deals with legislative corruption and dishonest divorce laws, "A Man's a Man" has evoked considerable discussion in every city in which it has been seen, and has been pronounced by critics as one of the most admirable plays of recent seasons.

Mr. Edeson's local engagement is notable for the fact that it will introduce to lovers of strong plays and fine acting one of the most carefully selected and evenly balanced acting organizations that any manager has formed in the past few years. Prominent in the exceptional cast that Manager Henry B. Harris has provided for Mr. Edeson's present tour are Miss Josephine Lovett, who scored a sensational hit as "Shirley Rosemore" in the original production of "The Lion and the Mouse" in New York city; Menifee Johnstone, well remembered for his brilliant work in "The Squaw Man," and such other well-known players as Joseph Rawley, Howard Hall, Lawrence Windom, James Grady, Blanche Weaver, Helen Macbeth, Maggie Holloway Fisher, Cordelia Macdonald, Eleanor Sheldon and Elsa Lorimer.

"The Girl of the Golden West."

"The Girl of the Golden West," from the pen of David Belasco, and in which he is presenting his own company at the Lyceum on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings, is in four acts, and these are produced in two striking stage pictures depicting California scenery in the days of its earliest settlement. As Mr. Belasco is a native of California, the drama should breathe the spirit of its locale. The plot is said to be full of highly dramatic situations. In description of the play this paragraph from an early history of California is quoted:

"In those days people coming from—God knows where, joined forces in that far Western land, and according to the rude custom of the camp, their very names were soon lost and unrecorded. Here they struggled, laughed, gambled, cursed, killed, loved and worked out their strange destinies in a manner incredible to us today. Of one thing only are we sure—they lived."

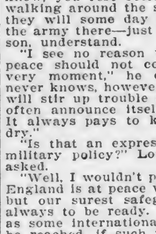
HOUSE ASKS ABOUT FRAUDS.

Calls on President to Tell Why Sugar Cases Should Halt.

Washington, April 15.—The president yesterday was requested to send to congress any facts in his possession which might make inadvisable any investigation of the sugar trust frauds, unless in his judgment such action might be incompatible with the interests of the public service.

A speech by Mr. Rainey of Illinois, dealing with the sugar trust and charging that Attorney General Wickersham and Henry W. Taft, brother of the president, had certain legal connections with the trust, attracted considerable attention.

Mr. Olmstead of Pennsylvania announced that the secretary of war had sent to the committee on expenditures in the treasury department various information concerning the sale of Friar lands in the Philippine islands, which he laid before the house. This information was in response to a resolution that had been introduced by Mr. Martin of Colorado, who had claimed that by means of illegal sales, large tracts of sugar lands had come into the possession of the sugar trust.



Senate Talks Railroads.

After devoting two hours to the railroad bill, the senate laid aside that measure until Monday. The only amendment adopted was the one prohibiting the interstate commerce commission from exercising jurisdiction over routes which are entirely by water.

The senate passed the Warren bill authorizing the government to dispose of surplus irrigation water.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

De Forest, Wis.—"After an operation four years ago I had pains downward in both sides, backache, and a weakness. The doctor wanted me to have another operation. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my troubles."—Mrs. AUGUSTE VESPERMANN, De Forest, Wisconsin.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

If you want special advice about your case write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

MAYOR SEIDEL TO QUIT HIS BUSINESS

His Employes to Run His Private Affairs Sharing in Profits.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 15.—Mayor-elect Emil Seidel will retire on Monday next from the secretary-treasurership of a business concern to devote his entire time to the duties of his position.

His private business will be conducted by his employes and they will divide the profits, so Mr. Seidel said in response to an inquiry.

For two years, Emil Seidel will be mayor of the city and Emil Seidel, citizen and comrade.

Told His Employes First.

Some days ago Alderman Seidel told his employes of his intention to turn the business over to their management during the time he is chief executive of Milwaukee. But is is characteristic of the man that he did not tell any one else. In his own mind, he had come to the conclusion that the matter was one which concerned only himself and his employes and was of no particular interest to the general public.

That the general public is vitally interested in Mayor-elect Seidel's plans, is evidenced by the inquiries concerning him made not only by residents of Milwaukee, but by hundreds of people from outside this city and outside the state of Wisconsin.

Union Teamster Killed.

Kansas City, Mo., April 15.—As a result of ill feeling engendered by a strike of the icemen, W. F. Bailey, a union teamster, was killed by W. O. Baker, a non-union worker. Baker used a pair of ice tongs as a weapon.

S. S. S. A REAL CURE FOR BLOOD DISEASE

S. S. S. is a real cure for Contagious Blood Poison because it is a real blood purifier. We all realize that this disease is a specific blood infection of the most powerful nature, the virus of which so thoroughly poisons the corpuscles of the circulation that its symptoms are manifested over almost the entire body. First comes a tiny sore or pimple, then the mouth and throat ulcerate, the glands in the groin swell, the hair begins to fall out, skin diseases break out on the body, sores and ulcers appear, and even the bones ache with rheumatic pains. It is reasonable to believe that in a blood poison so powerful as this that only a blood purifier can have any permanent good effect. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers; it goes into the circulation and by thoroughly cleansing the blood of every particle of the insidious virus makes a permanent and lasting cure of Contagious Blood Poison. It does not hide or cover up the disease in the system but it entirely removes the last trace of its destructive germs. If you are suffering with this disease S. S. S. will cure you because it will cleanse your blood and enrich its health-promoting corpuscles. S. S. S. is made entirely of healing, cleansing roots, herbs and barks, and is a medicine so absolutely safe and certain in its results, that everyone may cure themselves at home, and be assured the cure will be permanent and lasting. Rain Facilitates Work of Census Enumerators in Duluth.

Duluth People Show Disposition to Help Census Workers.

The fact that the taking of the census begins on Friday doesn't trouble Byron L. Hollister, supervisor of the census, or J. W. Allen, assistant supervisor for St. Louis county. They are both "Friday men."

Mr. Hollister was born on Friday, moved to Minnesota on Friday, his commission was signed by President Taft on Friday, Aug. 13, and he doesn't think any misfortune can come by beginning the taking of the census on Friday.

Mr. Allen moved to Duluth on Friday, was appointed to a state position on Friday, was appointed a deputy by Sheriff Bates on Friday, was appointed assistant supervisor of the census on Friday.

The census begins in Duluth on Friday and it will end on Friday, fifteen days being given for the work.

The taking of the regular decennial federal census began all over the United States today. In a downpour of rain the Duluth enumerators started out to do their work. They didn't mind the rain very much. In fact, one of the enumerators looked at the falling drops before he started out and remarked:

"I always like to do a job like this on a rainy day. The rain keeps people at home and it's easier to get them than on a fine day."

He was a personal property assessor once.

The enumerators who began work this morning will be called in during this afternoon and tonight to have their books inspected by the supervisor and his assistant. Any errors will be corrected, and if further instructions are necessary they will be given.

Assistance Readily Given.

Mr. Hollister is pleased with the assistance that is being given him in Duluth.

"We haven't asked a person to help us without receiving ready and cheerful response," he said this morning. "The Commercial club, the real estate exchange, the schools, churches, hotel keepers, employers of labor, managers of boat lines and everybody else to whom we have appealed, have given us courteous treatment and have promised to do everything in their power to help us. I believe the census in Duluth this year will be as nearly accurate as it is possible to make it."

The population of Duluth will not be known at the completion of the census, for local census officials are not allowed to give out information of any kind. Everything will have to be forwarded to Washington, and the census bureau will give out the results of the compilations.

The results will be reported much earlier this year than ever before. The census bureau is provided with machines that will allow rapid calculations, and the population of cities will be out very soon after the census is completed. The bureau will not wait for all results, but will make public the results as rapidly as they are obtained, it is said.

JOB FOR SIXTEEN THOUSAND MEN

Safety Devices Will Be Installed in Coal Mines of Illinois.

Chicago, April 15.—The 16,000 men needed to install safety devices, as required by recent legislative enactment, in the 800 coal mines of Illinois will be furnished by the mine workers at a wage advance of 5.55 per cent.

This agreement was reached here today between the state executive board of the United Mine Workers of Illinois and the executive board of the Illinois Coal Operators' association. It is stipulated that the advance is for the repair work only and is granted without prejudice to future negotiations covering the entire Illinois field. Under the law the fire proof equipment, electrical fire signals and other safety appliances must be placed in the mines by July 1, hence the large number of men needed.

The extension of the closed shop principle to the Coal Operators' association was ratified at today's meeting. The miners' committee included in this agreement a promise not to work for operators not a party to this agreement except in the installation of safety devices.

NEW FIELD GUNS ARE HARD TO GET

War Department Makes Strict Rules Where Militia Secure Them.

Washington, April 15.—Several states are anxious to obtain the new 3-inch field artillery guns and equipment. In answer to applications, the war department has informed the national guard officials that it is the policy to provide this expensive and complicated material to batteries of the organized militia only when adequate personnel and satisfactory armories are provided with competent mechanician as caretaker.

Answering inquiries, the department has ruled that transportation of rations, tentage, bedding, field range, and mess equipment for officers attending the annual camp of instruction for infantry officers may be charged against a state's allottment, but no allowance can be made for the transportation of servants and unenlisted cooks.

And they all have their shoe repairing done at the Gopher.

DIVER FORMED HABIT OF SLEEPING UNDER WATER AND HAD TO RESIGN

Jack Archambeau, who is now in the insurance business, in which occupation he has need of a gift for conversation, formerly was a diver on the Great Lakes. Frequently he converses about that time and about the marvelous things that happen to divers in divers' places.

Several days ago Archambeau was lounging on a settee in the Lenox hotel lobby. The general quietness of things apparently had a depressing effect on him, for he began to talk and to gesticulate with notable vivacity. Naturally, this fact attracted an audience, and Archambeau told a story about dives—the dives he has made as a diver.

After quite a long spell of elocution on the part of the narrator, the crowd that had pressed about him with eagerly listening ears was seen to fall back and disperse with suddenness, but that proved not the least bit disconcerting to the ex-diver. He probably believed that he had simply got beyond the depth of his hearers. It was clearly observable, at any rate, that he had got beyond something, and one of the dazed gentlemen explained later that he had got past belief.

Pressed for an explanation, several of the hotel habitues grouped close together and casting occasional nervous glances in the direction of the nonchalant Mr. Archambeau, repeated this story they had heard falling in dulcet periods from the lips of the ex-diver:

"When I was a diver I had only one fault that ever caused any trouble between me and the people I worked with. I would go to sleep. Get up in time for breakfast? Well, yes, I should say. Got up in time for breakfast regularly and went to work, too, but I'd go to sleep after I got to work. No, not on the boat. After I got down into the lake, down on the bottom. I'd be so pleasantly lulled by the sweet quietude of my environment that I'd just naturally fall into complete sympathy with my immediate surroundings. You know, it's said that still waters run deep. Well, a man standing down there at the lake bottom, or sitting down on some pleasantly contrived seat that wonderful nature provides, can sleep just as deep as any still water can run.

"I got into the habit of sleeping so comfortably down below that I didn't attempt to do much sleeping out of business hours after awhile. I'd hear the bells ringing sometimes, and when they yanked the signal lines strongly enough I'd maybe wake up. It got so in the end that they bothered me so much trying to keep me awake that I quit the business.

"Most divers get into just that habit—"

It was at this point that the crowd succumbed.

DRAWN TO TRY HIS OWN MURDER CASE

Defendant's Name Drops From Jury Wheel at Uniontown, Pa.

Uniontown, Pa., April 15.—B. Frank Smith, a farmer, in jail here awaiting trial for the killing of his father and brother-in-law has been drawn as a member of a jury panel to try himself. A jury wheel for the selection of the June jurors was used and Smith's name was the first slip to fall from the device.

After a lengthy discussion the court decided that the name could be legally thrown out.

MAN AND GIRL BURN; WOMAN AND BOY SAFE.

Morgantown, W. Va., April 15.—In a fire which destroyed their home early today, Luther C. Johnson and his 3-year-old daughter were cremated before they could make their way through the flames. Mrs. Johnson and a 2-year-old son escaped. The mother hurled a chair through a window and threw her child to firemen below, jumping afterward herself.

SAYS HE HAS FOUND FRAUD

John F. Roche Reports on Consolidated Casualty Company Affairs.

Minneapolis Man Among Directors Who Held Office Illegally.

Charleston, W. Va., April 15.—That the active managers of the Consolidated Casualty company, before its reorganization here last week under the direction of the insurance department of West Virginia, collected $757,114 in one year and nine months, of which only $191,637 remains and that they made false entries in the books of the company and false returns to the insurance department of the state, are among the charges contained in the report of John F. Roche of New York, consulting actuary to the insurance department, which was made public today.

The actuary found that the entire management of the company was in the hands of Robert B. Armstrong, president; C. H. Burras, vice president; and A. S. Mitchell, secretary and treasurer, as officers, and Armstrong, Burras and Mitchell D. Folansbee as the executive committee.

Has Been Reorganized.

The company was chartered in West Virginia about two years ago. The administrative offices have been in Chicago.

Three weeks ago, upon complaint of State Auditor John S. Darst, the directors turned the company over to Darst for adjustment. Early this week the stockholders reorganized by electing C. C. McChord of Louisville, Ky., president and J. Walter Scherr, deputy insurance commissioner of West Virginia, general manager.

The report says that those having charge of the management of the company owned but fifteen shares of stock, and that was in the name of the president.

Boutelle a Director.

Though there was a resolution passed that directors must be stockholders, the fololwing directors are not shown on the books as stockholders:

M. H. Boutelle, Minneapolis, Minn.; C. H. Burras and Mitchell D. Follansbee, Chicago; H. W. Huttig, Muscatine, Ia.; Frank Nox, Salt Lake City; James R. Peabody, Denver, Colo.

Among the various charges made against the former officers is one that real estate in Chicago worth $15,000, was returned in the company's statement as worth $50,000. The property cost the company $11,500.

SOME STREETS THAT ONE SELDOM HEARS OF.

Duluth has many streets and avenues with which the average citizen is not conversant. Several of them appeared this morning on the records of the building inspector's office. One permit called for improvements on Heaven avenue between Orange and Lemon streets; another for dwelling on Vinland avenue between Portal and Midway streets; and a third for a foundation on Vernon street between Atlantic and Pacific avenues.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

A news item of much interest to Duluth women relates to the resignation of Mrs. Frances Squire Potter as secretary of the National Women's Suffrage association. Mrs. Potter was a member of the faculty of the English department of the Minnesota university before her resignation last autumn to take up active suffrage work. Mrs. Potter resigned the secretaryship according to information given out at the university because there was too much politics connected with it.

Duluth women have been particularly interested in Mrs. Potter's work this year as she was engaged by the Twentieth Century club of Duluta for a full series of three lectures during the year. The lectures were postponed from the autumn until later in the year and have since been unavoidably postponed several times, the last time because of Mrs. Potter's serious illness at Chicago. It is yet hoped that she will be heard in Duluth this spring and in view of her recent action her ideas on women's suffrage would be of particular interest.

ASSEMBLY DANCE.

Post-Lenten Affair at the Spalding.

The Post-Lenten Assembly will be danced this evening at the ballroom of the Spalding, and in spite of the weather, the affair promises to be largely attended, for Duluth has been languishing under a season marked only by the absence of delightful affairs, so every event is welcomed with more than ordinary enthusiasm. This will be the last of the assembly affairs until the mid-summer party. La Brosse's orchestra will play and the decorations will be suggestive of the springtime.

HINTS FOR THE BOUDOIR

By MILDRED WYCKOFF

Secret of Retaining Beauty.

One of the wonders connected with women who are famous on the stage is the fact that they so long retain their beauty. One of these women is Julia Marlowe. Her methods are simple, and she gets close to nature by spending much of her time in a bungalow in the heart of the woods. Although she entertains some, she makes sure to get plenty of rest and solitude. But she also thinks exercise does much to keep the complexion beautiful and the figure graceful and true. She takes turns riding horseback, driving in a motor car, wielding the racquet and playing golf with the spirit of an enthusiast. Her advice is "Let the woman who wishes to keep her beauty do these things, ride horseback, walk, take plenty of rest in a hammock and entertain a few congenial people."

White Spots on the Nails.

"I take great pride in keeping my nails nice, but do not know what to do to remove the white spots that sometimes appear on them," Elgie B. writes. White spots on the nails are generally caused either by knocks on the nails or by a bad state of general health. That indicates that good nourishing food, plenty of fresh air and moderate exercise are required to build up the vitality. Rub a little lanoline into the nails to nourish them, and counteract any tendency to brittleness.

Removal of Freckles.

"Can you tell me a cure for freckles?" Flora G. inquires. You should try parsley and lemon. Parsley water is made by pouring sufficient boiling water over parsley to cover it. Allow it to stand until cool then strain the water off, and it is ready for use. Bathe the face with this, and then apply a little lemon juice.

How to Reduce the Waist.

"Please tell me how I can reduce the size of my waist" is the request of Laura V. You can only reduce the size of your waist by exercise, and the following will prove helpful: Place the hand on the hips and stand erect. Take a long, deep breath, and gradually exhale, then try bending from the waist as far as possible to the right, and then to the left. Practice these movements five times each, twice daily.

DAY'S BEST STORIES

You Can't Astonish an American.

"The Americano tourist is a source of wonder as well as of profit to the European guides," Mr. Joseph H. Choate remarked, apropros of the increased exodus across the Atlantic, which is expected this summer. "I heard a good story of a typical American upon whom an enthusiastic guide was impressing the wonders of Vesuvius.

"'Ah, sir,' the guide exclaimed, 'you will find no such spectacle as that in all your grand America!'

"'Maybe,' replied the American, 'but we have a waterfall over there that would put that fire out in about five minutes!'"

Why One Man Went Afloat.

"There isn't quite so much romance in a sailor's life as people imagine who have never tried it," said Admiral "Bob" Evans, speaking of some recent tragedies of the sea, "although I have no fault to find with my own experience."

"Would you be willing to go through it again?" he was asked.

"Probably I would. And yet I never heard of but one man who had a really good reason for going afloat."

"And who was that, admiral?"

"Noah," was the unexpected reply. "If that old duffer had tried to stay on dry land he would have been drowned!"

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

Causes and Cure of Nettlerash.

Nettlerash is an outbreak of whitish-pink spots suddenly appearing on the skin and attended by intense itching. The great majority of cases are the result of some disorder of the digestion. Such different articles of diet as sausage, pork, nuts, mussels, lobsters and oatmeal, always bring on the trouble in certain individuals. In some cases medicines taken for other complaints bring out similar irritating wheals. In severe, acute outbreaks an emetic of mustard and water should be taken immediately to relieve the stomach of the offending substance. A full dose of purgative salts will complete the process. A milk diet for twenty-four hours is usually the only additional treatment necessary. The only way to avoid attack is to find out by experience just what articles of diet cause the trouble, and to avoid these. To relieve the harassing itching the following lotion may be tried: Thymol, two teaspoonfuls; liquor potassa, two teaspoonfuls; glycerine, one teaspoonful; water, one pint. Sop on the irritating spots with this. When the wheals suddenly appear all over the body considerable relief from the general discomfort, as well as from the intense itching, may be obtained from a hot alkaline bath made by adding one-quarter of a pound of ordinary washing soda to twenty gallons of hot water. After the bath dry the skin very gently, as rubbing down with a rough towel is apt to make a new crop of wheals appear.

Treatment of a Bunion.

A good method of treating a bunion is to draw the deformed toe to the inner line of the foot and to keep it in this position by means of a strapping. Apply a poultice to the part each night at bed time until the pain and inflammation have gone. Then paint the part each night and morning with tincture of iodine. Wear broad-toed, low-heeled, wide-welted, well-fitting boots.

Prevention of Stoutness.

To reduce or prevent stoutness take after each meal a tablespoonful, in a like quantity of water, of the following mixture: Acid acetic dil., 6 drachms; tinct. gention, 4 drachms; aq. chloroform, 10 ounces. Avoid all fats, milk, puddings, farinaceous foods, sugar, potatoes and stimulants; eat the lean of meat, brown bread and well-cooked, fresh green vegetables. Drink a tumblerful of hot water each night on going to bed and each morning on rising.

To Prevent Falling Hair.

In case of the hair falling out, where no disease of the scalp is present, a good hair tonic may help. The scalp should be thoroughly massaged with the fingers for ten minutes, and the hair tonic then rubbed well into the roots of the hair. Some weeks of this treatment should show a marked improvement in the hair's condition.

IN THE NURSERY

How Children Should Sleep.

Train children to lie perfectly flat on the mattress. It is the correct position, and their sleep will be more natural, their bodies healthier and their backs straighter than if their heads were propped up by bolster or pillow; these can be gradually taken away if already in use.

To Make the Hair Grow.

Washing the child's head with a lather of pure soap once a week will cause the hair to grow well. Only the purest soap should be used, however, and once a week is sufficiently often.

Open Air Good for Babies.

A delicate baby can often be made perfectly strong by living in the open air. It need not be moved about all the time. Stand the perambulator in a sheltered corner, and let baby sleep there.

Eating Between Meals.

Children should not be allowed to eat between meals, or at irregular intervals. It injures the digestion to be constantly eating, and it affects the appetite. A child eating a full meal with a good appetite should be trained to refrain from eating until meal time comes around again, and the result will be better results from the food eaten.

Rubbing for Weak Legs.

If there are indications of weakness in a child's legs a great improvement can be made by gentle rubbing. This should be done both morning and evening.

Raw Fruit Beneficial.

Raw fruit is most wholesome. The juice of an orange may be given to quite young children.

the EVENING STORY

LOVE BRIDGED THE CHASM.

By Ethel Boyd.

"Welcome to the Maples, Miss Raeburn."

"Thank you, Mr. Crake."

Only her uncle's lawyer was present to greet Elaine Raeburn as she entered into possession of her beautiful home overlooking the Hudson river. She had never expected to own it, nor to be mistress of the fortune that she inherited with it. Her uncle, Jefferson Maywood, had been at enmity with her parents until they died. Nor had he excepted her from the ill-will bestowed upon her parents. He had adopted George Maynard, the orphaned son of an old friend, and had declared his intentions of making him his sole heir. But he died intestate.

The law gave to Elaine Raeburn what her uncle would have denied to her. She had never met George Maynard. She bore him no good will under the circumstances, but she was piqued that he was not present with Mr. Clarke, the lawyer, to greet her. She commented on his absence.

"Mr. Maynard is absent on a visit to the head gardener, whose little daughter is dangerously ill," Mr. Clarke explained. "He will return soon."

"Oh, I am glad he has some human nature in him," Miss Raeburn replied, somewhat bitterly. "It offsets in some measure his scheming and plotting for the possession of my uncle's estate."

"Pardon me! You do him an injustice," said the lawyer. "Mr. Maynard is the soul of honor and one of the grandest fellows in the world! Ah, here he comes."

A tall, handsome young man of athletic build, coming up the path to the door, raised his hat as Miss Raeburn turned.

"I must apologize for not being here to welcome you, Miss Raeburn," he said.

"Oh, I can pardon you," she answered, almost with a sneer. "I presume you were not at all anxious to be the first to greet so unwelcome a person as myself."

"Why unwelcome?" Maynard asked in surprise at both her manner and words.

"Need you ask? My uncle's hatred for me and mine would have been your gain had he not died intestate. Is that not sufficient reason?"

"No," Maynard quietly replied. "The mere fact that I expected to benefit to some extent by your uncles death, and have been disappointed, would not justify me in harboring resentment against one more favored. I shall not even intrude upon you long, but would ask the privilege of remaining here until Saturday to arrange for my removal."

"As you please," was Miss Raeburn's stiff reply.

When Maynard parted from her on entering the house, Miss Raeburn's conscience smote her.

"Perhaps I have misjudged him after all," she said to herself. "I will try to make amends."

But the exquisite appearance she presented when the two met at the dinner table failed to arouse him from the cool civility with which he met all her attempts to be more gracious than at their first meeting.

"Won't you come into the drawing room, Mr. Maynard?" she said as they rose from the table.

"Thank you! But you must excuse me, Miss Raeburn. I have some letters to write," he said.

"There is a writing table in the drawing room," she suggested, smiling.

"You are very kind, but I could not think of intruding business in a lady's haunt." Maynard answered politely.

A hot agry flush spread over her face as she passed out of the room. Her attack on his passive neutrality had signally failed, and Elaine with all the arts of the coquette at the ends of her white fingers was not accustomed to fail.

The following morning, irritated by her inability at the breakfast table to draw him into a friendly conversation, she retired to the drawing room, and, seating herself at the piano, worked off her anger on a Mendelssoh sonata. The music had apparently the effect of soothing her ruffled feelings, for after a few minutes' playing she plunged into the rhythmic melody of a coon song.

Merely a popular music hall ballad, yet sung with such pathols that the tender accents of the singer's voice held Maynard spellbound on the threshold of the room. The melody at length ceased, and their eyes met— in him. The lovely face, lovelier than ever in its confusion and shame, was upturned to his. In the dark, violet eyes there was a mist of unshed tears.

"Is that not a sufficient reason, Miss Raeburn?" he asked in a strained voice, averting his head.

"Not when—as I told you—I listened to your conversation outside the door," she murmured, almost inaudibly. "You told Mr. Crake the true reason why you were making this sacrifice. Won't you tell me?"

"Do you realize what you are asking me to say?" he cried hoarsely.

"I am asking you to tell me that—that you love me!" she whispered.

For a brief moment there was silence; then Maynard gathered her up in his arms, and kissed the lips that had uttered those words, passionately again and again.

"Love you? Yes!" he said fervently. "How much, my dear one, it will take me all my life to tell!"

TRY THIS DINNER

Black Bean Soup.

Soak one quart of black beans for 12 hours. Boil them in three pints of water for two and a half hours, or until they are tender; then strain them through a fine white sieve. Replace on the stove and boil for ten minutes more, adding salt and pepper for taste. Now pour in a warm tureen and add two hard boiled eggs cut in slices and one lemon thinly sliced. Serve at once.

Meat—Creole Chicken.

One small chicken, one-half pound ham, one quart fresh okra, three large tomatoes, two onions, one red pepper, two tablespoonfuls flour, three quarts of boiling water, one bay leaf and salt.

In Louisiana especially, chicken gumbo is a much prized dish. When making it remember that the ham should be rather fat, the okra should be sliced thin, and if you have none that is fresh use a can; if you have no fresh tomatoes use a small can; every seed must be removed from the red pepper; the salt will be a matter of taste, although you will require about three teaspoonfuls.

After frying the ham take it out and brown the chicken slightly in the fat. When this has been done take the chicken up, and into the fat remaining in the pan, put the onions minced, the okra and flour. Cook for about twenty-five minutes, stirring frequently, taking care that the mixture does not burn. If there is not fat enough add a teaspoonful of butter. Pour the mixture into a soup pot; then rinse the frying pan with a little water and pour the water on the vegetables. Cut the pepper into small pieces and make sure that no seeds are left. Now add the ham, chicken, tomatoes, water, bay leaf and salt. Boil up once, then set back where dish will simmer for two hours. Stir every little while to prevent burning. Serve with plain boiled rice.

Vegetables—Stuffed Tomatoes.

Select firm, smooth tomatoes. Cut a slice from the stem end, and with a spoon dig out the insides, leaving just enough of the tomato in the skins to make them keep their shape firmly. Place the tomato pulp in a sieve, press out most of the juice, then turn into a mixture bowl; to it add one cupful of well-toasted bread crumbs, one half of ground nut meats, a little finely chopped parsley, sage or a little thyme, and salt. One teaspoonful of chopped onion may be added if desired. Fill the tomatoes with this mixture, heaping it up above the opening, and bake slowly. Serve plain or with a cream sauce or brown sauce.

Dessert—Grape Fruit Sherbet.

Scoop the pulp carefully from the fruit and separate it into small pieces; boil two cupfuls of sugar with one of water, to it add two teaspoonfuls of dissolved gelatine and two pints of water, and lastly two dozen chopped candied cherries; when cold, mix in one pint of fruit with juice. Freeze and serve in glasses decorated with cherries.

Ultra-Exclusive Hats

BY "Ultra Exclusive" we mean hats that are individual to the last detail. Hats that have a color-harmony and style-studied air about them that lend that individuality so much desired by smartly dressed women.

Prices are very interesting, too.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER

New maple sugar, 20 cents a pound.
Tomatoes, 30 cents a basket.
Radishes, 10 cents a bunch.
Potatoes, 40 cents a bushel.
Butter, 36 cents a pound.
Eggs, 24 cents a dozen.
Rhubarb.
Strawberries, 10 cents a box.

Tomatoes, unlike the sort of the minstrel show, that is, they are good, healthy, firm tomatoes, not weak or debilitated tomatoes, are to be had at reasonable prices. And that brings to mind the classic monologue of the almost colored gentleman. He said when you're hit by a brick something happens, but a tomato steals upon you unawares. It's quite true.

But people who are fond of tomatoes cut up on their lettuce, the whole dotted at intervals with busy little onions, and after that a dressing of palest amber oil combined with vinegar and a sprinkle of salt and a suggestion of paprika, those people are glad healthy tomatoes may be purchased for 30 cents a basket.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

PRESIDENT SEES GAME

Throws First Ball in Washington Diamond and Opens Season.

McAleer's Men Win From Philadelphia By Score of 3 to 0.

Washington, April 15.—President Taft yesterday enjoyed the noval experience of seeing the Washington American league team win a ball game, the team winning from Philadelphia, 3 to 0 in the opening game of the season. Last year he saw Washington play Boston late in the season, but the local players got stage fright when the president arrived and threw away the game. Mr. Taft remarked then that he must be a "hoodoo" and remained away from the ball park the rest of the season. Yesterday morning President Noyes of the Washington club went to the White House and presented Mr. Taft with baseball pass No. 1. Mr. Taft showed his appreciation by using it later in the day.

Accompanied by Mrs. Taft and his military aide, Captain Archie Butt, the president squeezed his way through the jam of baseball enthusiasts who had gathered at the park for the opening game of the season between Washington and Philadelphia.

Throws Out First Ball.

Mr. Taft took an active part in the game. Just before play was started, Umpire Billy Evans made his way to the Taft box in the right wing of the grand stand and presented the president with a new ball. The president took the ball in his gloved hand as though he were at a loss what to do with it until Evans told him he was expected to throw over the plate when he gave the signal. He handed the ball to Mrs. Taft, who weighed it carefully in her hand, while the president was doffing his bright new kid gloves in preparation for his stunt as a baseball pitcher.

The president watched the players warm up and a few minutes later shook hands with the managers, McAleer and Mack. When the bell rang for the beginning of the game, the president shifted uneasily in his seat, the umpire gave the signal and Mr. Taft raised his arm. Catcher Street stood at the home plate ready to receive the ball, but the president knew the pitcher was the man who usually began business operations with it, so he threw it straight to Pitcher Walter Johnson. The throw was a little low, but the pitcher stuck out his long arm and grabbed the ball before it hit the ground. The ball was never actually put in play, as it is to be retained as a souvenir of the occasion, as it was the first time a president of the United States had thrown out the first ball.

As the game progressed and Washington maintained the lead it took at the outset, the president became enthusiastic and repeatedly applauded the brilliant work of the young Washington pitcher. He insisted on remaining until the last Philadelphian had been retired.

Vice President Sherman, who rarely ever misses a game when he can get out of the line of running the senate, witnessed the contest from another box, and seemed to get as much satisfaction out of the victory as did the president.

Game Stubbornly Fought.

The game itself was stubbornly contested on both sides. Walter Johnson being the particular start. He held the visitors down to one lone hit, and as a result bases were never in danger. Plank, on the other hand, was hit hard, thirteen hits for a total of nineteen bases being Washington's batting record. Back of the pitchers the fielding was exceptionally clean and sensational.

In the first inning, doubles by Schaefer and Lelivelt scored the locals' first run. In the fifth the final two tallies were recorded. Johnson opened up with a terrific drive to the center field fence for two bases, and went to third when Milan beat out a slow bunt to Baker. Schaefer got a lucky two-bagger into the crowd in right field, and Johnson came across the plate. Lelivelt then hit a long fly to Murphy in right, Milan scoring.

The crowd entirely surrounded the playing field, and a two-base rule had to be adopted. Washington had the advantage in this, as the locals hit the ball hard, while the visitors seldom got the ball outside the diamond. Score:

Washington	3	13	1
Philadelphia	0	1	0

Chicago April 15.—Chicago defeated St. Louis yesterday 3 to 0 in the opening game of the season. Smith pitched a great game holding the visitors to one hit and only one St. Louis man reached second base. The winners played well in the field.

OPENING GAME GOES LONG DISTANCE TO TIE.

New York, April 15.—The New York and Boston Americans battled for fourteen innings yesterday until darkness stopped the game with the score 4 to 4 The contest was witnessed by an assemblage so large that thousands of spectators crowded onto the playing field.

In the early part of the game, the New Yorkers played poorly, and errors by Foster and Austin gave the Boston team what looked to be a safe lead. The locals started to rally during the third inning and drove him from the rubber in the eighth, when Wood took his place with men on third and first and none out.

The newcomer made a wild pitch on his first serve to Chase; Hemphill scored and Wolter went to third. Chase's sacrifice fly registered Wolter and tied the score. After this Wood held the local at his mercy. His work, however, was not as good as Vaughn's. The New York southpaw never faltered in the early innings and gained strength as the game progressed. He was not scored on after the fifth and struck out some of the visitors' strongest batsmen.

Lord and Hemphill led in stick work. Chase played a wonderful game at first for New York. Score: R. H. E.

AMERICAN LEAGUE CHAMPS LOSE FIRST.

Detroit, Mich., April 15.—Cleveland and Detroit see-sawed their way through a 10-inning game that finally was won in the overtime by the visitors, 9 to 7. The home team got away in the lead, but Cleveland went by in the seventh. Detroit tied it in the ninth, but four doubles and a single in the next inning gave Cleveland a four-run lead that Detroit's two-run tally could not meet. Joss started badly, but braced in the fourth and was unhittable until the ninth and tenth. Mullin lacked his speed and seemed overtrained. He was wild at the start and was hit often and hard from the fifth inning on. Crawford was the individual star, driving in four runs and scoring the one that tied it in the ninth, which he opened with a double. It was the best opening day weather by years and a new attendance record for an inaugural was set. Score:

HUGHES PITCHES AND BATS FOR VICTORY.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 15.—Minneapolis won the second game of the season and series yesterday through the excellent pitching of Hughes and his own hard hitting. The tall hurler drove in four runs with his triple and home run. He fanned eight men and kept the Kansas City hits well scattered. Good support enabled him to score a 6 to 0 shut-out. Brandon was found freely by the Millers. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Minneapolis	6	11	2
Kansas City	0	8	1

Batteries: Hughes and Smith; Brandon and Sullivan. Umpires—Ferguson and Owens.

HIGHLANDERS ARE COUNTING ON JACK QUINN THIS YEAR

JACK QUINN.

Jack Quinn is expected to be Chief Stallings' most reliable pitcher this season. With Lou Criger to coach him, Quinn says he will have a much better record than last year.

JEFFRIES IS 35 YEARS OLD

Birthday Observance Is Clouded By Illness of Mrs. Jeffries.

Ben Lomond, Cal., April 15.—Refreshed by his relaxation and diversion Wednesday afternoon James Jeffries returned to the training grind yesterday with more ginger in his work.

The first stunt on the program was three rounds of boxing with Bob Armstrong, the colored heavyweight. Commencing with defensive tactics in the first round to improve his speed and foot work, Jeffries, who is not much given to backing away, was soon chasing the big negro all over the ring. Armstrong was glad when it was over.

Jeffries' speed was a trifle better than last Monday, but it was evident he still needs a lot of boxing practice to be anything like his former self. Bag punching and handball followed and when the exercises were over, the perspiration fairly poured from him.

Fast as Jeffries appeared, Manager Sam Berger thought the undefeated champion was a bit off in his work.

"He's worried," said Berger, "and I know his heart was not in anything he did this afternoon. It may have seemed to the casual onlooker that he showed plenty of ginger and life, but I know him too well."

Jeffries is much worried over the impending operation on his wife. Mrs. Jeffries, accompanied by Dick Adams, left last night for Oakland, where she is to undergo the operation Saturday morning. Her illness and departure has cast a gloom over him and put an end to plans of a party last night in honor of Jeffries' birthday. He is 35 today, according to Berger.

MARION MAY NOT RETURN

Roger Bresnahan Wants Good Sum for Former Duluth Twirler.

Chief Roger Bresnahan of the St. Louis National league team, is attempting to hold Duluth up for a piece of money on the return of Marion to the White Sox. The leader of the Cardinals wants $200 more for the return of Marion than he paid into the treasury of the local club for the purchase of the player.

Unless Bresnahan lightly vaults from his high and lofty stand, he will probably have to find some other means of disposing of the big twirler.

Marion could be used here and might be weclomed to the squad, but after Bresnahan offering to return the player and then wiring that he wanted an exorbitant price for his return, there will be nothing doing on the deal.

DULUTH DEFEATS WESTERN RESERVE COLLEGE TEAM.

Duluth won the third game of the preliminary practice season Tuesday, defeating the Wetern Reserve university by the score of 4 to 1. The game went seven innings. Howard and Kerney were on the firing line for the Sox, holding the college men down to five hits.

According to a letter received by Mr. Kuehnow today, all of the men are showing up very strong, the infield working very well for so early in the season.

Anderson is doing all of the ctaching so far. Buchinsky is not in shape as yet and has failed to show what may be expected of him. The men are all hitting the ball, as the three games played at Cleveland will show.

Hilltops Want Games.

Chance's Men Blanked in Hard Fought Contest at Cincinnati.

Reds Score Winning Run in Close Finnish in Tenth.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 15.—Before a crowd that taxed the limits of the seating and standing capacity of League park, the Cincinnati team defeated the Chicago team by a score of 1 to 0 in the opening game of the season yesterday. Chicago succeeded in reaching third base but twice. Cincinnati also reached third twice, the last time Mitchell coming over with the winning run in the tenth. Mitchell started the scoring with a single. Egan was safe when Steinfeldt threw his grounder to Chance low. Mitchell advanced to third on McCabe's outfield fly and scored when Downey singled.

WORLD'S CHAMPIONS WIN FROM ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, Mo., April 15.—Pittsburg, the world's champions, won from the St. Louis Nationals in the first game of the season here yesterday by a score of 5 to 2. Wagner was the star and made a three-base hit in the third inning, which resulted in bringing in the first two runs for his team. The grandstand and the new bleacher seats were filled and because of the crowd on the field, the two-base rule for hits prevailed. Umpire Johnstone ejected newspaper photographers from the field. DOVES NOSE OUT VICTORY IN ELEVENTH.

Boston, April 15. — Apparently doomed to defeat, the local National league team rallied in the ninth inning, tying the score and finally winning out from New York in the eleventh inning by a score of 3 to 2, in the opening game of the season yesterday. The contest was characterized by sensational fielding, daring base-running, and the work of the pitchers. Ames and Mattern for seven innings had an even battle. In the seventh New York scored a run on two hits and again in the eighth on a three-base hit and an out. The locals scored once in the eighth on two hits, a sacrifice and an error, and tied the score in the ninth by a batting rally. They won in the eleventh when Devlin fumbled a hard grounder with a man on third and two out.

The usual flag-raising ceremony and band concert preceded the game. Mayor Fitzgerald threw out the first ball. President Tom Lynch of the National league watched the game.

PHILLIES BLANKED IN PITCHERS' DUEL.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 15.—Brooklyn won the opening game of the National league season here yesterday afternoon from Philadelphia by 2 to 0. The largest crowd that had witnessed an opening-day game at Philadelphia park in many years saw the contest, a pitcher's duel between Rucker and McQuillen. The latter kept Brooklyn's hits scattered except in the third inning, when Bergren scored on his triple and Burch's single and in the ninth inning when Wheat scored on doubles by himself and Lennox. Lennox was the batting star of the occasion with two singles and a double. Each pitcher struck out seven batsmen, Rucker fanning Grant three times and McGee twice. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Brooklyn	2	7	1
Philadelphia	0	2	0

Batteries—Rucker and Bergren; McQuillen and Jacklitsch. Umpires—Rigler and Emslie.

CONKLIN WINS HARD CONTEST.

New York, April 15.—Charles F. Conklin of Chicago won last night one of the keenest contest played so far in the national amateur 18.2 balk line billiard tournament at the Hamilton club of Brooklyn. He defeated Joseph Mayer of Philadelphia by twelve points in thirty-one innings, by a score of 400 to 388. In defeating the clever player he annexed the high average to date, assuring himself of second prize.

DOYLE IS HITTING FAST CLIP

DOYLE.

Larry Doyle is starting off at a great rate this season. He is batting with his old time vigor and his fielding is right up to the mark. He is one of the best second baseman in the game. This is his third season with the Giants.

MINNY LEAGUE NOTES

Carl Bond, who will act as manager of the Wausau Lumberjacks the present season, has declined the offer of Manager McCloskey of the Milwaukee club, who wanted to turn First Baseman Schause over to the Wausau team.

Bond took a pleasant jaunt down to the Foam City, just to permit his illuminating and discerning gaze to rest upon the man McCloskey was endeavoring to find a berth for. He returned to Wausau with the statement that Schause was too slow for any team in the Minnesota-Wisconsin league, was, in fact, a joke of large and broad meaning.

The turn down of Schause probably means that "Biddy" Dolan will perform on the initial sack for the Lumberjacks. While not the fastest player in the wide world, the old boy can slam the pellet and played good ball for Wausau last season. Unless some very promising candidate shows up, Dolan looks sure of the place.

In La Crosse it is feared that Harry Tracey, he with the classical outlines of the toothpick, is attempting to trick the management of the team into sending him a free ticket from the West. The player at the present time is on the coast. He is in bad with the Fresno, Cal., club, and has written to La Crosse for transportation.

It is intimated in the La Crosse papers that the tall boy may have prepared a trick to make the Fresno club increase his salary, and that La Crosse is the goat of the deal. Under the suspicious circumstances, transportation has not been forwarded to the player.

Tracey broke away from La Crosse when that club went into the Minnesota-Wisconsin league. Since that time he has been playing on the coast.

Mique Malloy of Red Wing is on the trail of Welch, said to be one of the fast catchers of the Chicago semi-professional league. Malloy has seen Welch work and believes he will make a valuable backstop for the Indians. It is expected that Mique will succeed in persuading Welch to attach his signature to a Red Wing contract.

Johnson and Chase, the latter an Indian, who were signed by the Minneapolis club this spring, and who have been working out at Des Moines, have been placed on the Chutes, as it is believed they were turned over to Rochester, where they should make good from the start.

The pitchers were considered promising enough for Cantillion to attach strings to. If they make a good showing in the Minny league the present season they will be turned back to Minneapolis next spring.

"Russ" Bailey, center fielder for the Eau Claire team last season, and the present season with the Milwaukee team, caused unexpected joy by turning up in Eau Claire last Tuesday. The citizens hastily formed in fours and marched to the music of a volunteer band to welcome home the prodical.

Their joy was shortlived, however. It was discovered that "Russ" was not returning to play with the Schoonboverites, but was merely coming home for a short visit before the opening of the American association season.

They believed for a while that there was a chance for Bailey returning to the team. He has cinched a position on the Milwaukee team, apparently, and there seems not even the remotest chance that he will be seen back in the Minny league.

It has been suggested that the Eau Claire team be called the "Commissioners." J. B. Fleming, the secretary and treasurer of the Eau Claire team, is the first mayor of Eau Claire under the commission form of government. It is therefore proposed to honor him by calling the team after the new municipal form of city government adopted by the city.

Superior fans are confident that O'Dea has gathered together a team that will be in the race all the way. The showing of the team on the present trip has been the best of any of the minor league teams. The new men are showing up very well and there is every indication of a well-balanced bunch.

All of which leads the Superior fans to wail and sigh—"Oh for Koepping."

SAILOR WAS TOO STRONG

Wears Down Clever Billy Schober in Gruelling Match.

Wins After Losing First Fall ---Person Throws Adamson.

In a hard and gruelling match, in which rugged strength and endurance were matched against skill and science Sailor Jack of this city last night at the Lyceum, defeated Billy Schober of Broad Ripple, Ind., winning two falls after the little German had pinned the shoulders of the Sailor to the mat for the first fall.

The first fall was won by Schober in 1:08:35 with a crotch and neck hold, while Jack took the next fall in 1:00:55 with a scissors hold and half nelson, and the third and deciding fall in 5:08 with a bar and arm hold.

While all credit must be given to the marine for the great showing he made last night, a showing that surprised even his most staunch followers, it should be stated that he outweighed the little Hoosier by some ten pounds. This strength and added weight told in the end. In the first hour of wrestling Schober was all over his man, out-wrestling and out-maneuvering his opponent. The Broad Ripple boy tired after the first hour and it was then that he began to slow in his work.

At no time in the first bout could the Sailor do much with the Indiana boy. He got behind him a few times, but Schober would quickly reverse the positions. Schober was on the aggressive most of the time during the first hour. He was working like a beaver most of the time, never letting up for a single instant in his work. The fall came in a mixup, the Sailor picking the Hoosier up and attempting to sling him bodily to the canvass. Schober turned like a cat and clamped on the hold that resulted in the first fall.

The Marine became more aggressive in the second bout. He went right after the boy from the suburbs of Indianapolis, never giving him a rest for a moment. It was seen by those on the stage that the little chap was tiring and he failed to work with the speed he showed in the first bout.

He failed to get out from under the Sailor with the ability he manfested in the first bout. The marine's game was to simply wear the German down, and for an hour he gruelled him over the mat.

Finally the marine caught Schober in a bad position and slowly secured a scissor to the body supplemented by a half nelson. The German made a game struggle against the fall, but his shoulders were pressed to the mat.

The third and deciding fall was quick and to the point. Schober was terribly used up from his terrific gruelling and fell an easy prey to a bar and arm hold.

The match was one of the most stubbornly contested ever staged in Duluth. It was for blood and there was considerable feeling between the two men. Feeling among the spectators even, was intense at times. The Sailor clearly showed that he is a bulldog and a hard man to beat. It will take a man at the top of the welterweight class to beat the marine, as was clearly demonstrated last night.

William Demetral, Greek heavyweight champion of the world, whose letter reached here Thursday morning, stating that he would get in that morning, and also telling what he would do to Adamson, telegraphed late in the afternoon that he would not be here.

Chris Person fortunately was in the city, having returned from his match in the Copper country, and he went on with Adamson.

Person agreed to throw the little Chicago man in an hour and accomplished the trick in exactly 45:55, with a bar and arm hold. Adamson proved tricky and as slippery as an eel; yet the great strength and superior weight of Person prevented Adamson from carrying into successful execution some of the danegrous holds he clamped on the Duluth man.

Adamson squirmed out of hold after hold, often going into reverse position when it seemed as if Chris had him in a bad way. Finally Chris slammed the veteran to the mat and clamped on the hold that brought the shoulders of the little wonder to the mat.

OLDFIELD AND DE PALMA TO MEET.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 15.—Barney Oldfield and Ralph De Palma are entered in a ten-mile stock chassis and a ten-mile free-for-all race at the motordrome this afternoon. It is the first time these speedy rivals have driven in the same contest at the new track. Oldfield is driving a car today with which he has made miles in 46 seconds, while De Palma's car has a record of a second better.

AS SEEN FROM THE SIDE LINES

(BY BRUCE.)

Welcome Baseball.

When Tom Lawson wrote of how "the game" got them, he was not thinking of baseball, but of stocks and investments. Some one with a pen of the energy of Tom's might also write of how the game gets them.

When you come right down to the fountain springs of youth and eternal joy, there is hardly a game like the good old game of baseball, which our papas and their papas before them used to play on the village lots. It is a game that has been handed down to us, and each year of achievement has but added fragrance to the memory of its beginning.

There is recreation and pleasure and health in baseball. It has something of the green fields, the running brooks and virgin forests in it—if you will permit of a poetic license. The game gives us opportunity and excuse to get out into the open air and fill our congested lungs with that life-giving ozone which they charge good money for in some of the more crowded cities.

The head of the house will go to the game, and often he will be surprised to see his office boy there, instead of at the funeral which he has been granted leave of absence to attend. The clerk finds a Saturday afternoon's pleasure in the game. He feels better for it, eats a better supper.

There is an inspiration to yell; you want to tell some of those ginks out there how to play. Was there ever man or boy who attended a baseball game but believed he knew more about the game than those playing it? You tell your street car neighbor all about it on the way from the park. You tell your wife more about it at the dinner table. You read about the game next day in the paper, living over the contest again.

Sure, betcher, baseball is a great game. We are glad it is here once more. There will be a lot of interest taken in the Jeffries fight; but there will be no abatement in the interest in the progress of baseball, even though a world's championship struggle is being staged.

The business man, the small clerk, even the idler will look at the paper to see the result of yesterday's game. There is something in the game that appeals to us all. The women like the game; they, too, read the sporting page to see the result of the diamond struggle.

It is a game clean and above suspicion; it is a game that depends upon brain and skill. The smallest men have made great names in the great national game. It is a contest that calls into play the wit, strategy and resourcefulness of opposing managers. It is, therefore, a game that appeals to the thinking masses.

Welcome home again to the stranger—we are glad to see him back. The fatted calf has been killed for the prodigal. The present season promises to be one in which King Baseball will increase the number of his subjects and increase his loving reign over the hearts of his many loyal followers.

Wait a While.

It's a good bet that Frank Klaus won't beat Bill Papke when the two meet on the coast May 14.

This Papke is tougher than a preacher's son. He smiles when he is punched and is ever ready with that thing that has a K. O. meaning in the record book.

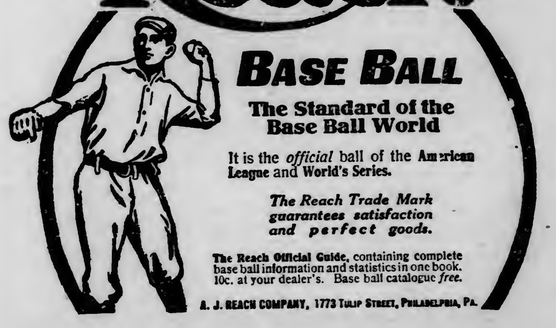
The other night in cultured Boston, the American headquarters of the educated bean, Frank Klaus, of smoky and sooty and municipally naughty Pittsburg, had a run in with James Gardner, Esq., of Boston. Gardner is a welterweight, while Frankie is one of these robust middleweights.

The affair went the full twelve rounds, with Klaus getting the decision at the end of the milling. It is a good bet that Billy Papke could have annihilated Gardner in that length of time. Maybe Klaus will do lots of things to Papke on the coast; yet, in the face of his showing against the going Gardner, it would appear as if Papke would make him appear as ill at ease as a country cuss a-callin' on her from the city.

There is a real quarrel in the middleweight division. We are going to have a settlement of the question of supremacy. If they will permit Langford to come into the middleweight yard and play, he should be the champion of the division before the scythe swings down on the present year.

Ketchel is such a foolish boy that it is hardly right to trust him with the title. There is a suspicion that he is on his way to the down and out club; leastwise his name has been proposed at the club. Papke has entirely recovered from the ailments that threatened to make him a has been, it would appear, and Klaus looks like a comer.

If Langford beats Ketchel Papke may be forced into meeting the dark visaged citizen of Boston. It might make a great fight; but really it is hard to figure where Billy has anything on the courageous coon.



Ketchel might beat the black demon, were he the Ketchel of old and absolutely right. They are many who believe Ketchel has passed the zenith of his ring usefulness. With Ketchel going back from the grand fighter he was, it does look like Langford all the way, from the barrier to the wire.

Darby Please Observe.

Now that Thomas Quincy Schoonhoven has taken unto himself a wife, we may naturally expect that Darby O'Brien, poet, traveler and chicken fancier, will watch the course of Tommy's cunnubial bliss with an eye open to details.

They say that Cupid has the manager of the Duluth team in a hole; has two on him, and that there is not a chance in the world for the Irish philosopher to escape the flight of the dart.

Darby is a wary sort of a cuss; he wants to look around a bit before facing the time when he must report home every evening and take orders from a manager who is managing a manager. Therefore, if fans see Darby and Thomas Quincy Schoonhoven in earnest conversation before a game at the park this summer, they may take it for granted that Darby, curious like, is asking "Schoony" for inside information.

"How is it, Thomas, me bye," you can almost hear Darby say, with that merry twinkle in his Chauncey Olcott chandeliers, "This gettin' married?"

And you can almost see, or hear the answer, of Schoonhoven, the honest Teutonic youth. With tears of earnestness in his German soul windows, he will whisper to dallying Darby that matrimony has the gay life of the cafe looking as forlorn and as wretched as the first baking powder biscuits wifey essayed and husband assayed.

With fond encouragement thus oozed into the ear of the bashful bachelor, it may happen that Darby, lover of liberty though he is, may enter the sunken identity league, and become one of those meek and humble things, sometimes called men.

How entertaining Darby could be, to some little wife, these long summer evenings. He has walked—we should say traveled—over most of the country, he has hosts of experiences, some of which he could tell. He is a brilliant conversationalist and has a true eye for the poetry of life.

TROUT FISHING SEASON OPENS

Boys Make Good Catches at Mouth of Lester River.

The trout fishing season opened today.

Every trout stream in the vicinity of Duluth will be whipped by a large number of anglers Sunday and there are a large number of local fishermen planning to go to the Gooseberry and Brule tomorrow afternoon.

There is a party of well-known St. Paul fishermen at the Brule at the present time. Never before in the history of fishing here, has the outlook for good sport been so promising. Every true fisherman has his tackle all ready and from now on there will be an exodus to the better known fishing streams.

This morning some boys were busy at the mouth of Lester river and several good catches were made.

DEMETRAL REACHES DULUTH BEHIND SCHEDULE TIME.

William Demetral, champion Greek heavyweight wrestler of the world, reached Duluth this morning, very much disgusted at his inability to reach here in time for the match last evening. Demetral made a mistake in the date, and though writing he would be here yesterday and later telegraphing that he would be on hand, he at the last moment somehow got the impression that the match was this evening.

Demetral was profuse in explanation, stating that he left Chicago with the firm intention of being here in time for the mtach.

Walter Burns, who carried on most of the negotiations for Demetral's appearance, has evidently made a slipup some place.

No one seemed more sorry than the big Greek, who is one of the finest looking men in the wrestling game. He is willing to do anything in his power to square himself with the officials of the athletic club—but there seems little that can be done.

The non-appearance of Demetral was unfortunate. It was simply the result of a mistake and through no fault of the athletic club officials.

Wants Another Match.

Cal Johnson, the featherweight wrestler, wants another match with Nels Wigard. Johnson claims he was in no condition when beaten by the Wigard chap before the Adams Athletic association. He states that he has been training ever since the match and is ready to show his friends that he can make a better showing if given another chance.

WHITE MAN IS BEATEN

Sam Langford Again Proves Ability as Fighting Machine.

James Barry Takes Count in Sixteenth Round After Game Fight.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 15.—In a battle which demonstrated again the ability of Sam Langford of Boston as a human fighting machine and added to the reputation of Jim Barry of Chicago only a tribute to gameness and ability to withstand punishment, the "Boston Demon" sent his white antagonist to the mat for the final count in the sixteenth round at the Vernon arena yesterday.

It was a vicious go from start to finish with the negro well in the lead after the first six rounds. From the tenth, in which Barry twice went down for the count of nine until the sixteenth, when a straight left to the chin ended the combat, it was wholly one-sided. Langford landed upon his man almost at will and victory by the knockout route appeared only a matter of time.

Barry surprised the ringside crowd with the strength he displayed, despite the terrific bombardment and a rally in the fifteenth inspired his backers with the hope that he would yet outlast Langford. The men did not weigh in before entering the ring, and it was said that there was a difference of thirty pounds favoring the white man. Barry's weight was given as 196 and that of Langford as 166. In the clinches the white man showed far the stronger of the two, being cautioned by the referee several times for rough tactics at close range.

The two fighters went at one another viciously at the sound of the gong for the first round. There was slam-bang fighting at close range in the second and both men were bleeding at the mouth when they went to their corners.

Terrific Slugging.

In a clinch near the end of the third round, Barry almost threw Langford through the ropes. From then until the eighth the milling was a mixture of terrific slugging, rallies and in-fighting, Barry throwing the negro around roughly in the clinches and undergoing severe punishment, whenever they fought at long range.

Several times during the eight succeeding rounds, the men were hooted for wrestling. Langford showed the utmost good nature.

"Stop your tickling," he admonished during a clinch, "you can't win that way."

Langford cut loose after the eighth round and was constantly trying for a knockout. Barry fought back gamely and at times rushed his lighter opponent to the ropes.

In the tenth the negro executed a coup in ring tactics. Getting Barry near the ropes, he suddenly exerted all his strength and threw the white man against them, catching him on the rebound, landed a terrific swing flush on the jaw. Barry dropped for the count of nine. After that it was only a question of how long Barry could stand punishment. His left eye, cut open early in the fight, was almost closed; his cheeks were puffed and blood flowed in a stream from his nose and mouth.

The last four rounds were marked by a succession of slugging matches. It was during one of these hard rushes in the sixteenth round that Langford caught his almost exhausted opponent with a straight left to the chin that ended the combat.

HOT SESSION OF THE COMMONS

Asquith's Veto Power Resolutions Are Adopted By Majority of 103.

London, April 15.—Amid scenes of intense excitement hardly paralleled since the Gladstonian home-rule debates, the house of commons last night by majorities of 103 recorded its approval of Premier Asquith's resolutions dealing with the veto power of the house of lords, and heard the premier's declaration of policy for carrying them into statutory effect.

Having formally introduced, amid loud cheers, his supporters' bill embodying the resolutions, Mr. Asquith said the government's effective existence depended upon the passing of the resolutions into law. If the house of lords failed to accept or declined to consider their policy, the government would feel it their duty to advise the crown as to what steps were necessary to insure their policy's receiving satutory effect.

Balfour Is Critical.

The negotiations seemed to Mr. Balfour to have left both parties rather poorer than they were; and the government, he declared, was paying a monstrous price of the budget. Then, in what a position had the premier put the crown! The announcement months beforehand that to meet certain undefined conditions the government would suggest what was nothing short of destruction of the constitution was beyond the idea of duty as entertained by any predecessor of the premier, who had bought the Irish vote at the price of the dignity of his office and its great traditions, of which he, of all men, ought to be the custodian.

The speaker having adjourned the house, an uproarious scene ensued.

SAMARITANS GIVE A "STAG SMOKER."

Alpha Council, No. 1, Modern Samaritans, held a social smoker last evening at the lodge hall, Fourth avenue west and First street. It was attended by about 200 members and friends. The feature of the program was the installing of the newly-elected good samaritan, N. B. Morrison, the vice good samaritan, James Kelly, and treasurer, Robert Forsyth. Imperial Good Samaritan Christie officiated, after which Imperial Scribe W. A. Hickson, Senator eGorge R. Laybourn, Sheriff Bates, Attorneys Wilson, McKnight, McKeon and Hummerhouse spoke, while William Hancock, Harry Smith and W. F. Hutchins rendered selections, which were well received. The Samaritan band of four pieces, consisting of Neighbors Todd, Eilert, Christie and Hutchins, played some popular airs, which were well received.

PAYS $500,000 FOR SITE.

Northwestern Life to Erect Superb Building in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 15.—The mystery surrounding operations in upper Wisconsin street real estate was cleared up when the board of trustees of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company authorized the statement that the company has purchased the entire block bounded on the south by Wisconsin street, on the east by Cass street, on the north by Mason street and on the west by Van Buren street.

It was further announced that the company had purchased the property as a site for a new office building.

The price of the site is given out as "something less than $500,000."

The entire purchase was made through Horace A. J. Upham.

Provision has been made for the naming of a committee to supervise the construction of a modern building for the accommodation of the home office of the company, adequate for all time to come.

ORIGINAL CUT AT PANAMA FINISHED

Work Now Is Being Done to Make It Big Enough for Dreadnoughts.

Washington, April 15.—Although it was generally known that splendid progress had been made by the army engineers in digging the Panama canal, the statement contained in the Canal Record, just at hand, comes as a surprise, that all of the excavation that was contemplated in the original project had been completed. Under that plan, 103,795,000 cubic yards of material were to be removed, and that has been done. But subsequently, in order to accommodate naval vessels of the dreadnaught type and the giant liners now under construction, the president ordered the widening and deepening of the canal prism. That involved the removal of 70,871,594 additional yards of material, and that is all of the last of the excavation that confronts the engineers.

The record of accomplishments has been marvelous and without precedent in engineering undertakings.

TOO BUSY TO ACT AS GUIDE

Duluth Policemen Have No Time to Escort "Drunks" Home.

Men Could Not Be Spared From Beats, Says Judge.

Judge W. L. Windom, judge of the local court, said this morning that it would not be practicable to attempt to take all drunken men to their homes in Duluth instead of arresting them.

This recommendation has been made to Municipal Judge McKenzie Cleland of Chicago to Mayor Busse. He takes the position that it is not right to class a drunken man as a criminal and put him behind the bars because he is under the influence of liquor.

Some of his recommendations to Mayor Busse are:

"That every intoxicated man who is merely helpless and not noisy or disturbing the peace be accompanied to his residence by an officer instead of being locked in a police station.

"The purpose of a police department should be to do the most good for the greatest number of persons.

"It will promote a spirit of kindness rather than revenge. To arrest a man for drunkenness savors of revenge.

"For a man to brought home by an officer will have as great a morai effect as to take him to a police station."

Judge Windom agrees with the thoughts set forth, but says that they could not be put in force in Duluth under present conditions. He states that in the first place the police force is altogether too small. "The number of men would have to be increased several times to do this," he said. "In some cases it would take a man off his beat an hour or two if he were to take a drunken man home. As it is now the beats are too big for one man, and most of them are far too important to leave them without police protection for even fifteen minutes.

"Further, the state laws make drunkenness an offense in Minnesota, and that would have to be changed to effect such a reform. Where a man has work to go to and is not brought here regularly, we generally suspend sentence. But this is impossible with habitual drunkards."

THEY "ROLLED" THEIR FRIEND

William Rogers got thirty days straight in the county jail and Charles Hill and Emmet Welsh were each fined $20 and costs or thirty days in police court this morning, on pleading guilty to petty larceny. They were accused of stealing $25 from William Murdock. It appeared that they put him to bed in the Nicollet hotel while drunk, and then took his money. They had been working with him in the woods. All of them were first given straight jail sentences, but in two cases this was modified, as their previous records had been good, while several reports had reached the police against Rogers. Welsh stated that he has a family in the East, consisting of his wife, a crippled child and a 6-month-old baby.

HERO OF CIVIL WAR INCIDENT IS DEAD

Northerner Who Shot at Andersonville Commandant and Escaped.

Logansport, Ind., April 15.—James Clark, who when a "trusty" in the Confederate prison at Andersonville, attempted to assassinate the commandant, Capt. Wirz, and all but lost his own life, died today at his home in this city.

Clark was one of a party of twelve peddlers from the North, working through the South, that was impressed into the Confederate army. In their first engagement the unwilling soldiers tried to escape and all but Clark were shot dead.

Clark was sent to Andersonville and was made a guard. His smouldering hate blazed up one day, and he shot at Capt. Wirz, who, according to the story Clark often told to his friends, saved his life by dodging behind a mule, which was killed by the bullet.

Clark got away, was captured by Union forces and taken as a prisoner to Detroit, where his brother identified him as a Northerner and obtained his release.

MARK TWAIN IS AT HOME VERY ILL

Famous Writer Has Returned From Trip to the Bermudas.

Redding, Conn., April 15.—Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain), who arrived at his country home here last evening, fatigued from his long journey from Bermuda and very ill, passed a comfortable night and it was stated at the house this morning that he seemed much brighter and that his general condition was encouraging.

Dr. R. H. Halsey of New York, who accompanied Mr. Clemens here yesterday, remained with him over night and returned to New York this morning. The bracing air of the country, it is stated, has had a beneficial effect upon Mr. Clemens' respiratory organs since his arrival here and much of the distress that accompanied his breathing during the ocean voyage from Bermuda to New York and after his arrival in New York has disappeared.

MUST TAKE OFF HATS OR GET OUT

Women's Rights in London Threaters Are Settled By Judge.

London, April 15.—Henry Curtiss Bennett, a Bow street magistrate, tackled the matinee hat question today and finally rendered judgment that the management of a theater has the right to eject women patrons who refused to remove their "cartwheel headgear."

Mrs. Blanche Eardley, the authoress, refused to remove her hat during a matinee and was induced to retire to the corridor to discuss the matter with the manager. She still declined to remove the hat and was refused permission to return to her seat.

"UNDER-SEAL"

The Famous Bitter Root Valley White Potatoes

This is a product superior in quality, hardiness and flavor, GRADED and sealed in standard original packages.—"The Aristocrat of the Potato Family," delivered "Uuder Seal" from grower to consumer.

There are potatoes and potatoes, just as there are apples and apples, or dress goods and dress goods.

Some are good, a few are extra good, but most are bad or second rate.

YET, only a few people ever use the same standard of judgment in buying this great staple food as everybody always uses in buying every other commodity.

"So much per bushel," regardless of quality, is the common standard—so common that it is practically impossible to find in the market today, AT ANY PRICE, a guaranteed product.

WHY NOT DISCRIMINATE IN SELECTING THIS MOST IMPORTANT DAILY FOOD?

In Standard Original Packages.

"Sunseal" packages are of two uniform sizes and are designed to contain as nearly as possible 120 pounds each, in the smaller size, and 150 pounds in the larger package. Extra care is used at the "Under Seal" Company's Packing House to make liberal allowance for the natural shrinkage from evaporation, which varies slightly at different seasons of the year.

Prices for the "Under Seal" product are based upon the ordinary laws of supply and demand, and include, of course, the cost of grading and of careful handling from grower to consumer. The product itself is worth much more than is the ordinary potato. Because it is distributed in graded, sealed, and good-weight packages, it is worth still more.

If you have not seen any of these wonderful potatoes, it will pay you to take time to examine window exhibits in the following places:

TWO IMPORTERS ARE ARRESTED

Customs Fraud Investigation Continues at Port of New York.

New York, April 15.—In furtherance of the attempts which the government has been making to uncover customs frauds at this port, which are believed to have reached vast proportions, Marshal Henkel today arrested John M. Poncet and John G. Neeser of the drygoods importing firm of Poncet & Neeser. The marshal also seized invoices and other papers of the firm. The complaint charges the prisoners with having conspired to undervalue drygoods imports from France. They were released under bond to await examination.

RAILROADS INSPECTED TERMINALS

W. A. Gardner, president of the Omaha railway; James G. Clark, vice president; A. W. Trenholm, general manager; H. M. Pierce, freight traffic manager; G. H. Thompson, superintendent of motive power; G. H. MacRae, assistant general passenger agent, and F. R. Peachin, general superintendent, were in Duluth yesterday afternoon inspecting the terminals and making estimates for contemplated repairs that probably will be made at the Head of the Lakes the present year.

The officials of the Omaha came to Duluth in a private car. The officials are on a business trip over the entire system of the Omaha. They are inspecting all of the line, with the view of ascertaining just what repairs and additions are needed, and also to determine approximately the cost of maintenance of the line.

The terminals here and at Superior were given a most thorough inspection by the officials. While they gave attention to the smallest details, with a view of finding out what repairs and possible improvements are needed here, no waste of time marked the trip. The inspection of the terminals here required about two hours, and with this completed, the officials left for the South.

The Omaha officials came here from Ashland. It is their annual business trip over the road.

LUMBER BOATS ON THE ROCKS

Steamer Niko and Three Tows Go Ashore Near Algoma.

Marinette, Wis., April 15.—Information received here from Sturgeon Bay this afternoon is to the effect that the steamer Niko, with her three tows, the Mowatt, Helvetia and Mardin, are on the rocks three miles south of Clay Banks and not far from Algoma on Lake Michigan.

The reef is a heavy, ragged rock formation and a heavy wind storm will mean disaster to the entire fleet.

The life-saving crew of Sturgeon Bay are trying to effect the release. The boats are owned by the Hines Lumber company of Chicago and were en route there.

MYSTERY OF THE "FOUR-POUNDER"

Big Trout Pulled Out of Lester River Disappeared.

There was a deep dark mystery on Michigan street this morning. It all happened because a 4-pound rainbow trout either walked away or was spirited away from the private desk of James H. Young, local branch manager of the Cudahy Packing company.

In the deep gloom and gray moist fog which shrouded the lower end of Lester river just where it runs under the Iron Range bridge Mr. Young might have been seen between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning carefully baiting his hook with a fat angle-worm. Just what happened after Mr. Young treated the angle-worm to a bath in the swirling waters is not definitely known. Be that as it may, Mr. Young came to town on the first car with a fine four-pound rainbow trout. He draped it in life-like fashion over his desk and prodded its mouth and gills open so that it looked as ferocious as a young shark.

In came A. C. Pierce and F. McQuade, who run things over at Swift's. While Mr. Young was telling how he played and landed the four-pounder after much effort and just as he was getting ready to receive justifiable eomiums on his skill he was called to a telephone. When he came back there was no fish. Mr. Pierce and Mr. McQuade, it was said, had been forced to hurry back to Swift's. They regretted they could not hear the remainder of Mr. Young's adventure.

Cudahy's was torn upside down, but no four-pound trout materialized. Emissaries were sent to Swift's but the suspected men looked too innocent to accuse openly. Just as Cudahy's was wrapping itself in a mantle of despair and preparing to heap sackcloth and ashes on its head the trout, like the proverbial cat, came back. It is said that the sawdust on it is the kind that they buy at Swift's.

The trout is the biggest reported today to the Duluth sporting editors.

WOMEN OF PAGAN IRELAND.

Ecclesiastical Review: The pagan Irish were fierce and proud, but at the same time remarkably just and pure. Those who wish to verify this statement have only to look up the old Brehon laws, the legislative code that obtained in Erin long before and long after the advent of St. Patrick.

These laws with very few exceptions were found good enough to govern the land after the reception of Christianity. St. Patrick saw nothing to change in them, except the religious features bearing on the old Druidic worship. For the rest, he left them as he found them, and they continued to be the legal guide of the Irish nation even down to the seventeenth century.

Among their most noteworthy features are their sense of justice and fair play and their eminently high regard for the domestic relations—the rights of women, the mutual protection of husband and wife, the reciprocal duties of parents and children, etc. By way of proof or illustration, we give a passage from the Senchus Mor:

"In the connection of equal property

TALK ABOUT FEET!

Troublesome Skin Affections Put to Rout By Poslam.

A recent exchange of experiences between ten persons developed the fact that nine of them were suffering from foot trouble which caused continual annoyance and serious concern. According to those who know, the best thing to do when the feet are tired, inflamed, itching, chafed or broken out is to apply a little poslam and note how quickly the difficulty will vanish.

Poslam is the new skin remedy which so rapidly combats the worst cases of eczema and all skin troubles, stopping all itching with the first application. It makes quick work of acne, herpes, tetter, scaly scalp, barber's and every other form of itch. Occasional applications in small quantities will quickly banish pimples, hives, blackheads, blotches, etc. A special 50c package of poslam is prepared for those who use poslam for minor skin troubles, and this, as well as the regular two-dollar jar, is on sale at the Lyceum Pharmacy and W. A. Abbett's in Duluth, Holmberg's in Superior, as well as all drug stores.

But no one is even asked to purchase poslam without first obtaining a sample package, which will be sent by mail, free of charge, upon request, by the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York city.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

GREAT BOON TO FARMERS

Northern Minnesota Creameries Have Lifted Many Mortgages From Farms.

"Creamery" Cort Has Established More Creameries Than Any Man in Northwest.

Crookston, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Much has been said within the past few years regarding the wonderful strides being made in the dairing industry in Northern Minnesota. Few men are in position to say as much as M. J. Cort, a dairy supply man, who in twelve years, has established 236 creameries, all on the co-operative plan north and west of the Twin Cities in Northern Minnesota and North Dakota, four-fifths of them being in Minnesota. He is still in the harness and this spring has established new ones at Syre on the Northern Pacific, south of here, at La Porte, which will be the first one in operation in Mahnoman county at Waubon, the second one in Mahnoman county, and Cook, St. Louis county, which is the first one to be established in St. Louis county outside of Duluth. Mr. Cort has figures which show that the fifty-five creameries which he has established in Northern Minnesota on the line of the Great Northern from Fisher to Remidji and north from the line to the Canadian boundary are now paying to the dairy farmers $2,500,000 annually for butter fat. Mr. Cort says the industry in Northern Minnesota is just nicely started, and that in a few years more will se Northern Minnesota the greatest butter producing section in the entire world. The quality has already reached such a high standard that agents of the big commission houses in New York and Pacific coast centers of population pay a premium for all consignments from this section.

Is Great Mortgage-Raiser.

"Creamery" Cort, as he is known throughout this territory, is an indefatigible worker. He has been instrumental in paying off more mortgages, the construction of more stock barns and making some farmers independent, than any one man anywhere in this section He has the co-operative creamery company organized first, then takes a chance with the rest of the creamery supply men as to who sells the butter manufacturing machinery. His work has been invaluable to this section and his energy and level-headed counsel has made every creamery in the organization of which he has had a hand, a success. He gets them started right and they always succeed in working out their own salvation. If they want help later "Creamery" Cort always manages to have business in that locality and gives them a few needed pointers. He is the father of the creameries in this section and his work is highly appreciated.

ALMOST NONOGENARIAN.

Albert Bigelow, Forty-Six Years Resident of Princeton, Dead.

Princeton, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. S. Bigelow one of Princeton's oldest and best known inhabitants, died suddenly Wednesday at the home of Marion Northway in Blue Hill, where he had passed the winter.

Mr. Bigelow was born in Vermont in 1821 and came to Minnesota about sixty years ago, settling in Minneapolis. In 1864 he came to Princeton, where for many years he followed the blacksmith trade, and had made this village his permanent home. He is survived by three children, viz.: William Bigelow, Princeton; Mrs. E. G. Soule, Anaconda, Mont.; and Mrs. T. A. Fisher, Minneapolis. His wife died fourteen years ago

HURT BLASTING STUMPS.

Farmer Near Perham, Minn., Too Curious About Unexploded Blast.

Perham, Minn., April 15.—Andrew Eckland of Rush Lake was seriously injured while blasting stumps on his farm this week. After lighting a fuse it did not explode as quickly as Mr. Eckland thought it should, and going up to the stump to see if the fuse had burned out, he reached there at the same time as the explosion took place.

The charge filled his face with powder and his eyes were badly affected, while the thumb and two fingers on the right hand were completely blown off. He was brought here to hospital.

The Cause of Colds

Good Advice Regarding the Prevention of Coughs and Colds.

If people would only fortify and strengthen the system, the majority of cases of coughs, colds and pneumonia might be avoided. These troubles are frequently due to weakness which produces a catarrhal condition of the mucous membrane, which is an internal skin of the body. When this skin is weakened it becomes easily infected with germs which cause many of the diseases to which flesh is heir. Healthy mucous membranes are essential safeguards of the body's general health.

An excellent aid in the prevention of coughs, colds, pneumonia, and such like infectious diseases, is a remedy that will prevent or cure catarrh.

We have a remedy which we honestly believe to be unsurpassed is excellence for the prevention of coughs, colds and all catarrhal conditions. It is the prescription of a famous physician, who has an enviable reputation of thirty years of cures gained through the use of this formula. We promise to make no charge for the medicine should it fail to do as we claim. We urge everybody who has need of such a medicine to try Rexall Muco-Tone.

It stands to reason that we could not afford to make such statements and give our own personal guarantee to this remedy if we were not prepared to prove the reasonableness of our claim in every particular, and we see no reason why any one should hesitate to accept our offer and try it. We have two sizes of Rexall Muco-Tone, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Sometimes a 50-cent bottle is sufficient to give marked relief. As a general thing the most chronic case is relieved with an average of three large bottles. You can obtain Rexall Remedies in Duluth only at our store—The Rexall Store. E. M. Tredway, 108 West Superior street.

SALOON KEEPERS WILL GET REFUND

Providing Supreme Court Upholds the Decision of Judge Baxter.

Fergus Falls, Minn., April 15.—Judge Baxter has rendered a decision in a case brought by the saloon men of Detroit to collect the unearned portion of their license money. When Government Agent William E. Johnson ordered a dozen saloons closed there because the Indians were obtaining liquor, the city council refused to refund the portion of the license money which was still unearned, and the saloon men brought suit against the city to recover it.

The law says that the licenses may be refunded, and Judge Baxter, after listening to arguments on the point, has decided that the word "may" should be construed as "shall" in this instance, and has rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiffs. The case will be carried to the supreme court.

The action is important in view of the sweeping order that has just been issued by the government, closing the saloons in dozens of villages in this locality. The saloon keepers will be entitled to a return of their license money in all of these places if the decision is sustained. The same rule will apply also in Fergus Falls, where the saloons have just been voted out and have made application for refundments amounting to $7,200.

Check Your Fat.

Hold it where it is, or take off some. You can do either without disturbing your meals or your ease or your digestive organs. You can do it without physical risk, mental effort or danger of a wrinkle. "Sounds well, but these are words only," you say. True, but there is a nation full of indorsers of these words, so your protest, while natural, is feeble. Prove it. Write to the Marmola Co., 491 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., inclosing 75 cents, or, better still, take that amount over to your druggist and get one of the extra large cases of Marmola Prescription Tablets. You will find it generously filled. Take one after meals and at bedtime, and within thirty days you should be losing a pound of fat a day, without disturbance, as we said, of either your meals, habits or organs. Fact is, these statements are not to be denied, for the tablets are an exact duplicate of the famous fat-reducing Marmola Prescription: One-half ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Peppermint Water which any druggist will tell you is the World's Fair medal winner in its class.

ON THE IRON RANGES

SHORTAGE IS ABOUT $50,000

Examiners Who Have Been Looking Over Treasurer's Books End Work.

Grand Rapids, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The examiners who have been employed at the courthouse examining the books of Ex-County Treasurer Kramer of the village of Keewatin and the village of Grand Rapids have completed their task and have gone to Minneapolis with their data, where the report will be prepared. It will be about three weeks before the report is ready to file with the county auditor for the consideration of the county board.

The shortage of Ex-County Treasurer Kramer is said to be between $45,000 and $50,000. Against this there are securities to the amount of about $30,000, which are being held in the hands of a receiver pending a decision as to who is entitled to them—the county or the bonding company which is on the bond of the ex-treasurer. The shortage over the securities is between $15,000 and $20,000.

W. C. Hielbron, who has been examining the books of the village of Keewatin, completed his task yesterday and filed his report with his chief, Public Examiner Schaefer. This report will be filed with the proper authorities within a week or two. Mr. Hielbron has been assigned the work of examining the books of the township of Wirt, and as soon as the books arrive, he will go to work on that job.

The examination of the books of Ex-Village Recorder Yancey has also been completed. It is expected that a report will be forthcoming in a few days.

POISONED BY PRICKING PIMPLE

With a Pin—Inflammation Set In and Itching, Pain and Swelling Followed—Unable to Rest Day or Night—Suffered Six Months—Relieved in a Day and Wholly

CURED BY CUTICURA ON SISTER'S ADVICE

"Several years ago I had a little pimple come between my ankle and knee. I opened it with a pin which caused it to inflame. In a short time my limb was so poisoned and swollen I could scarcely use it. I suffered intense pain, being unable to rest day or night. I tried every remedy recommended, consulted several specialists but grew worse all the time, finding no relief in anything.

"My sister recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I began using the Cuticura Remedies according to directions and I was so much relieved that I slept some the first night. The itching, burning and swelling in my limb gradually decreased and the sore began to heal. After six months' suffering such as I had endured, the relief was wonderful. I continued the treatment several weeks and a permanent recovery was the result. I shall ever recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any one suffering from blood and skin diseases. Mrs. D. M. May, R. F. D. 5, Goldsboro, N. C., Oct. 25, '09."

ROCK IS HURLED THROUGH HOUSE

Family of Chisholm Man Has Close Call From Being Killed.

Chisholm, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—A twenty-five pound rock torn from its fastenings by a blast of powder at the Euclid mine yesterday afternoon and hurled through the air three blocks with itanic force crashed through the roof of the home of Henry Fugere and just missed hitting the family. The missile broke through one floor and landed amid broken lathing in the kitchen, just missing Mrs. Fugere and the children who were playing about there.

Mr. Fugere was candidate for village president at the late election.

CONSIDER PLANS FOR PUBLIC HEALTH

Secretary of State Board of Health Meets With Eveleth People.

Eveleth, Minn., April 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A movement for the betterment of local sanitary conditions, and the confining of the health work to a permanent department, was instituted last evening by the city council school board and local physicians, meeting with Dr. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health.

It was deemed best to appoint a health commissioner, whose sole duties will be to inspect the local schools' sanitary conditions and examine the physical conditions of the students, and also supervise the health department's work. The school board will pay half the commissioner's salary and the council the other half. The commissioner will be required to devote his entire time to the work. His salary will be $2,000 to $2,100 per year. Dr. Bracken was requested to secure a man for the place on his coming Eastern trip. Dr. Bracken, the present city health inspector, declined the position as he intends to leave the city in a few months.

Discuss Quarantine Hospital.

The question of erecting a suitable quarantine hospital which is one of the city's most pressing needs, was brought up and the two most feasible suggestions presented were the pavilion and hospital plans. The hospital plan offered by Dr. More provides for four compartments, three departments, one each for the diphtheria, scarlet fever and smallpox cases, a keeper's room, baths, toilets and heating system, detention room for suspicious cases, convalescent department. The hospital is to be of two stories and the estimate will amount to $10,000. The plan suggested by Dr. Bracken was the pavilion one, where separate cottages could be put in cottages, with the regular sanitary requirements, the pavilions to cost about $2,500 each.

The milk ordinance which was recently introduced in the council, was discussed and the provisions thought to be suitable.

The recent introduction of a bill by Senator Owens of Oklahoma in the senate, providing for the establishment of a national department of health, thereby increasing the efficiency of the federal and state health officers and also giving better protection to the inhabitants, was discussed and the consensus of opinion was in favor of the measure.

The tuberculosis subject also was dwelt upon and the federal government criticised for not providing funds for the fight against the disease.

BLACK AND RICH

Is the Way Postum Should Be.

A liquid food that will help a person break a bad habit is worth knowing of. The president of one of the state associations of the W. C. T. U., who naturally does not want her name given, writes as follows:

"Whenever I was obliged to go without coffee for breakfast a dull, distracting headache would come on before noon. I discovered that, in reality, the nerves were crying out for their accustomed stimulant.

"At evening dinner I had been taught by experience that I must refrain from coffee or pass a sleepless night. While visiting a physician and his wife I was served with a most excellent beverage at their dainty and elegant table and, upon inquiry, discovered that this charming beverage was Postum and that the family had been greatly benefited by leaving off coffee and using Postum.

"I was so in love with it, and so pleased with the glimpse of freedom from my one bondage of habit and so thoroughly convinced that I ought to break with my captor, that upon my return home I at once began the use of Postum and have continued it ever since.

"I don't know what sick headache is now, and my nerves are steady and I sleep sound, generally eight hours. I used to become bilious frequently and require physic; now seldom ever have that experience.

"I have learned that long boiling is absolutely essential to furnish good Postum. That makes it clear, black and rich as any Mocha and Java blend. Please withhold my name, but you may use the letter for the good it may do."

SOO ROAD MUST REPAIR STREET

Main Artery Between Duluth and Superior Is Almost Impassible.

City officials and representatives of the Soo road held a conference at the city hall yesterday afternoon relative to the replacement of West Michigan street, which is now in frightful shape.

It is the only artery for traffic between the downtown section and the western part of the city and Superior street is almost impassable in many places. When the Soo was given permission to put in its tunnel and the depot, it agreed to replace the street in its original condition, but has failed to do so. The reason given was that the city wanted Michigan street widened and that the company would not stand the extra expense.

The council recently passed a resolution declaring that if the widening of the street was to entail extra expense the street should be left at its original width. At the conference yesterday it was decided to leave the details to the city engineer and the engineer of the road. There is much complaint by wholesalers and others compelled to use the streets as to its condition and they are anxious that it be repaired at the earliest possible moment. They take the position that it should have been done some time ago.

CHINESE DRIVE FOREIGNERS OUT

Mission Buildings at Changsha Are Destroyed By the Rioters.

Hankow, April 15.—The situation at Chansha, the capital of Hunan province, is grave. The rioting began by natives, in revenge for the action of Chinese officials in cornering and controlling the export of rice, continues. The governor's Yaimen, in which the missionaries had sought refuge, was set on fire by the rioters and destroyed. The missionaries and other foreigners fled and were taken aboard a merchant steamer in the harbor.

The British consulate and customs offices have been abandoned.

Two more British gunboats are hurrying to the scene.

No fatalities are reported. The property known to have been destroyed are the buildings of the Wesleyan China Inland mission, of the Methodist China Inland mission, and of the Norwegian mission.

BOYS BEAT OUT ELDERS FISHING AT LESTER RIVER

"Scotty" B. Ormsby claims the first trout caught this season. He also killed what is said to be the first deer shot in this county after the season opened last fall. In both instances he landed his game before daylight. He was at Lester river this morning shortly after 4 o'clock and almost his first cast under the bridge hooked one of the speckled beauties. Before he finished he had fifteen of them in his basket, several measuring over twelve inches. He didn't mind the rain as he fell in the river before he had been on the banks of the stream half an hour. He had a particularly heavy strike, and thinking he had a "whale" he became so excited that he lost his rather precarious foothold. Part of the fish are on display in the window of Blackwood's cafe at 27 West Superior street, where scores of pedestrians stopped to admire them.

Early this morning, men and boys, equipped with wading boots and waterproof coats and will supplied with rods and tackle were out on Lester river angling for the speckled beauties. They started at the mouth and fished up the stream, wading for a mile up from the mouth.

On the whole, the boys were more successful than the adult fishermen. Some of the latter fished all morning without getting a nibble while some of the boys obtained fine results. James Wharton, Jr., after a short time at the mouth of the stream, had eleven fine fish in his basket. Orin Howell, another boy, caught seven. The leading fisherman among the men had ten.

Most of the boys did well while some of the men fished all morning without success and the boys were naturally elated over their success.

Lester river will be popular for the first few days of the season. The mouth of the stream is said to furnish fine opportunities now and the fish are biting well. Lester river, being so near to the city, will attract hunderds of fishermen during the next few days but the chances of each will not be so good as on some of the less frequented streams.

TAKE UP ARMS AGAINST FLY

Health Commissioner Urges Unceasing War on the Household Pest.

Cleanliness and Care Will Prevent Spread of Disease By Them.

"Continue the war against the fly," is the advice of Dr. H. E. Webster, health commissioner, to the citizens of Duluth.

"Use every means in your power to exterminate flies, for they are one of the worst pests in existence today. They are prolific agencies of disease. For instance, an English expert has computed that ten flies in thirty days will breed and carry 20,000,000 tuberculosis germs. That will give you an idea of the terrible amount of harm they can do in any community."

Dr. Webster reiterates the oft repeated warning that they breed in filth, and to guard against all uncleanliness on the premises. Keep them out of the house as much as possible, is his suggestion, and do everything in your power to maintain cleanliness.

Some of the more common rules posted by those interested in the extermination of flies are:

"Keep the flies away from the sick, especially those suffering from contagious diseases.

"Do not allow decaying material of any sort to accumulate on or near your premises.

"All refuse which tends in any way to fermentation, such as bedding, straw, paper, waste and vegetable matter, should be disposed of or covered with lime or coal oil.

"Screen all food, whether in the house or exposed for sale.

"Keep all receptacles for garbage carefully covered and the cans cleaned or sprinkled with oil or lime.

"See that your sewerage system is in good order; that it does not leak, is up-to-date and not exposed to flies.

"Pour kerosene into the drains.

"Burn or bury all table refuse.

"Screen all doors and windows, especially in the kitchen and dining room."

City Unable to Haul the Rubbish Away Fast Enough.

Citizens Taking Hold of "Spotless Town" Movement With Energy.

Duluth would be the nearest it has ever been to a "Spotless Town," in a week, if the city boasted enough garbage and ash wagons to haul the stuff away.

The sanitary inspectors put to work two weeks ago have found plenty to do. Tons of garbage and dirt and hundreds of rubbish heaps have been called to the attention of the citizens.

The health department is greatly pleased with the willingness to clean up, that has been displayed by the residents. The office has been deluged with telephone calls with requests for garbage men to cart away the stuff that they have heaped up ready for him. As far as can be learned no one has objected to following the suggestions that have been made by the men who have been hired by Dr. Webster for this purpose. When the general cleaning day comes around Duluth will be in excellent shape for the finishing touches if the rubbish already raked up can be taken away before that time.

The reports show that the inspectors are going at their work in a thorough manner, giving Duluth a house to house canvass. They are looking into the alleys as well as the back yards.

The postol cards which will be supplied to the club women of the city were received at the department yesterday afternoon and will be distributed without delay by the woman inspector. They are expected to prove a valuable aid in the cleaning campaign.

HOTEL MAN IS ARRESTED

Police Claim Liquor Laws Were Violated in Phillips Hotel.

New Statute Helps Officers in Solving a Hard Problem.

After several unsuccessful attempts to secure information against the Phillips hotel at Central avenue and Ramsey street, West Duluth, the police believe that they have secured ample evidence on which to convict the proprietor E. A. Fitzpatrick and one Martin Gormley of selling liquor in violation of the law. They were arrested this afternoon.

Four witnesses were brought into court this morning under the inquisition statute which has been on the books only a short time. Under it Walter F. Lacey, prosecuting city attorney, was able to examine them as to the reason for their being in the place last Sunday. All of them testified that they had been in the back rooms of the saloon, where they bought liquor. They were positive in their statements.

The police have been after the hotel for a long time. Frequent reports have reached them of violations of the liquor laws in the establishment.

The arrangements of the Phillips have made it particularly difficult for the West Duluth police to get the necessary evidence. The liquor has been sold in the saloon and not in the dining room, as has been the case in most hotels. It is said that the back rooms have been utilized, and they are included in the license. In case the police secured a search warrant and broke into the place, they would not be able to bring the charge that there was liquor on the premises without a license. "The proof would have to be that liquor was being sold on Sunday and not that it was being sold without a license," said a police officer this morning.

Bitter complaints have been made to the authorities by other saloon keepers in West Duluth. They have said that they would be perfectly willing to abide by the laws if the Phillips hotel would be forced to the same observance. It is stated that the only reason the Phillips has not been in the limelight before was that it was almost impossible to get the necessary evidence.

The police say that it has been the hardest place in Duluth to land in the dragnet, and it has been a hard task to get the evidence on which several others have been arrested the last few months.

AVENUE IN BAD CONDITION

West Duluthians Renew Agitation for Better Connecting Thoroughfare.

Automobile owners and others at West Duluth have started anew the agitation for a better thoroughfare between Duluth and West Duluth. Both Grand avenue and Oneota street are in bad condition this spring, they say.

On Grand avenue, which is the principal thoroughfare between West Duluth and the main part of the city, there are many bad holes which could be fixed by the street commissioners without very much labor and at little expense.

At the intersection of Elinor street and Grand avenue, there is a bad place, one which is especially dangerous to an automobilist at night if he is not familiar with the road. It is necessary for machines to come to almost a dead stop when they reach this spot.

Since the street car company relaid its tracks last year and the board of public works had a sewer put in a portion of the street, Grand avenue has been in worse shape than it ever was. Large piles of earth were left by the roadside.

At the present time only one side of the street is used for general traffic.

his work and his people. The congregation has granted him a vacation.

After a short visit in West Duluth, Rev. and Mrs. Grice will leave for Brooklyn, N. Y., where they will visit relatives of Mrs. Grice. On April 27 they will sail for Liverpool from New York on the steamship "Cantania." In England they will visit at London and at Derby, where the aged mother of Mr. Grice resides.

From England they will go to Ireland. Mrs. Grice has many relatives in the northern part of the island, and they will spend considerable time there. Dublin will also be visited. Rev. Mr. Grice stated that they also expected to attend the Passion Play at Oberammergau in Bavaria.

MAY BUILD A NEW ROAD

West Duluthians Want a Better Thoroughfare to New Duluth.

A movement is on foot in which the West Duluth Commercial club members are interested to put an eighty-foot road from Smithville to New Duluth connecting Grand avenue and Commonwealth avenues more directly than by the present arrangement.

For many years what is known as the "old county road" has been used for traffic between Smithville and New Duluth. If the new road was built it would shorten the distance considerably. The grade, it is thought, will be satisfactory.

A committee of the club, which has been looking up the proposition, is expected to report at the club meeting this evening. It is not thought, however, that any definite action on the project will be taken by the club at this time.

The club will have one of its monthly smokers this evening. The banquet committee, which met last night to close up its financial accounts, has its report ready for the meeting this evening. More than $100 was cleared from the affair. The sum will be placed in the treasury.

MISS SADIE KERN PASSES AWAY

Was Member of Senior Class at Industrial High School.

Miss Sadie Kern, 18 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kern, died last evening about 10 o'clock at the family residence, 4809 West Sixth street. The funeral arrangements have not been made.

Miss Kern was a senior at the Duluth Industrial high school and was to have graduated with the June class. She was a very bright girl in her studies and popular among her schoolmates.

Three weeks ago she was taken ill and since that time failed to improve. Her death was due to a disease of the heart. Besides her parents, she is survived by three sisters, Frances, Florence and Ruth.

CURLERS WILL HOLD BANQUET

April 27 was selected as the date for the third annual banquet of the Western Curling club.

It will be held at Wade's hall as in former years. The preliminary arrangements were completed last evening at a meeting of the arrangement committee at the office of J. Allyn Scott, president.

The ladies of the Women's Christian Temperance union, West Duluth branch, will serve the supper this year. The proceeds from the sale of tickets, over and above expenses, will be used to start a fund for a Y. M. C. A. building at West Duluth. The program of speakers and musical numbers will be ready in about a week.

The sub-committees in charge of the affair are:

Music: P. H. Martin, L. A. Barnes and L. R. Clark; program, George J. Mallory, Alderman W. B. Getchell and George W. Smith; decorations, Frank Ashley, M. J. Filiatrault and P. H. Wade; printing, Neil Buckley, P. H. Martin and L. A. Barnes; floor, M. J. Filiatrault, Neil Buckley and P. H. Martin.

NEW FIRE ENGINE READY FOR WORK

The "John T. Black" Is "On the Job" at West Duluth.

The new fire engine, the "John T. Black," recently purchasd, was installed this morning at the West Duluth fire hall, No. 8. For the past few days the engine has been used at some of the other halls while repairs were being made to other engines.

The necessary improvements for housing the engine have been made. Stalls for three extra horses have been provided, and the runway for the engine has been widened. The steamer on the "John T. Black" is two inches wider and ten inches longer than that of any of the others now in use in the city.

Three extra men have been detailed to the West Duluth station. The old engine, "Silsbey," will probably be sold for scrap iron, as it seems to be beyond repair and is out of date.

ROOSEVELT'S HEROISM

By FERDINAND C. IGLEHART

When Theodore Roosevelt was president of the board of police commissioners of New York city and first began the rigid enforcement of the law closing the saloons on Sunday and at illegal hours, I preached a sermon in the Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal church of New York, of which I was the pastor, suggesting that it ought not to be considered a heroic thing for a public officer to do his duty in accordance with the oath he had taken, and the salary which he received, but that vice was so dominant, and the sale of the law so open and notorious, that it was considered a rash and foolish thing by one class and singularly heroic thing by another, for the head of the police department to dare to perform his sworn duty.

I called earnestly upon the people to stand by the man for whom the good citizens had been long waiting, and help him to the success which his conscience and bravery deserved. I had never met Commissioner Roosevelt; I saw him in the New York delegation in the National Republican convention at Chicago, which nominated Mr. Blaine and Gen. Logan—he was a bright young man fresh from Harvard, and attracted considerable attention at that early date.

But on Monday, about noon, I went down to the office of the police commissioner and introduced myself to the president.

Mr. Roosevelt said to me: "I read in the newspaper, this morning, what you said in your pulpit yesterday, and thank you very much for the good advice you gave the people. I did not make the law; I have been appointed to enforce it, and intend to do so."

I said to him: "I am a very humble factor in this great city, but I want to stand up, and be counted in this conflict. I have come down this morning to tell you that I will stand by you in your work till the last hour of the last day. Whenever you shoot your big cannon at the enemy, I will fire off my small calibered pistol."

The commissioner said: "I thank you very much, and the more so because such offers of sympathy and assistance are so rare. There are a hundred letters and telegrams lying on that table, telling me that I have injured the party and ruined myself politically by my course, and you are almost the only man, thus far, who has commended me."

And then pausing, and speaking more seriously, he said: "Well, even if you had not come, and no one were to commend my course, there is a voice above my conscience, which speaks very plainly to me, and which I intend to obey at whatever cost."

I said to him: "Most of the best people of the city and of the state will be with you in this conflict; you are bound to have terrific opposition; in the long run, your step will not be an unpopular one."

Sure enough, when the people came to select a governor for the Empire state, the fact that Col Roosevelt was a hero of the Spanish-American war was taken into account, but they also favored him because of his moral courage in fighting the wrong.

In many cities, small and large, there is the same insolence of vice, and same sale of the law; people of moral courage are required to stand up and rebuke and resist crime, and maintain law and order in the community. In the short run, moral heroism may not be popular, but in the long run it will be. But whether it be popular or unpopular, the right is to be done, because it is right.

UNPUBLISHED EDITORIALS

FROM THE NINEVEH GAZETTE
Translated By DONALD CROSBY.

Be as Wise as You Can.

King Solomon said, if you can't be wise, be as wise as you can. The king knew what he was talking about, for he was as wise as Senator Aldrich and Uncle Joe Cannon conglomerated.

Never be wise to excess; but just be wise enough. There is no pleasure in life so satisfying as being wise at the right time. We wish to impress upon our readers the good results of being brainy.

Wisdom is something that cannot be taken away from you even by the trusts. The ant is a very wise animal, and for real brains King Solomon says that the ant can put it over the sluggard forty ways from the jack.

The king of Denmark is not a wise man. Dr. Cook is some pumpkins when it comes to wisdom, but he was called by Commodore Peary and he had to lay down a bobtail flush and beat it for Chile. If Doc Cook had really been wise he would have drawn four cards instead of standing pat on his joker.

Wisdom is the arrogance of youth; the assumption of middle age, and the whiskers of old age. All the patriarchal old sports who wear whiskers are thought to be wise. Other folks who seldom speak are also thought to be so wise that they hate to waste any of it by opening their mouths.

The wise man avoids the high cost of living by starving to death, but the man who lacks brains buys meat and helps along the Chicago aristocracy.

It is sometimes hard to distinguish real wisdom. We once worshiped one of those wise, silent men until we found out that he was dumb. He was dumb to excess, because he lost his vocal chords in a powder mill explosion.

Unrecorded Biography.

The traditions of the ages carry a base slander against the character of King Nebuchadnezzar. Just because the king went forth from his palace and ate grass in the fields like the ox he had been condemned as insane. Some writers have been so ungracious as to intimate that he was establishing ground for an insanity defense in case he wished to slay a few friends.

But it is untrue. King Nebuchadnezzar was boycotting the beef trust. The high cost of living compelled him to eat grass.

King Neb is one of the best old scouts in antique history. He is even as great a man as Teddy Roosevelt. His brilliancy shined forth in all his actions.

Neb was the first man to use the automobile. As his car would whizz down the highway, scattering pedestrians right and left, the king used to lean anxiously over his chauffeur's shoulder and whisper:

"Don't mind the grown-ups, Bill. But do be careful of the babies. Them nursing bottles do cut up the tires something awful."

The sporting writers are greatly exaggerated over the future of King David, who put Goliath away in the first round. Sampson is some comer, too, but we have heard of no matches being made.

DOGS IN LITERATURE

By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD

Literature has made the dog her own, and Art has loved him. Who thinks of Sir Walter without Maida? Is not Flush beloved by Mrs. Browning's lovers? Can we separate heroic little Miss Mittford from her faithful spaniel? Is not Byron's Bitswain fitly sculptured at Newstead abbey? Who can read without tears that perfect story, "Rab and His Friends?" Who has not had a tender feeling for the visible, beloved Schneider who comforts scapegrace Rip Van Winkle in his distresses? Who has not known and loved the dogs of Landseer?

How many tombs of the old knights bear a sculptured dog to show that they folowed their standard as a dog his master? On how many monuments of illustrious women his effigy symbolized fidelity and affection, as the lion's image symbolizes courage and magnanimity! What innumerable records of fearlessness, self-sacrifice, patience, sagacity, devotion, justify that good saying of Hamerton, "I pity the man who can live a dogless life."

It is true that in cities there is no room for dogs. They must be crowded out, with some other good gifts of heaven. The dog is a natural rover. He loves fresh air, free ways, the smell of fresh turf. Shut in to alien pavements, scorched by the sun, pinched by the winter winds, parched with thirst, faint with hunger, the race deteriorates, develops strange diseases, and from man's safeguard becomes his possible danger.

But in their natural home, with water, shade and kindness, the nobler breeds of dogs which alone should be perpetuated, are no more dangerous in August than in January, which is more than can be said of man, who too often develops a most uncertain, not to say, ferocious temper under these brazen skies. Let us then be reasonable. Banish poor Tray to the country, watch him if need be, slay him if need be, but let us not indulge in excessive apprehension of the whole canine species. We shall have gotten a step further in civilization when the dog-days cease to be an indiscriminate carnage of dogs of all degree.

SOCIETY IN EMBRYO

By POLLY PAGET

"I was much amused the other day," said the University Girl, "as I watched some youngsters playing grown up."

"I never realize how much children absorb of the notions of their elders around them until I see them taking off in unconscious play," observed the Post-Graduate girl with a smile.

"They were two small girls playing at ladies," continued the other, "and they certainly gave me an insight into their respective homes."

"'You must come to see me first because I moved into the neighborhood last,' was the demand of one.

"'Let's play I know something about you and wouldn't come,' said the other.

"'Well, then I'll give a reception and borrow your spoons, and then you'll have to come,' remarked the first.

"'I'm afraid that my husband won't let me lend them, for he says that I'll never see the whole set again if I do,' objected the otrer, 'but you can borrow my cushions if you won't spill frappe on them.'

"'Well, I'll do that and give the reception, but I won't have a new thing to wear until next month, so I'm going to put it off. I've just had my hair shampooed and I can't do a thing with it,' she added with a satisfied pat of her locks.

"'Your hair looks lovely, dear,' said the other, 'but just see my face! I used to have a lovely complexion when I was a child, and now I have two pimples. I don't believe in cosmetics—at least not enough to show. Did you notice my wrinkles? I'm not old enough to have wrinkles, you know.'

"'No, indeed, dear, not for a year at least,' returned her friend sympathetically.

"'Don't you know exactly what their mothers are like?' laughed the Post-Graduate. "I believe if women knew how much their children betrayed they would keep the youngsters inside the house, except when properly chaperoned."

"It is impossible, of course," said the University Girl, "to imagine a case in which children would do no harm and would not reflect discredit upon the parents, but the children of such characters seem to have no bent towards imitation."

GET USED TO IT

By CARA REESE

Nonsense! You can get used to living on "dregs" just as you can get used to anything else. Your pitiful wail is uncalled for.

If circumstances force you to live on "dregs" all your life, why begin now to cultivate a taste for dregs. Who knows but what the acquired relish might not become so fixed and palatable as a taste for olives, green figs and chop suey? Your stomach has probably turned at the first bite of a national dish of foreign make, but finally you endure, then pity, then embrace. More than that, you really begin to enjoy, and when finally you find that the system is nourished and strength imparted the acquired taste proves a benefit rather than a curse, and there you are.

There are a heap worse conditions in life than merely living on dregs. What is more absolutely blissful than to be privileged to hold the sugar water tumbler or the glass of lemonade upside down above the upturned lips and wait for the dregs to slowly trickle down the throat? The sediment is all sugar and spice and everything nice. The last drop is a concentrated product, an essence of the flavor and delectable, substance or liquid. And the one who scrapes the sides of the ice cream freezer, or licks the honey spoon, or cleans out the molasses pitcher or the jelly tumbler gets far more joy and personal satisfaction than the one who sits at table with company manners and eats an alloted and measured portion. The very uncertainty about dregs makes the condition pleasurable. Think of the bit of gravy left over in the frying pan, well done and browned to a turn, or the mashed potato on the sides of the hot saucepan, or the waste batter in the cake bowl! Half of the grandeur of living lies in the dregs.

Even when the dregs mean the medicine bottle and bitter doses there is a measure of compensation over those who have a full spoon, so to speak, for in your case the dregs are usually diluted in order to eke out the proper amount. Hence, less bitterness, less of the nauseous swallowing, perhaps a speedier recovery. Then you really get more for your money, for in the case of dregs there is a great deal more that sinks to the bottom than the recipe is supposed to contain, hence you have a heavier and somewhat more complicated portion to take up your time and engross attention away from specific ailments.

There are some dregs that are waste and refuse, but even in your diet of dregs you may still be particular. There are dregs of society where your name should never be found on the roster. Even though perhaps you are in the dregs of poverty there is still no need of becoming a social outlaw. Even though your portion seems to be to drink the bitter dregs of trouble, yet still there is no need of becoming a reviler at fate or Providence. Avoid the dregs of a polluted stream or a poisonous accumulation, whether in social acquaintance or in your own mental condition. Have nothing to do with the "grounds" or the lees of an unworthy drainage. It is probable that the dregs you deplore are the sweetest drippings imaginable, and some day you may see or know this. There is many a cloyed appetite which has envy for your simple joys.

WHERE CLOVES COME FROM.

Dundee Advertiser: The principal source of the world's clove supply is Zanzibar and the neighboring island of Pemba, East Africa. A 10-year-old plantation should produce twenty pounds of cloves to the tree. Trees of twenty years frequently produce upward of 100 pounds each. Besides the buds, the stems are gathered and form an article of commerce, commanding one-fifth the price of cloves and having about the same percentage of strength. To this is due the fact that ground cloves can be bought at a lower price than the whole cloves.

RURAL OPTIMIST.

The pessimistical tourist found the freckled farm boy sitting on the turnstile, twanging a penny jewsharp, says the Chicago News.

"You needn't be so all-fired happy," warned the tourist, as he slowed up his horse. "Do you know what the almanac predicts?"

"No, indeed, mister," drawled the lad, pausing in his tune. "Dad only has one almanac, and he won't let me see that."

"Well, it predicts that there'll be an earthquake within the next ten days that'll shake you inside out."

"Won't hurt me, mister. I broke six mules for dad this season, and I guess when it comes to shaking you up they beat a dozen earthquakes."

"Well, the week following there is to be a cyclone that will toss you over into the next county."

"Couldn't please me better, boss. There's a circus over there that week and I'm shy of railroad fare."

"H'm! You are a hard nut. Know anything about comets?"

"Never saw one in my life."

"Well, Halley's is due next year and it is liable to hit this old earth and put you out of business with a billion sparks."

The farm lad grinned.

"Billion sparks, mister? Gee! ma always did say I'd have a brilliant finish, and I guess that's what she meant. So long!"

Consumers, Attention!

Do you know that every business man you trade with, no matter how good a Christian he may be, is in business not for love of you but for the profit he can make out of you?

Do you know that every business man is honest and remains so until extreme competition compels him to go into co-partnership with the devil, and the results of such co-partnership breeds Milk Inspectors, Weight and Measure Inspectors, Meat Inspectors, etc?

Do you know that this is the only business firm in this city that aims to make the consumer a co-partner in the business? If it pays to be in league with the devil, why not all share in it?

Do you know that one cobblestone is of more potency than a thousand pebbles thrown at intervals?

Do you know that the thousand pebbles if welded together would be of greater potency than the cobblestone in a grand throw?

Do you know that in this city there is one storekeeper for every twenty heads of families—think it over and ask yourself "Who pays the freight?"

Do you know that God will be good to you only when you decide upon being good to yourself and your dependent ones?

The curse of present day civilization is not the hard-heartedness of the "Monopolists" but the lack of self-interest displayed by the "blessed poor."

Do you know that the credit system—unless you quit the habit—keeps you perpetually between the devil and the deep sea?

We aim to make this enterprise the biggest thing in this section of the country—we can do this with your support—you owe it as a duty to your family to look into our proposition.

WHEAT IS WEAKER HERE

May Option Shows a Fractional Loss at the Close.

Flax Is Firm Under Light Trading and Closes Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, April 15.—Wheat declined ½@⅜c here today. May wheat opened at $1.09¾ bid, sold at $1.10, lost ½c and then sold at $1.09⅝ and up to $1.10, down to $1.09¼ and $1.09⅝, closing with bids at the last named price. July opened at $1.10¼ and lost ½c, sold up to $1.09⅞-1.10, $1.10¼, down to $1.09¾ and back to $1.10, closing with bids at $1.10. The dead cash situation is reflected in the May option which closed ⅜c under July.

Flax was firm with light trading. May opened at $2.44, gained ½c and then sold at $2.45 and lost 1c, closing at $2.44. July opened with bids at $2.38½ and sold at $2.40, closing $2.39. September opened $1.85 bid and sold at $1.87, closing $1.86½ bid. October was $1.76 bid without trading.

Oats closed ½c up but the premium dropped ½c to 1½c over Chicago May. Rye and barley closed unchanged and cash wheat was on a parity with May. Durum lost ⅜c.

The cash situation is weak and premiums are steadily losing ground. This factor is causing a reversal of sentiment among some people who have been bullish. Stocks in the Northwest and on the Pacific coast are large, and stocks have been accumulating instead of decreasing, as was the case last year. Decreases are looked for now in the Northwest on account of the opening of navigation, however. The decrease here is estimated at 400,000 bu for the week. The continued increase in stores in the last two weeks in the Northwest cannot be regarded other than bearish, especially when coupled with a dull flour trade and excellent prospects for the new crop.

The professional element attacked prices from the opening today, although around noon there was a slight rally. Trading was light all day, and the market showed little rallying power, chiefly because there was no buying to inject into it a stronger tone. On the upturns there was no accumulation, and prices broke on continued selling, much of which came from shorts. The decline uncovered a bunch of stopless orders.

Farmers are selling rather freely, and receipts are liberal compared with last year. On the decline, wheat has continued to come out. Farmers seem convinced that the next crop will be a hummer, and they appear to have changed from the bullish position they occupied earlier in the year.

Rains were reported in Nebraska and light showers in Kansas. The crowd is bearish, although they hesitated to commit themselves today, as the market is well sold, and some of the professionals were playing for a rally. At the close many traders on the bear side purchased Minneapolis ups.

Seeding in the Northwest is about completed. Reports to the Canadian Pacific indicate that about 27 per cent of the spring acreage is sown in Manitoba and Saskatchewan and about 38 per cent in Alberta. Wheat seeding in Southern Minnesota and South Dakota is finished, and about 80 per cent in North Dakota has been planted.

MARKET GOSSIP

"The Minneapolis flour output last week decreased 38,215 bbl," said the Northwestern Miller's report. "This made the output for the week ending April 9, 171,370 bbl against 246,730 bbl in 1909 and 229,755 bbl in 1908. One more mill is in operation this week and the output ought to be around the 200,000 bbl mark. In the corresponding week in 1909 the output was 254,925 bbl. With both Minneapolis and interior mills flour trade is dead. In a few instances some sales were made late in the week, when the market showed signs of advancing, after the issuance of the government crop report. Since then, however, there has been little doing. Buyers evidently have no confidence in present values, and, having enough flour booked to meet requirements for the present, they are content to await developments. Shipping directions on the whole are not satisfactory. Buyers have flour in transit and are averse to ordering out more. Receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth are not expected to show considerable of a shrinkage. Today's receipts were a reflection of it. Stocks in interior elevators are apparently reduced to a low point, and farmers, until spring work is completed, are not counted on to deliver much wheat at interior elevators."

Official exports of wheat and flour from the United States in March were the smallest in twenty years, except in March, 1905. Of wheat alone they were the smallest in eleven months. During March there was a decrease of over 2,250,000 bu wheat and flour, as compared with last year and for the nine months ending March 31 there is a decrease of over 30,000,000 bu. Details follow:

Jenkins, 386,000 bu barley; Peavey, 289,000 bu barley; Chili, 63,583 bu durum for export. The Jenkins and the Peavey have been loaded for some time. Most of these boats will leave shortly after midnight tonight.

Wheat stocks here this week will show a decrease of about 400,000 bu, on account of the opening of navigation. Thus far the increase has been 389,000 bu. Flax stores this week will show an increase of 20,000 bu. Thus far the increase has been 14,000 bu.

"Wheat seeding is finished in the main in Southern Minnesota and South Dakota," said the Northwestern Miller. "What little there is left will probably be completed this week. In North Dakota the work is well advanced. The weather has been unusually favorable and farmers have made rapid progress. It is estimated that 75 per cent of the acreage in North Dakota has already been planted. Not all authorities agree as to the wheat acreage in the three states. Leading elevator men are of the view that the increase will equal fully 10 per cent, possibly exceeding that in North Dakota. On the other hand, others equally well informed credit Minnesota and South Dakota with only 6 or 7 per cent and North Dakota with 10 per cent. Of course, the last named state is much the more important as to the area devoted to wheat."

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Values Shift Quickly In Opening Trading.

Chicago, April 15.—There was some shifting of values today in the early trading in the wheat pit. The start was from a shade higher to ¼c lower, and was followed by a rally induced by heavy buying which carried prices of all the futures ⅛c to ¼c above the previous close. The advance was overcome in the first hour by increased offerings, and July dropped off from $1.03⅛ to $1.02½@⅝, the other deliveries dragging with it, and resting o nthe lower levels.

Later in the session reports of possible cold weather damage offset the bearish tendency, and shorts rushed to cover. July crowded up to $1.03¼ from its bottom point of $1.02½, and September moved from $1.00⅛ to $1.01⅛. The demand being supplied, prices eased off a little. The close was firm, with July a shade up at $1.03 and September ⅜c up at $1.00¾@⅞.

Clouds hung over most of the wheat belt and encouraged the bears to look for further rainfall to help the growing crop. Commission houses were active in selling the distant options. Opening figures for the July delivery were from a shade higher to ⅛@¼c lower at $1.03 to $1.02¾, while September was a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at $1.00⅜@1.00¼.

Corn prices fluctuated less than wheat, and in the first hour stayed practically within the opening figures, which were from a shade higher to ⅛@¼c lower. Elevator interests led the selling, and an influential local concern took the buying end. May moved between 58½c and 58¾c, and steadied at the top. Opening figures for the nearby delivery were a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 58⅝c to 58½c.

The market kept within a narrow limit throughout the remainder of the session. May moved between 58⅜@58⅞c. The close was steady, with May ⅛@¼c off at 58½c.

Oats opened easier with the other grains and kept within narrow limits in the first hour, commission houses giving support to the market. May moved between 43¼ and 42⅞c and rested with the other futures near the bottom. Opening prices for the May grain were unchanged to ⅛c lower at 42⅞@43c.

Liquidation sales in provisions, centered principally on pork, gave a bearish opening with May pork off 20c. A fair demand for lard and ribs kept those products steady. Opening prices for May: Pork, 20c off at $22.00; lard unchanged at $12.75, and ribs 2½@5c off at $12.57½@12.60.

REMARKS.

Light to heavy rains fell over all districts except Ohio. Freezing temperatures occurred this morning in Northwestern Minnesota, the Dakotas and Manitoba.

H. W. RICHARDSON, Local Forecaster.

T. indicates inappreciable rainfall. *For yesterday. †For 24 hours ending 8 a. m. 75th meridian time. NOTE—The average maximum and minimum temperatures and the average rainfall are made up at each center from the actual number of reports received. The "state of weather" is that prevailing at time of observation.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Market Opens Narrow and Advances But Recovery Not Held.

Firmer Tone of Call Money Rate Had Restraining Influence.

New York, April 15.—Conflicting currents were very perceptible today in the opening price movement of stocks. Changes were generally narrow but very much mixed, and dealings were very small. Louisville & Nashville and Atlantic Coast Line declined ⅝.

Buying orders became effective in Southern Pacific and a few of the less active specialties. Room traders took profits after prices had arisen above yesterday's closing and the market then became quiet. Southern Pacific, Wabash preferred, Kansas City Southern, American Sugar, American Steel Foundries and Utah Copper made temporary advances of a point and American Beet Sugar 1⅜.

The bidding up of prices in pursuit of a campaign for an advance brought out unexpectedly heavy offerings of stocks. A firmer tone on the call loan market was a restraining influence. Prices drooped in the second hour and the market became very dull at a level slightly below last night's. American Malting preferred declined 4½ and Corn Products preferred 1. Bonds were heavy.

The market closed irregular. The upturn of prices in the final hour and covering of shorts pointed to the bears as the source of the early selling. Losses were recovered. Chesapeake & Ohio and Texas & Pacific rose 1 over last night, Southern Pacific 1⅜, Kansas & Texas 1⅝ and Denver & Rio Grande preferred 2. The recovery was not fully held.

New York stock quotations furnished The Herald by Piper, Johnson & Case.

COPPER STOCK BROKERS.
404 West First Street, Commercial Building.

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1910.

Our office is now at 404 West First street, we are right across the hall from the trading floor of the Duluth stock exchange, therefore we can tell you at any time just what the market is on any stock. We have a direct entrance into the exchange.

Trading is getting better in every issue. St. Mary's, which is a low-priced issue seems to be wanted from every direction at these low figures. We can use Butte & Superior at $2.18.

Butte-Ballaklava should now be bought for the mine is getting to a point where big dividends will come back to share holders.

Calumet & Sonora and Shattuck both very strong. These two are good. Red Warrior seems to have hit bottom and we think it should sell higher.

Butte-Alex Scott is selling too low altogether and there are some people who are doing their best to hold the price of shares down and they are doing fine. We have to give it to them for when a mine has about $300,000 worth of ore in one chute on one level and when the west drift of this massive ledge is in twelve feet of high grade ore and no end in sight, well, all we can say is they are certainly doing fine by holding the price of stock down to a point where they gradually get it from you for almost nothing. The shaft is going down fast; on the 10th they made six feet. The shaft went into the big Modoc ledge, which carries no high grade ore, but it is a massive ledge and Stone says he will be in it for 100 feet yet in shaft. We may hit high grade ore in the shaft and if the big Modoc vein makes into high grade, either in sinking or drifting then the Scott mine may be bigger than the North Butte. We already have the big ore bodies in No. 2 and No. 3.

No. 3 is a regular bonanza. Now then if the Modoc makes into high grade; well figure it out, the vein is about seventy feet wide.

EUGENE FOSS TELLS "INSURGENTS" THEIR TASK IS HOPELESS

Democrat From Massachusetts Makes Speech at Rochester, N. Y.

Invites Opponents of High Tariff to Join Ranks of Democrats.

Newly Elected Representative Tells of Issues in His Campaign.

Rochester, N. Y., April 16.—Urging his "insurgent Republican friends" to get down off the fence and join the ranks of Democracy, Representative Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts, Democrat, recently elected to congress from a formerly rockribbed Republican district, assailed insurgency and the protective tariff policy of the ruling party.

Representative Foss spoke at a meeting in the interests of James S. Havens, Democratic candidate to succeed the late Representative Perkins, and his speech was the first he has made since his election.

He declared that he now "enjoyed" in his various business enterprises from 45 to 100 per cent protection.

Too Much Protection.

"It is too much," he added. "I don't need that protection, and I ought not to have it. All that I have above a certain point represents tariff graft. I am willing that the protection should be cut right in half, and then I would have all I am entitled to or need."

In regard to insurgency he said:

"My insurgent Republican friends, if you want to accomplish the results you desire, you have got to step aside and join the opposition party and force legislation along lines that will bring relief. You have been 'insurgent' long enough, and what practical results have you secured?

"Senator Lodge read me out of the Republican party six years ago, but I clung to it, for I loved it, until my self-respect and my judgment forced me into the party of the opposition. I went out of the party last fall, and in a thirty days' campaign on these same issues, cut down a majority of more than 96,000 to one of less than 6,666.

"Senator Lodge said I couldn't make the tariff an issue last fall, but before the campaign ended he was de-

BULLISH TREND IN THE MARKETS

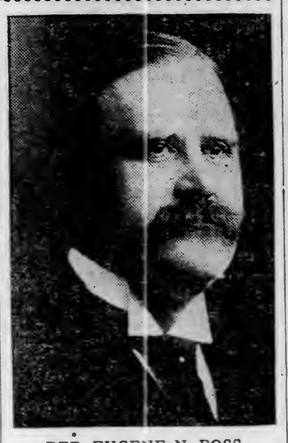
Business Conditions Combine With Action of Supreme Court.

New York, April 16.—The reassignment for argument of the anti-trust cases revived speculative activity in stocks this week, on the assumption that business activities would not await the practically indefinite postponement of these decisions. The check to the gold outgo encouraged the resumption of bullish activity.

Rumors of an increase in the United States Steel dividend were accompanied by confident predictions of future trade activity from official sources. Trade organizations, however, discussed pig iron curtailment, owing to signs of over-production and copper prices were cut sharply.

Prices for grain, cotton and provisions declined and crop prospects were improved. Settlements of labor disputes made progress. The necessity for additional corporation for financing was believed to supply a motive for fostering stock market strength.

FIGHT BREEDING FOR THE D. A. R.



Removal of Mrs. Guss From Office Is to Be Basis of Contest.

Washington, April16.—Evidence that a decidedly interesting session is awaiting the national congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution is growing stronger day by day. One of the latest developments in the fractional feeling that has been apparent in the session ever since the hotly contested election last year, when Mrs. Mathew Scott won the presidency general over Mrs. William Cumming Story, is the removal from the continental hall committee of Mrs. H. T. Guss.

The removal of Mrs. Guss was effected by a formal letter from Mrs. Scott, president general. It followed an admission on the part of Mrs. Guss that she had dictated a note to the manager of the Arlington hotel asking the district conference which was holding a meeting there to adjourn at once. This, it has been alleged, was done to block an effort to have Mrs. Scott indorsed by the meeting. Mrs. Scott considered that this action rendered the removal of Mrs. Guss from the committee necessary.

The anti-administration element, it is said, will present this matter of the removal of Mrs. Guss and also that of the dismissal of Miss Agnes Gerald, who was dismissed from the business office of the D. A. R., to attend the national congress, which convenes next Monday.

INVITES INSURGENTS TO JOIN DEMOCRATS

REP. EUGENE N. FOSS
Of Massachusetts.

WILL PAY ITS INJURED MEN

Steel Corporation Announces Benefit Plan to Take Effect May 1.

Provision Also Is Made for Families of Men Who Are Killed.

New York, April 16.—Following an announcement of an increase in pay for employes of the United States Steel corporation and its subsidiaries, estimated at $9,000,000 annually, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the executive committee has made public details of a plan for the relief of employes injured at work, and the families of men killed. The plan will be put in operation May 1 for a year's test, and if successful the company hopes to continue it with such modifications as experience may suggest. The cost will be several millions a year and employes do not contribute.

For Temporary Disablement.

For temporary disablement, single men will receive 35 per cent of their wages and married men 50 per cent, with an additional 5 per cent for each child under 16 and 2 per cent for each year of service above five years.

For permanent injury lump payments are provided, based upon the ex-

NAVY FOOTBALL PLAYER IS DEAD

Earl Wilson, Hurt Last October, Succumbs to His Injuries.

Annapolis, Md., April 16.—Midshipman Earl Wilson, the navy football player, died this morning.

Wilson, who was from Covington, Ky., was injured Oct. 16, last, in the game against Villa Nova college. It was while making a flying tackle that the back of his neck struck violently against the ground. An examination revealed a fracture between the fourth and fifth cervical vertebrae, and the spinal cord was severely depressed, causing complete paralysis from the shoulders down. An operation was performed by which the pressure on the spinal cord was relieved, and hope was felt that this would bring about his recovery, but in vain, as the cord was badly lacerated.

Made Plucky Fight.

After a fight that has been remarkable in many ways, but particularly in the pluck and cheerfulness of the paralyzed and helpless youth and the long warding off of the inevitable end by the surgeons, what was pronounced the final sinking spell preceding the death of Midshipman Wilson began Thursday afternoon.

His sister, Mrs. M. L. Galvin, arrived from Covington with her husband in response to a telegram. These, with the father, West D. Wilson, and his two other sons, L. B. Wilson and Hansford Wilson, kept close to the hospital and within call most of the time.

DARTMOUTH MAN IS CHOSEN BY MICHIGAN.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 16.—At a meeting of the regents of the University of Michigan today, Prof. Jesse B. Reeves of Dartmouth was appointed to the recently established chair of political science.

The regents increased the salary of Dr. Charles W. Edmunds $1,000. Dr. Edmunds had been offered a larger salary than Michigan paid him by Leland Stanford university.

SUFFRAGIST CAMP QUIET

Delegates Pass Over Taft Incident and Get Down to Work.

Alice Paul Tells About the Suffragettes in England.

Washington, April 16.—The hissing of the president of the United States having been repudiated and the episode having passed into history the convention of the National American Woman Suffrage association today resumed its moral atmosphere. The suppressed excitement of yesterday, when suffragists gathered in groups in the hotel lobbies or wherever they might meet and discussed the hissing incident was lacking today. The incident was regarded as closed.

President Anna Howard Shaw has announced that an investigation disclosed the fact that the supposed member who had voted against a letter of regret to the president was not eligible to vote in the committee and did not belong to the National association or any affiliated body. The objector is a suffragist however, and had registered her vote under the impression that all suffragists present were entitled to vote on the question. She apologized for her mistake.

Talk of Methods.

A conference on the practical methods of work preceded the opening of the convention. The delegates generally discussed the subject and suffragists from all parts of the country told of their plans and experiences in their efforts to place the movement intelligently before the people.

The convention has not yet finished consideration of the long list of committee and state reports and these occupied a good deal of the time today. It is expected however, that these will all be out of the way by the late afternoon, when "new business" will be taken up.

Alice Paul, the American, who won fame through her arrest in London

WIRE MERGER TALK REVIVES

Western Union Opens Part of Its Territory to Postal Concern.

Reno, Nev., April 16.—By stipulation between the Postal Cable Telegraph company and the Western Union Telegraph company, a decree has been signed in the district court allowing the former to erect lines across the state along the railroad right-of-way connecting Reno with Salt Lake, to complete a trans-continental line from New York to San Francisco. Opposition to the Postal petition for condemnation vanished at the last moment, strengthening belief in rumors of an agreement and merger.

The Southern Pacific company was the original defendant, appearing to protect the Western Union.

Keeps Date With Americans Instead---Makes Hit With Army Officers.

Vienna, April 16.—Mr. Roosevelt and Kermit made an automobile excursion today to the famous Kreuzenstein castle of Count Wilczek some twenty miles from Vienna. The weather was fine and the trip was greatly enjoyed.

While at breakfast this morning, Mr. Roosevelt received a call from Emperor Francis Joseph's aide, who invited him to accompany his majesty on a capercailzie hunting expedition following the court dinner tonight. These birds are shot just before dawn and the emperor proposed that they go on a special court train to Semmering in the Eastern Alps. Unfor-

ANOTHER OIL CASE IS UP

Tennessee Ouster Suit Will be Heard in Supreme Court.

Vertrees Will Appear as Council for Standard Oil Company.

Washington, April 16.—The government has for the moment given way to let the state of Tennessee wrestle with the Standard Oil company in the arena of the supreme court of the United States. While the main attack upon the great oil corporation under the federal anti-trust law has been deferred for weeks, or perhaps even months, by the court's decision that the case must be reargued, a subsidiary battle will be fought before the court early next week over the attempt of the state of Tennessee to oust the Standard Oil from doing business there because of alleged violation of the anti-trust statute of that state. The state courts have adjudged against the corporation, which now appeals to the federal supreme court from the judgment of ouster.

Vertrees Is Counsel.

John J. Vertrees, who is also chief counsel for the "defense" in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation is counsel in this case for the appellant, the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, which is one of the Standard Oil's subsidiary corporations. SAYS MORSE ONLY GOT HIS DESERTS

Stimson Criticises Efforts to Secure Pardon for New York Man.

New York, April 16.—Attempts to secure the release of Charles W. Morse from the federal prison in Atlanta are criticised in a statement made by United States District Attorney Henry A. Stimson published today.

"No man was ever more justly punished than Mr. Morse," says Mr. Stimson. "While I think his loyal wife deserves sympathy and admiration for her plucky fight, it is still my opinion that no man has been responsible for more of suffering and misery than Mr. Morse.

"Morse's conviction has resulted in a salutary change in the methods of conducting some of the national banks of this city. The directors are now looking twice before they cast speculative eyes toward Wall street."

Shade trees, which had begun to leaf out may be retarded.

DEFENDS BALLINGER

Edward C. Finney Testifies for His Chief at the Hearing.

Tells About Co-operative Certificates Issued By Mr. Garfield.

Washington, April 16.—Edward C. Finney, assistant to the secretary of the interior, continued his testimony today before the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee. He was questioned further about official acts of Mr. Ballinger and insisted that the secretary had acted in good faith in turning over the Cunningham claims to First Assistant Secretary Pierce.

Attorney Brandeis requested yesterday that he be allowed to defer cross-examination of Mr. Pierce and other subordinates of Mr. Ballinger until after he had an opportunity to examine the secretary himself. The committee appeared to be divided on the question, so action on it was postponed.

Attorney Vertrees examined Mr. Finney as to various matters which had been discussed by witnesses for the prosecution. It has been claimed that Secretary Ballinger modified a contract with power companies using water from Lake Tahoe, in California and Nevada, so as to give the company

Portland, Or., April 16.—Tests made with the albumen of eggs laid by hens infected with tuberculosis show that the "white plague" is communicable by this means, according to a report by W. H. Also, the tests have showed that the yolks of eggs failed to innoculate.

CHURCH FIGHT OVER AN ORGAN

Question of Using It in Services Is Taken Before the Courts.

Washington, Ind., April 16.—Failing to determine in fraternal council whether musical instruments properly may be employed in the services of the Christian church, differing factions in its membership in Southern Indiana decided to ask the courts to rule, and the controversy came before the Martin county circuit court today.

The progressive wing of the Christian church at Trinity Springs is suing the "non-organ" wing for possession of the property, which includes a small reed organ. It was over this organ, that the contention originally arose. Before it was installed, at the request of a traveling evangelist, music in the church had consisted solely of congregational singing of hymns without instrumental accompaniment. The "non-organ" of older party, refused to permit the "revivalist" to conduct his services in the church with the aid of the organ, and he and the "progressives" rented the schoolhouse and the Methodist church.

Sympathizers with both sides in many Southern Indiana Christian churches are contributing to the fund to pay the expenses of the trial and prominent attorneys from several cities are engaged in the case.

HAVE PROVED THEIR WORTH

Playgrounds a Boon to Children, Say Association Members.

Effort Will Be Made to Raise $1,000 for Work This Year.

The Duluth Playgrounds association this morning fixed $1,000 as the amount which the organization will endeavor to raise to further the work the coming season.

The work of the association last year demonstrated that it is past the experimental stage in Duluth; that great good can be accomplished by he playgrounds in the different sections of the city; that the children take a great interest in them and that their happiness and moral welfare are greatly furthered in this manner.

Miss Jean Poirier suggested that the children be called to help raise the funds which will be needed if the association is to be able to continue to progress. She thought that it would be an excellent idea to secure some large hall, probably the Armory or the high school, for a May fete in which the different numbers of the program would be given by children of several of the public schools. She thought that quite a sum could be secured in this manner. Those present at the meeting in the council chambers this morning thought the plan worth trying and referred it to a committee of which Miss Poirier is chairman for further consideration.

In introducing the resolution fixing $1,000 as the sum to be raised, L. A. Barnes stated that this does not necessarily mean that that amount must be raised, but rather as a goal at which to aim. The discussion showed that $1,000 can be used to great advantage, but the work of the association will not be stopped if the subscriptions fall below that figure.

The members present passed a resolution thanking the park board for the interest that it has shown in the playgrounds' movement and for the aid that has been rendered. The board assisted a great deal last summer and appropriated $450 last winter for the skating rinks which proved a decided success. This year it is understood that the funds of the park board will not permit of any financial aid.

A committee was appointed to investigate the possibility of securing a playground and public bathing place for children near the boat club. Miss Poirier, who directed most of the work of the association last summer, explained that from twenty-five to 100 children play there every day during the warm weather and that many of them wade and swim in the bay along the shore. It was thought that bathing suits and towels might be provided for a nominal fee and the assistance of the men at the life-saving station has already been assured. They will act as guardians. Mr. Barnes thought the suggestion first-class and thought that it might be extended to other parts of the city where boys violate the ordinances by going swimming in places where they are too much in view of the passing public.

A letter addressed to Mr. Barnes as secretary of the association, was read from the Russel Sage foundation requesting information as to the work that is being done here. The secretary was directed to answer all the questions asked and to include a reference to the free skating rinks.

Theodore Wirth, secretary of the Minneapolis park board, will be in the city next Friday and some of the members of the playground association will make it a point to help entertain and receive him.

ORDINANCE IS OPPOSED

Bakers Say Proposed Regulations Are Much Too Stringent.

Dealers May Ask Reconsideration of Fireworks Ordinance Monday.

Considerable opposition appears to be developing among the bakers of the city against the ordinance prepared by Health Commissioner H. E. Webster regulating the bake shops.

The bakers have already seen some of the aldermen and complain that some of the provisions are too stringent. Some object to one feature and some to another. One doesn't want to be required to wrap all his loaves of bread, while others say that the sanitary features are too stringent.

Dr. Webster declares that there isn't a thing in the ordinance to which any one desiring cleanliness in the making and handling of his food can reasonably take exception. He declares that it was drawn solely with a view to protecting the health of the community and it is not intended to work any hardships. The aldermen will go into the ordinance thoroughly before taking final action upon it. The clerk will probably have some extra copies of it printed in order that it may be carefully examined. The expressions thus far heard from the aldermen are generally favorable to the ordinance, as they are of the opinion that the city should have an ordinance governing the bake shops.

It is possible that some of the hardware dealers of the city will appeal to the council Monday night to reconsider the "safe and sane" Fourth of July ordinance passed last Monday night. They claim that it will cause them the loss of considerable money.

City Attorney Bert Fesler said this morning that he has not yet investigated the powers of the city council in the matter of regulating copper brokers and promoters of wild cat mining schemes and that he will not report to the council Monday night.

It is possible that the committee on resolutions will bring in another report on the high cost of living, which caused much discussion at the last meeting. The report was referred back to the committee without action.

Best Treatment For Colds.

Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderative laxatives, hot foot baths, a free prespiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment is simple. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, that is famous for its cures of colds and can always be depended upon? For sale by all druggists.

CONSIDERS PLAN TO PARDON POET

State Board Meets to Decide Fate of Convicts at Stillwater.

St. Paul, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—To consider applications for paroles and pardons of several prisoners in the state prison at Stillwater, among them being a petition for a pardon for "John Carter," who lately won the attention of an Eastern magazine by writing a couple of poems, and who is serving a ten-year sentence for burglary, the state pardon board met this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

It is barely possible that by its action "John Carter," whose real name is not made public, will become a free man.

The pardon board is composed of Governor Eberhart, Chief Justice Start of the supreme court and Attorney General Simpson. A pardon from this board requires the unanimous vote of the three officials. None would commit himself before the meeting as to his attitude on the question of freeing "Carter."

The man was arrested in the village of Karlstad, Kittson county, for breaking into a freight office and stealing $24. Only a few hours before the theft, the young man was roughly thrown from a freight train as a tramp.

NO ADVANCE FOR SICKLES.

House Refuses to Pass Bill Making Him Lieutenant General.

Washington, April 16.—By a vote of 149 to 69, the house refused to pass a bill giving to Maj.-Gen. Daniel F. Sickles the rank and pay of lieutenant-general, U. S. A. retired.

The house passed a bill declaring that Gen. Fred D. Grant was mustered into the service of the United States, April 29, 1863, when at the age of 15, he served as aide to his father, Gen. U. S. Grant, at Vicksburg. By this action Gen. Grant was made eligible to membership in the Loyal Legion.

Many others bills involving private claims were passed by the house.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION

Series of Lectures Extending Over Six Weeks to Be Given.

Movement to Arouse Renewed Interest in Art and Literature.

To prevent the college graduate from forgetting the interests awakened at college; to encourage the high school and normal graduates to continue their studies; and to generally interest the citizens of Duluth in art, literature and the drama—these are the objects of the Duluth University Extension Center, and in furtherance of these aims a course of lectures, extending over six weeks, will be given in Duluth, beginning May 7.

The university extension center aims to bring together twice each year, all the literary, social, educational and business clubs of the city to pursue some study of general interest.

Last fall Dr. William Norman Guthrie gave a series of lectures on the drama, and this year the history of French civilization as illustrated by literature, will be studied. The lecturer will be Benedict Papot, Ph. B., head of the romance department of the Chautauqua Institution of New York. There will be no little local color to the lectures, as much of Duluth's early history is interwoven with the adventures of the French explorers, such as La Salle and Daniel Greysolon Du Lhut.

Last year the Duluth Boat club, owing to the fact that there so many college graduates among its members, assisted in the work of planning the lecture course. This year the Duluth Commercial club will stand behind it. The Commercial club stands for the physical and financial betterment of the city, and the university extension work stands for the mental improvement of the citizens, so that the club directors feel justified in giving the movement their hearty support.

The officers of the Duluth University Extension Center are as follows: F. E. House, president; F. W. Paine, vice president; E. Lachmund, secretary; Mrs. Robert M. Seymour, chairman of the committee; Mrs. Stanley Holden, treasurer for the associate members.

The board of trustees is composed of the following members: Stephen H. Jones, C. C. Cokefair, T. J. Davis, W. I. Prince, George H. Crosby, J. B. Cotton, W. J. Olcott, O. C. Hartman, F. A. Patrick, Wilson G. Crosby, David Williams, E. A. Silberstein and E. Lachmund.

ST. HILAIRE WAS NOT INCORPORATED

Startling Discovery Made When Village Attempted to Sell Some Bonds.

Thief River Falls, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Whether or not the village of Hilaire is incorporated, is agitating that place. For over thirty years they have had a village form of government, and have performed all acts in accordance with this understanding, but now they find themselves unable to prove that they were ever incorporated and qualified to have the form of government they possess.

Some time ago bonds for $5,000 were voted for the purpose, securing funds with which to purchase a valuable water power in the Red Lake river, adjoining the townsite. The bonding company, when examining the records of the village and with the intent of purchasing the bonds, discovered that the village had never been incorporated. The records of the secretary of state and all the county offices in Red Lake and Polk counties failed to disclose the fact that the town had been organized as a village. This in itself would not be such a serious matter were it not that the village recently voted "dry" and in the event of another vote being taken on the bonding proposition, it is possible the same question would have to be mixed with the bonding one. The drys do not care to take any chances, and as a result the village will have to manage to get along without the sale of the bonds for the purchase of the power and without the development and progress which the improvement of the power would bring.

PRATT WILL URGE ENDING OF STRIKE

Philadelphia Carmen to Vote on Last Offer From Company.

Philadelphia, April 16.—The striking motormen and conductors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company will meet this afternoon to take action on the company's last proposition for ending the strike which began nine weeks ago today. C. O. Pratt, national organizer of the carmen's union, who has had charge of the strike, will present the offer to the men and urge that it be accepted. Radicals among the strikers are going into the meeting prepared to fight the proposition unless the company agrees to more concessions than they have been led to believe it has granted.

AGED MAN TAKES LIFE.

Phil Lamb of Sauk Center Found Hanging in Shed.

Sauk Center, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—After living to the age of 85, and for years being one of the highly respected citizens of this city, Phil Lamb, a pioneer settler, hanged himself in a shed back of his office. There is no known reason for his act, except that his mind was weakened by failing health.

Mr. Lamb was born in Vermont in 1825. When a boy he moved with his parents to the state of Michigan, where he made his home until 1856, when he moved to Watab, seven miles north of this city. After remaining there a short time he came to St. Cloud, and made that city his home until he left for Sauk Center. He had been a tax collector for many years. The funeral will be held here Sunday.

LOSE TIME AND MONEY

Thirty-Five Men Make Complaint Against Duluth Employment Agent.

Say They Were Sent to Job That Did Not Exist.

Thirty-five men complained to Prosecuting City Attorney Walter F. Dacey this morning that they are out $315 because of false representations made to them by an employment agent.

They claimed that they paid the agent $4 each, or $140, before leaving the city, which included $1 a piece for the job and $3 toward railroad fare. They asserted that they were to be sent to Necedah, Wis., to do railroad work at $2 a day.

When they got there, they told the attorney today, there were no jobs for them and that it cost them $5 each, or $175, for railroad fare to get back to Duluth. In addition to this they were out the price of their meals and the loss of their time, which was wasted.

The case is about the largest of the kind that has ever been brought to the attention of the authorities, and they will investigate it thoroughly. If the employment agent is at fault he will be prosecuted to the limit of the law.

Mr. Dacey believes, with his predecessor, that a special man should be employed to investigate cases of this nature and keep track of the employment agencies in the cities. It has been suggested that their licenses be raised to pay his salary and expenses.

IT PAYS TO REDUCE RATES

Telegraph Companies Find Themselves Swamped With Night Letters.

It pays to decrease rates; the telegraph companies say so.

A while ago the telegraph companies awoke to the fact that their night operators didn't have much to do during the evening except yawn, and so they decided to allow the public to send fifty words at night, to be delivered in the morning, for the same price as it costs to send ten words during the day time.

Since the system has been inaugurated in Duluth, there has been a great increase in the night business; so much so that the regular night operator had to quit yawning from ennui, and did it at the end of his shift from weariness. Then he became overburdened and the Western Union company has been forced to put on an extra man to accommodate the increase of business resulting from the night letters. The North American local office is also swamped with the night letter business.

One can say quite a lot in fifty words although many of the patrons of the night letter just can't condense it into anything less than fifty-two or else their thought peters out on the forty-sixth word. At any rate night letters are all the rage and if you are not sending or receiving them you are quite out of it.

The officers of the company are delighted with the welcome that the public has extended their night letters.

LACKAWANNA MAY HAVE BIG STRIKE

Negotiations Are Off, Is the Declaration of Officers of Unions.

Scranton, Pa., April 16.—There will be no more conferences over the wage scale between the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad and the trainmen's representatives, unless requested by General Superintendent Clarke, is the decision made today by Presidents Garretson and Lee of the conductors and trainmen's organizations.

Vice President M. W. Cadel of the Brotherhood of Engineers is expected here this afternoon, and an order for a strike will immediately follow if his approval is given.

Meanwhile General Superintendent Clarke must agree to accept whatever award may be made by the arbitrators of the New York Central wage question, say the grand lodge presidents, or the Lackawanna will be involved in a strike which will include conductors, trainmen, engineers and firemen.

"THE NATIONAL FLOWER."

Operetta to Be Presented By Children of Cloquet.

Cloquet, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—"The National Flower," an operetta in three acts, will be presented by the children of the public schools in the Nelson opera house next Saturday afternoon and evening. The play which is to be presented by seventy-five children, is under the direction of Miss Clara G. Draper supervisor of music in the public schools. The main object of the play is the selection of a national flower from the large number of candidates. The candidate after they have pleaded their case to the judge and the jury, listen to the arguments of the others. The trial is most interesting, and when Uncle Sam decides the case it is satisfactory to all. The following is the cast of characters: Judge, Miss Anna Michaelson; bailiff, Walter Bengston; lawyers, Herbert Sell and Ambrose Frederickson; goldenrod, Miss Gladys Wright; clover, Miss Sadie Selmser; thistle, Miss Fay Redfield; oak tree, George Frederickson; sunflower, Edward McClay; onion, Edward Myers; Uncle Sam, Oliver Olson; jury, old maids, choruses of roses, lilies, daisies and weeds; minuet dancers, lower grade children.

RAILROADS SERVICE NOT IMPROVED

Hardship Worked on Residents of Towns Between Duluth and Border.

Promised Local Service Has Not Been Established By Canadian Northern.

A promised improvement in the passenger service between Virginia and Ranier has not been made by the Canadian Northern, though the announcement of the placing in effect of a short line service along this stretch of the Canadian Northern track was made some time ago.

All but three stops on the line between Virginia and Ranier have been cut out by the Canadian Northern. This has cut down the running time of the train between Duluth and Winnipeg and made the train more of a through service.

When the towns were cut out it was announced that a local passenger service would be placed in effect. This announcement was made in Duluth by Traffic Manager George Shaw. The towns in question have been cut out but no local passenger has been installed to take the place of the passenger service of which the citizens of these towns have been deprived.

It takes some of the citizens of these little towns four days to get to Duluth and back, with the poor facilities of the present service.

They are compelled to take a freight to Virginia from various points along the line, invariably getting to Virginia too late to catch the passenger for Duluth. They are obliged to wait a day in Virginia for the next passenger train.

Under the present lack of passenger service, it is very difficult for the citizens of these towns to get here and the trade between Duluth and the numerous towns between Virginia and Ranier has been reduced from this lack of traffic facility.

STUDENTS TO WRITE NOVEL

High School English Pupils Collaborating on Story of Duluth.

Other Activities of the Week at the Central Institution.

The fifth year English class, which was started at the beginning of the year and is being conducted by Mr. Sprague, has commenced the main object of its course, the writing of a novel.

This class was started as an experiment. The class is composed of selected students from the junior and senior classes and has been working all year in preparation for a novel, typical of Duluth and the range. Each member has prepared special reports on Northern Minnesota and has written stories centering in Duluth.

The class has been quite a success considering that the attendance is not compulsory and this final effort seems to be furnishing a feature that is entirely new to the high school. It is starting a new interest in the romantic history of the Head of the Lakes and may result in more splendid fiction narratives of this heretofore untouched field.

The girls who took part in the Central-Irving debate last week were not discouraged in the least on account of their defeat. This is the first attempt of the Central girls in debating and with the interest created by the Irving debate they are looking forward to a strong team next year.

The Central girls have nothing but praise for the girls from the West Duluth institution and acknowledge with good will that they were inferior to their strong opponents.

A Real Family Remedy

A family remedy is one that any member of the family—man, woman or child—can use with safety in those common ailments which from time to time attack some of its members. A boy cuts himself or runs a nail into his foot—a small matter in itself, but if not properly attended to, lockjaw may set in, and death in its most horrible form will result. Or a slight cold may attack the most robust member of the family—nothing serious in itself, and yet every case of chronic catarrh, bronchitis, pneumonia, tuberculosis, or consumption, starts with a common cold, which, if neglected, ends in death, perhaps after years of intense suffering.

When the celebrated Swedish chemist, Dr. P. Hakansson, discovered the antiseptic and antitoxic known as Salubrin, the discovery was hailed by the medical profession of Sweden, (where physicians are paid by the Government for teaching the public how to avoid sickness and to cure common ailments without having to call in a doctor), as a most valuable medical discovery, and on recommendation of the medical faculty of the Royal University of Lund, the Government remitted the tax on the alcohol used in the manufacture of Salubrin, thus enabling Dr. Hakansson to produce Salubrin at such a low price that even the poorest person can afford to keep a bottle on hand for cases of emergency. As a result, Salubrin has become the one great family remedy of Sweden, the annual sales amounting to over 1,250,000 bottles in a population represented by little more than 1,000,000 families.

Salubrin has proven equally efficacious in all cases of external injuries and ailments, such as wounds, sores, skin eruptions, as well as affections of the mucous membrane, such as catarrhal and bronchial troubles, and is used either externally as a liniment or internally in five to ten parts of hot or cold water, or is inhaled as a vapor. In every case Salubrin destroys all disease germs and assists nature in removing or overcoming the ailment. No one who ever tried Salubrin will be without a bottle in case of need. 50c at druggists.

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM—Robert Edeson in "A Man's a Man."

LARGE AUDIENCE IS DELIGHTED

Robert Edeson Has Play That Every Husband Should See.

George Bernard Shaw once petulantly observed that he saw no reason why a theatrical presentation should be interrupted with applause. Church services, he added, were rarely disturbed by physical manifestations of approbation. The audience, he pointed out, forces the actor to divorce himself from his part in order to respond to the plaudits of the crowd. This, said Mr. Shaw, removes the glamor and the theatric effect that the actor labors to produce. "This," he concluded, "is why I never respond to calls for my presence on first night performances of my plays."

Whatever merit Mr. Shaw's theory may have, the audience at the Lyceum last night defied Shaw and Shawisms. It made a generous display of its commendation of Robert Edeson and his capable associates in the drama by Anna Steese Richardson and Henry Leslie Fridenberg, "A Man's a Man." Curtain calls were successively repeated after each of the various acts.

"A Man's a Man" is an exposition on some of the underlying causes of the divorce evil, cleverly written in places and well conceived. The authors show mastery of stagecraft. The story is told well and the structure is built on a firm foundation and well reared. But the plot—it leads one around in a circle and gets him nowhere except to impress upon his mind what some Frenchman had already said before that the husband should also be the lover.

The authors evidently started out to point a moral or make virtue its own reward, but toward the end of the play they changed their minds and gave the hero back his wife. Beginning with an argument that incompatability is a basis for divorce they immediately showed cleverly the dissimilar hopes and ambitions and the conflicting attitudes toward a common life that strained the relations between the man and wife about whom the action of the play revolves; but hardly is this element injected into the theme than it is immediately dropped. The play drives quickly forward to the simple situation that the man finds he has let business come between himself and his wife. He chucks business into the discard because he got a fortune from father and doesn't need business. He becomes the lover again and nothing more is said about incompatability of temperaments. Every woman should take her husband to see "A Man's a Man." If she hasn't any the next best bet will do.

The Story.

Townsend Hewett's father was a wealthy lawyer who died. Townsend Hewett left the social whirl to become attorney for John Crane, Montana capitalist. Hewitt wanted honor and fame. To get them Crane set him at work to jam a bill through the Montana legislature making incompatability a legal basis for divorce as Crane thought his wife impeded his social progress. Mrs. Townsend Hewitt was a New Yorker who was bored by anything west of Hackensack. Montana was unbearable and she went to New York. Crane happened to be on the same train. Townsend Hewitt could not accompany his wife as he was carving out fame, honor and other desirable emoluments.

Townsend forgot to write, which is quite unforgivable in these days of night telegraph letters, and his wife sought solace in the company of Crane. She loved Townsend, however, and told him about Crane, but Townsend was too busy washing Crane's soiled linen in Montana to read the letters, so when Mrs. Crane—refined and superior in every way to her husband, of course—turned up and told Townsend Hewitt what was going on in New York, after getting him to drop her husband's cause, Townsend took the next train East.

To cut a long story short, Townsend's wife had not done anything that a perfect lady shouldn't do. Nay, nay. In fact she hated Crane and wanted to tell him so just before he departed for Europe, but Townsend, always on the job with the proper thing to do, and the proper way to tell how to do it, got her to forego her revenge and let Mrs. Crane have the tickets that Mrs. Townsend Hewitt had bought. "If I can get ten days with my husband, I'll win back his love," Mrs. Crane had told Townsend. This, it occurs to the critic, ought to get a hearing with those folks who are trying to cure the divorce evil. Just let the two folks who are at outs stay away from each other a while and then put the man on a boat or a desert island and give the woman a week or ten days' chance at him. The suggestion that the divorce courts would soon be out of business is respectfully contributed to the discussion.

The closing scene of the play is beautifully written. As the police reporter would say, it oozes human interest and human appeal. And it does. Hewitt is pleading for his wife's love. He tells her that he has always needed her love and the strength that it gave him; that it was the impelling power that drove him in search of a career. "Well, why didn't you tell me this before?" she answers. "That's what I wanted to hear." There's no doubt about it, every husband ought to see "A Man's a Man." The candidates could learn a few things, too.

Robert Edeson is a forceful Townsend Hewitt. There is a disposition on the part of play writers to make a man the central figure, the hero, the possessor of virtues unnumbered. "Lady writers" are especially addicted to this sort of thing. Mr. Edeson, however, dignifies the part created for him. Anyone else might make it an empty thing bristling with platitudes, but Mr. Edeson breathes life, strength, vigor and tenderness into the character of Townsend Hewitt who says that where his wife is concerned, "A man's just a man."

Menifee Johnstone was a satisfactory Montana capitalist, John Crane. Joseph Rawley was Burton Wells, Crane's private secretary. Miss Josephine Lovett was Townsend Hewitt's wife. She acted with repression and did not overdo the emotional scenes. Her naturalness added to her charm. Helen Macbeth was a handsome Jean Christy, companion of Mrs. Hewitt. Maggie Holloway Fisher as Miss Annis, a stenographer, made a hit with the audience as she deserved to do. The other characters are in competent hands. A performance will be given at the Lyceum tonight, and a matinee is being given today.

RELAYING RAILS ON GARFIELD AVENUE.

Work has begun on the relaying of the street car tracks on Garfield avenue. The street car company has placed switches on the Garfield avenue viaduct and cars now use only a single track on the largest portion of it. The other rails not in use are being replaced with heavier steel.

It is planned to relay the rails just in advance of the paving contractor, who expects to begin operations about May 1. The street will be torn up by the street car company and much necessary work will be saved if the paving contractor follows the work of the street car men.

Refuses Offer to Go to Larger Church at Columbus.

Upon the urgent request of his congregation at West Duluth and of the mission board in St. Paul, Rev. Walther Sievers, pastor of the St. Stephen's Evangelical Lutheran church, Sixty-seventh avenue west and Raleigh street, has decided to remain in Duluth, despite the fact that he received a flattering offer from a Lutheran church at Columbus, Ohio.

"The present state of affairs in Duluth indicates a very favorable future for the city and consequently for my two congregations in West Duluth and at Cloquet," said Rev. Mr. Sievers yesterday. He has just returned from St. Paul, where he has been in conference with the mission board.

REV. WALTHER SIEVERS.

Rev. Mr. Sievers has been pastor of the West Duluth church for the past eighteen months. When he came his congregation numbered seventy. Since that time the membership has just doubled. This is his first charge as he came direct to West Duluth from a seminary at St. Louis, Mo.

The specifications call for a structure with a sixty-foot frontage on Fifty-sixth avenue west and thirty-five feet on the Northern Pacific right-of-way.

The new market buildings will be used by the Producers' Co-operative Market association and will also be open for the free use of farmers in the vicinity who are not members of the association.

Each school will have two representatives, one for the oratorical part and the other for the declamatory part of the program. TREES AND SHRUBS BEING PLANTED

The first work for the beautification of the courthouse grounds has been begun. A crew of men is at work cutting the sod behind the building and large boxes of shrubs and small trees have been received from nurseries in the Twin Cities.

This work is in no way connected with the movement started some weeks ago for the beautification of the grounds at Fourth avenue west and First street. The present work has been under consideration and was provided for some time ago.

The work now being done is only on the slopes at the back of the courthouse. The sod is being cut and shrubbery planted. A concrete wall and an iron fence are being built at the top of the hill on the Third street side.

The beautification of the other grounds will not be taken up until the next meeting of the county commissioners when the bids will be opened on the work.

WHAT BOYS OF DULUTH ARE MAKING AND DOING

A Wireless Club With Twenty Youthful Members Is in Existence.

Boys Received Messages From the Steamers America and Jenkins.

Others Making Aeroplanes---Endion School Wins in Boys' Exhibit.

Both amazing and interesting is the boys' hobby exhibition at the boys' department Y. M. C. A., and even grown people would find a visit to it profitable and entertaining.

Boys have hobbies of all kinds as is fully demonstrated by the great number of different articles on exhibition in the showroom at the building.

A wireless station is the chief attracton. The exhibition is given under the auspices of the Wireless club which is composed of a score of boys. What they know about wireless they have picked up themselves, and their knowledge is astonishing. They send and receive, tell who is talking and from where, and they succeed in keeping the large crowd entertained with messages that come over the wire.

This morning the steamers America and Jenkins were talking and the messages were written out as they were received. The spectators were allowed to listen to the receiver from which the clicks could be plainly heard.

Harold Tufty, Harold Armstrong and Ethen Deery are the officers of the club, and they were this morning in charge of the instrument.

The wireless is the chief attraction during the hours of the show, and the spectators look with wonder on the very young boys who receive and send messages with the confidence of old heads.

Teachers Attend.

A large number of teachers from the public schools were in attendance at the show this morning and many of them exclaimed with wonder as they recognized some fine piece of work done by one of their pupils.

The airships and the wireless instruments are the most wonderful, but the drawings, stamp collections, coin collections, burnt wod work, knife work, kites, and many other things done by the boys are almost equally interesting.

The show was put on to bring out what the boys are interested in, and in this respect it has been most successful.

All the work has now been judged, the prizes distributed and it has been found that the Endion school grade is the winner among the schools, having 71 points. The other schols finished as follows: Lakeside, 19; Adams, 13; high schol, 11; Bryant, 8; Franklin, 5; Lowell, 4; Longfellow, 5; Normal, 3; Whittier, 5; Jefferson, 3; Washington, 1.

Last night in the auditorium of the department an entertainment contest was held. Donald Alexander won the vocal solo, Ronald Myron the piano solo, Homer Holdren the oratory contest, and the orchestra of the Longfellow school got the prize for the best orchestra selections.

The exhibition brought out the fact that among the boys of Duluth there are but few interested in photography. There were but few entrants in this contest. There is, however, much interest in drawing of all kinds, show card writing, architectural drawing, poster drawing animals and cartoons.

Gorgon Hegardt of the Endion school won the prize for the best drawn map. It was of the United States, and at a short distance could not be told from one of the printed variety.

John Fee won the first prize for the best exhibition of penmanship. Kenneth Harris of the high school got the second prize.

For the best pen and ink drawing Stephen McGiffert of the Endion school captured the first prize. Warren Draper, also of the Endion school, received second prize. The work of both boys is far above the ordinary.

Warren Draper got the first prize for the landscapes done in soft pencil. Homer Collins, also of the Endion school, got second. A landscape done on polished hardwood received honorable mention. It was done by C. B. Diers of the Adams school.

The Best Poster.

A prize was offered for the best poster to be used for advertising purposes in connection with Camp Miller, the summer camp of the boys' department. Ralph Brown, an employed boy of the city, drew the best poster, according to the judges, and as a result he will spend a week at Camp Miller this summer with all expenses paid. Kenneth Harris got second prize.

For still life drawings Theodore Broman of the Adams school and Stephen McGiffert of the Endion got honorable mention.

For the best water colors Douglas Walker of the Endion school got first and Warren Draper of the same school second.

For drawing of animals Stephen McGiffert received first and George Lol of the Jefferson school, second. Jake Usan, a lad of but 12 years of age, had some fine, large, colored pictures of wild beasts. They were not entered in time to be considered, however.

In the show card writing contest Warren Draper received first prize and Douglas Walker, second. In the poster contest L. A. Dies of the Adams school was the winner.

The Cartoon Contest.

The cartoon contest aroused a great deal of interest among the boys, as many of them are greatly interested in this line of work. Kenneth Harris of the high school captured first with a picture of Sir Thomas Lipton in hot pursuit of the America cup. Stephen McGiffert of the Endion school got second with a cartoon on the high cost of living.

For the best collection of old coins, Kenneth Barrows of the Endion school got first. In the burnt wood contest Walter Swanson of the Endion school got first and Warren Draper, second.

Russel Duncan had the best collection of post cards. Gordon Hegardt had the best stamp collection.

For the best work done with a common knife, John Hollenback captured first prize with his model of a bobsled. A fan carved from a solid piece of wood by Gilbert Nelson attracted much attention.

There were several aeroplanes entered in the contest. The one that received the prize was made by George Lawson. It was modeled after the Wright machine.

In the manual training contest Wallace Anderson of the Bryant school got first and Oscar Erickson of the Lakeside school, second.

There were steamboats, kites of all kinds, miniature engines, tugs, pounded brass, candle shades and many other things made by the boys that were very interesting.

The boys of the department are a "live" crowd, judging from the exhibit and their work and hobbies are as interesting as they are entertaining.

WARM PRAISE FROM SHAW

Northern Pacific Pamphlet Tells of Farming Possibilities Here.

Prof. Thomas Shaw says:

"From the market standpoint St. Louis would be the most desirable one in which to locate.

"Where in all the United States can a market door be found that stands more widely open, or a market that pays a better price for its products?

"A country pre-eminently adapted to the growing of sheep on all the higher land. The clover and grass pastures that it will provide are unexcelled.

"When the swamp lands in St. Louis county are drained those of them that have a clay subsoil will grow shipping hay for successive decades.

"The adaptation of the county for growing vegetables is unexcelled and the quality is of the best.

"The most productive herd of dairy cattle in the state is in St. Louis county.

"St. Louis county has room for nearly 300,000 more farmers on a basis of eighty acres for each.

"The clover pastures of Northern Minnesota are of perennial greenness until they are buried by the snows of winter."

"It is simply phenomenal the way grasses and clover will grow on this soil," says Prof. Thomas Shaw in a pamphlet being distributed by the Northern Pacific railway.

"While it is not a grain growing country in the sense that the prairies are, it will grow ample grain for the needs of the stock kept. Good water abounds everywhere. Some day this part of Minnesota will be covered with creameries and cheese factories through all its borders.

"Beyond all question, dairying is the ultimate goal of this region. Nature has pre-eminently adapted it to this class of farming."

The contention of the writer is that more profit should accrue to the grower of live stock and live products in Minnesota than will be obtained by the grower in the most favored regions of the corn belt.

It would seem entirely corect to say, the writer contends, that Northern Minnesota with its millions and millions of acres of cut-over lands is more favorably situated for dairy production than Holland; more favorably situated for growing beef than Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and more favorably situated for growing high-class pork than Denmark.

"For the production of milk, Minnesota will grow as much barley and more clover on a given area than Holland," he says.

"For the production of meat it will grow as many rutabagas and far more clover than Aberdeenshire, which has grown the finest meat in the world.

"For the production of pork it can grow barley as readily as Denmark, and clover and field peas more readily. And in the growth of all of these it leads the corn belt.

"The farmers of Northern Minnesota can produce milk, beef and pork more cheaply than these can be grown in the corn belt. While this is true, millions of acres of land that have been cut over are lying unutilized, in the condition in which the axe of the lumberman left them when it removed the best of the standing timber."

THE "PEANUT MAN" IS DEAD

Frank B. Nichols, 70 years old, affectionaly known to thousands of people in Duluth as "the peanut man," is dead.

He passed away at the poor farm shortly after 8 o'clock this morning following a paralytic stroke. He was at the institution twenty-four days.

"The peanut man" was a familiar figure to Duluthians. Loaded down with a big clothes basket filled with peanuts and pop corn, suspended by a wide strap over his shoulder, he went from one end of the downtown section to the other. Every office building knew him and every "buttons," as is the every man with whom he came in contact, always met him with a kind word or a tolerant smile.

The ball games he never missed. From one bench to another he circulated quietly, tossing up sacks and catching nickels in his hat in return. Rain or shine, he was always present, but he never "rooted" and was never known to make demonstrations of any kind.

Nichols is said to have wealthy folks in the East. J. L. Crawford, the undertaker who has charge of the body, has wired his brother, A. S. Nichols, at New York. He received instructions to take excellent care of the old man. Further instructions are expected as to the final disposition. It is possible that the body may be shipped East for interment.

Nichols was a tall, well built man, with a broad face and gray mustache. In his late years he has not been particularly strong, but with stooped shoulders and his nut and corn-laden basket he has covered miles of territory, going up and down stairs and across crowded streets with surprising agility.

Nichols, as far as known had no intimate friends in the city, although it is believed that there are people here who are acquainted with his family. Some had supposed that he was in good financial circumstances, but the report seems to have been unfounded.

Exactly the same number of girls were born the first quarter of this year as the first quarter of last year, the gain being entirely in the boys. There has been an increase of nineteen in the deaths, 243 persons dying the first three months of this year as compared with 224 the first quarter of last year.

CUPID WAS GIVEN JOLT

A smill bottle of whisky prevented the culmination at Ely tonight of a romance that had its inception years ago in the plains of Austria-Hungary.

While on her way to the range town from Forest City, Pa., with her two small boys to meet John Sievinski, to whom she was to have been wedded this evening, Mrs. Anni Rusbason was taken from the train at the union station last night by Sheriff Bates and lodged at police headquarters.

The officials and train hands thought she was crazy, as she was abusing the two children and acting queerly. When Mrs. Walsh, the police matron, talked to her this morning, she said in fairly good English that she must have been crazy, but further questioning brought out the fact that her peculiar actions were due to a bottle of whisky. She said that it had been given to her by a passenger on the train.

Mrs. Rusbason is the mother of seven children, but the five oldest are of age and able to care for themselves. The boys, Willie and Jack, are 5 and 6 years old, and she intended that they should make their home with her and her second husband at Ely.

She said this morning that she met Sievinski in the Old Country and that she was on her way to marry him. Her first husband is dead. It appears that the two had been rivals for her hand in the Old Country and that the dead man had won out in his contest with Cupid. It seems further that they had kept track of each other and that when the first husband died, the former unsuccessful suitor soon renewed his offer of marriage and was accepted.

The case will be investigated further, but if the story of the whisky is found true, she will be sent on to her destination, for which she has railroad tickets for herself and children. In that event, the ceremony will only have been postponed one or two days.

MARION TO JOIN TEAM MONDAY

Don Marion will report to the Duluth team at Dayton, Ohio, Monday. This news was given out by Mr. Kuehnow today after a telegram had been received from the big pitcher. Marion is taken back with the understanding that he will be upon his good behaviour all the season.

There is no misunderstanding with Dauss that the officials of the club here are aware of. Dauss was satisfied with the conditions offered him and was ready to report to the club.

The Duluth team again defeated the Western Reserve University team, winning the game by the score of 7 to 6.

The team leaves today for the training trip. A number of games will be played before the team returns to Duluth for a series of games with the Superior team.

GENOA STRIPPING IN RECORD CLASS

Last Month 182,000 Yards of Earth Removed at Gilbert Property.

Gilbert, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Shipping has began from several of the mines in this vicinity. The stripping of the Genoa is going ahead with great despatch. Last month the yardage taken out was 182,000 which was very close to a record for two steam shovels. A record of seven yards per car was made. This mine will ship over 250,000 tons of ore this season according to plans formed. There will be employed some 400 men in the mine.

The Schley mine is getting ready for record work in mining in the near future and will employ 500 men in the one mine alone when the machinery and equipment is in shape. There is a vast amount of water to be handled in this mine and machinery is being installed that will take care of the flow easily. The adjoining mine, the Hobart has been closed down over a year and a half on account of the inadequacy of the pumping facilities, as the water flow is worse in this mine than any of the Gilbert properties. It is probable that this mine will not be operated until the neighboring properties are developed and are ready to help overcome the water difficulties encountered in the basin.

Work in Gilbert Mine.

Work is progressing in the west pit of the Gilbert mine in getting things ready for underground mining in the future. A 1,000,000 tons of ore will be taken out of the east pit during the coming season. It is expected that the present tracks of the Duluth & Iron Range, and the Duluth Missabe & Northern will be moved south of the Schley mine so that mining operations will not be impeded by these tracks which are crossed several times by switches from the mines in that vicinity. Several drills are at work putting down holes near the Pettit depot and one or two shafts will be erected there this season. Two shafts have just been completed at the Schley.

A communication from the Ely Business Men's association, requesting that the local club assist in the efforts to improve the road connecting the Mesaba and Vermilion ranges at the Tower and Biwabik points, so that it would be of more benefit to the tourists.

The question of building a road between Zim and Eveleth connecting this city with the Forbes district, and the four roads that run west to the Zim limit, was discussed. Country Commissioner McInnis informed the club that about $12,000 would be expended this year in the constructing of the Eveleth to Zim road, if his present plans carry.

The County club meeting at Biwabik next Tuesday, was the subject of much enthusiastic discussion and it was decided to invite the club to hold its following meeting at Eveleth. At this time the annexation election success will be celebrated at a joint banquet, to which the County club members will be invited, as will the steel company officials. The delegates appointed to attend the Biwabik gathering are P. E. Dowling, Dr. C. W. More, George A. Perham, J. J. Gleason, Charles Jesmore, Neil McInnis.

The question of an independent school district in place of the present common school district, which has been in the hands of a committee for sometime past, was brought up for consideration, and the meeting informed that a petition requesting the school board to set a date at which time the independent school district question will be voted upon, will be presented the school board at its regular meeting Monday.

To Be Rosy and Well

The right kind of food—not drugs—is necessary.

Grape-Nuts

The world-famous food scientifically made of wholewheat and barley, contains the blood-making, tissue-building, elements of these field grains, including the natural phosphate of potash (grown in the grains) which nature uses in making new brain and nerve cells.

In the manufacture of Grape-Nuts the starch of the grains is predigested-changed to a form of sugar which is quickly absorbed by the blood, and the user soon shows better color, and increased vigor of body and brain.

A few weeks' regular use of Grape-Nuts will show anyone.

ALLEGED BROKEN FAITH.

People of McKinley Claim Mining Company Broke Its Word.

McKinley, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is no little feeling here among citizens against the Republic Iron & Steel company, which has resumed drifting operations under the village. Mass meetings were held this week and evidence was produced that the miners employed in the objectionable drifts have been told to use light charges, and to do as much as possible of the work late at night.

The citizens consider that the company has broken faith with them in this matter, and that, in fact, the company has not acted the manly part at any stage of the game in the controversy, and are therefore the more ready to have the matter fought out legally. One strong complaint made by the property owners is that the company refused to allow their representatives to go underground and determine just what work is being done. The company claims that it is merely drifting. But certain it is that it has drifted under or right around several buildings, and the blasting directly below has worried the women and children.

Not believing that the company even contemplates buying the entire town, the citizens are determined to stop the alleged mining under the town, if such a thing is possible.

N. B. Arnold of Virginia has been retained to carry the matter into the courts.

HIGBEE IRON CO.

President's Office at ST. PAUL, MINN.

Mines on the Famous Mesaba Iron Range in Minnesota.

R. Bacon Higbee, President, Business Builder and Counselor, St. Paul; George Salzer, Vice President, President Salzer Lumber Co., Minneapolis.

PROSPECTUS

In brief, this is our prospectus. It's brief because our company's the genuine article, and the genuine article can always be presented without expensive superfluities. Cheap propositions, like cheap people, need fine trimmings to gain attention. If you want an investment for profit, here's your chance, and if you don't say so, then we're no judges of the ability and intelligence of the people to whom this summary will be presented.

ORGANIZATION

The Higbee Iron company is incorporated for just One Hundred Thousand Dollars, divided into shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each. Think of it! Only one thousand shares! This is an exclusive company, everybody can't get in. Now, that's a business point of no small importance, for the slightest improvement in the welfare of the company means an increase of dollars, not cents, per share to every stockholder, and it is no unusual thing for companies organized on this plan to show profits of many dollars in a single day.

PROPERTY

The company owns the controlling interest in Iron Mining Lease from the State of Minnesota No. 722 on lands described as the N½ of SW¼ and E½ of NW¼ of Section 9, Township 56, Range 23, being a hundred and sixty acres located on the famous Mesaba Iron Range in the State of Minnesota, the biggest iron range in the world and from whose many mines come yearly about one-half of the world's iron ore supply. A dozen or more diamond and churn drill holes have already been put down on our land, blocking out a body of ore something like a quarter of a mile long and an eighth of a mile wide. Millions of tons of iron ore are shown to exist and many, many times as much will probably be found as development proceeds, and especially when drilling is continued deeper and over the balance of our property, seven-eighths of which has never even been touched. A great point about our mine is that the ore is only forty feet below the top of the ground, which will make it one of the easiest mines in the world to mine. Then, too, we are in good company, for on different sides of us we are adjoined by the mines and properties of the "Great Jim Hill" and the U. S. Steel company and other property of R. B. Higbee, George Salzer and the State of Minnesota.

The biggest kind of development is taking place here—here, where a few years ago was a vast timbered wilderness, are thriving towns, railroads and activity not unrivaled by the much-vaunted Panama canal. Things are doing here. It would do your heart good just to see it. No other mining equals it for stupendousness, modern business romance and picturesqueness. An Empire is in the building, and later, when the vast peat deposits are used to convert the raw ore into the finished product at the mines, the influence of the Empire that's growing fast will be reckoned with by all future generations. Here in the north woods of Minnesota—here on the banks of America's Inland Sea, is taking place a change that shall go down into history more wonderful to tell than any chapter of "Arabian Nights."

If you want to be a partner in this great drama, get busy and buy some of our shares today—tomorrow may be too late—stranger things have happened here. And then, there's one more great point about our stock. You'll never seee it selling at a less price than it is today. Every share that's sold brings par or more. You can't get it for less, and it's mighty cheap at that. Mr. Salzer and myself have sold some shares to people we wanted associated with us at only a hundred dollars each, or, in other words, par; but not one of the present stockholders would think of such a thing as selling much or all of his stock at such a ridiculously low figure. Five and even six hundred dollars should be cheap for this stock, figuring on the present development alone; and future developments should, if I am any prophet, bring the ultimate returns on a share of this stock up to ten or twenty times that much.

If seeing is believing, come with us and see. Twelve dollars and twenty-four hours time will take you from the Twin Cities to the mines and back, and it's worth more than that of any man's money just to know about these things.

Dividends are expected to begin in the near future, to be increased as rapidly as circumstances will permit. Come in with us now and, as time goes on, you'll congratulate yourself on your foresight.

We're the boys on the ground. We've been pioneers and we've seen the thing grow. It will pay you to be in with us. Such co-operation will be of advantage to you in more ways than one.

Our following is increasing every day, and if you, reader, are a lover of real enterprise, invest your money with us now. For immediate acceptance we offer a few shares at a hundred dollars each. Fortune awaits the investor in this enterprise, and if you are alive to your best interests, you'll grasp the opportunity. Thanking you for your kind attention, I am,

Yours sincerely,
R. B. HIGBEE,
President.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

In the Seventh judicial district, where Judge L. L. Baxter, the distinguished veteran of the bench, has decided because of his advanced age to retire, it is probable that M. C. Tifft of Long Prairie will be nominated for the judgeship. Mr. Tifft is a Democrat and so is Judge Baxter. It has been the custom in the Seventh judicial district to eliminate political rivalry for places on the bench and to this end the Republicans have nominated one of the two judges and the Democrats the other. It is proposed to continue this practice, as it has proved to have none but good results.

Judge Baxter's service on the bench has extended over a period of a quarter of a century and now that the years begin to rest heavily upon him, it is said to be his desire to seek rest and freedom from the labors he has so long carried for the state. Judge Baxter, who is a native of Vermont, has been a resident of Minnesota since 1857. He had a distinguished record in the Civil war and emerged from that conflict a lieutenant-colonel, and from 1864 to 1883 he served in the Minnesota legislature as representative and senator.

The other Seventh district judge is Myron T. Taylor.

Mr. Tifft, whose candidacy is expected to be formally announced soon, is now deputy insurance commissioner of the state. He is a native of Illinois and came to Minnesota in 1879. Admitted to the bar in 1889, he practiced law at Long Prairie until he was appointed actuary of the insurance department in 1907. A year later he became deputy commissioner. He is widely known as a capable lawyer and has every intellectual and ethical equipment for a place on the bench of the Minnesota judiciary.

According to the Little Falls Transcript, J. W. Mason of Fergus Falls is said to be considering the advisability of announcing himself a candidate for Judge Baxter's place, but advices from the district are that there will be little chance of Mr. Tifft's defeat in the election, as the sentiment in favor of maintaining the political equilibrium of the district bench as in the past, is very strong.

"The probabilities are Eveleth will have a candidate for an important county office whose announcement, we believe, is equivalent to a nomination and election," says the Eveleth News. "He is practically sure of a solid support from the range, and that he will share the Duluth votes is a certainty. He is considering the step in the light of political developments."

Discussing the legislative situation in the Fifty-second district, the Altkin Republican says that while the candidates, who have appeared for the house seats, are strong men, there is a dearth of aspirants for the senate. Continuing, the Independent doesn't approve of Senator Gunn and proposes Prof. A. J. McGuire to succeed him.

The "big four" who will control the actions of the state senate next winter, according to a paragraph that is going the rounds of the press, was be: J. F. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle, R. C. Dunn of Princeton, Alvah Eastman of St. Cloud, J. Adam Bede of Pine City.

The country editors seem determined to get J. Adam down to St. Paul to make copy for them.

Sam Y. Gordon of Brown's Valley, who was in the city this week says that although he has a plank in his platform as a candidate for lieutenant governor favorable to reapportionment, he did not know the strength and earnestness of the movement for that desired legislation until he came to the Head of he Lakes. While here he declared that he was just as strongly for a square deal on the reapportionment proposition as he was on that of county option. He has said that he will appoint a committee on temperance, if elected, that will report a county option bill, so that the members of the senate will be forced to record their votes on the bill. He took occasion to say while here that his attitude is just the same on the reapportionment issue. The southern part of the state, he said, had no dis osition to deny justice to Northern Minnesota. Mr. Gordon's platform, as promulgated by the Gordon Club of Traverse county, is as follows:

"I favor a reapportionment of the state by the next legislature.

"I favor the proposition for a one mill tax for the improvement of public roads.

"If nominated and elected lieutenant-governor, I will use by best endeavor to select a committee on temperance that will report out, without unnecessary delay, a county option bill, should one be introduced, and thereby make it necessary for each individual senator to vote on the measure, to the end that he may be held directly responsible to his constituents for his action, believing that on such well defined questions as this the views and wishes of the people can best be obtained and carried out when members are brought face to face with the issue, and are thus held directly responsible to their constituents for their action.

"I favor the extension of agricultural instruction, industrial work, and domestic science in the schools of the state, and liberal state aid for all high, graded or consolidated rural schools, as rapidly as they properly equip themselves to carry on such instruction.

"I favor, so far as is within the power of the state to control, a regulation of railroad rates so that villages and small cities may not be discriminated against by being required to pay more for the hauling of freight the same distance than larger cities of the state.

"I favor more equitable tax laws, to the end that all property rights and holdings within the state be made to pay a fair share of taxation, but in this connection the legislature will probably await a report and suggestions from the tax commission now at work.

"In common with all loyal citizens, I favor a conservation of our natural resources, and looking to the development of our water power and waterways for the use and benefit of the people.

"In fact, and in short, if the Republicans of the state see fit to nominate me, and the voters should electe me, I will give the people the best that is in me in support of a square deal to all, without fear or favor.

"The opportunity to merely fill the position of lieutenant-governor does not especially appeal to me, and I would only accept it with a view to fill it in a way that would prove of general benefit to the state and party as a whole."

French Method of Developing the Bust

Mdme. DuBarrie Explains How the Bust May Be Developed 2 to 8 Inches in Thirty Days.

"I am explaining for the first time to the ladies of America," says Madame Du Barrie, "the French method of developing the bust. It is much more effective, the results appear much more quickly, the breasts become more firm, plump and symmetrical, the method is more simple, the effects more lasting, and altogether beyond comparison with the results produced here.

"You know the French people have the development of the bust and form down to a fine point.

"By this French method, the breasts may be developed from 2 to 8 inches in 30 days. This applies to women of almost any age, from young girls to elderly matrons, whether the bust is absolutely not developed at all, or has grown weak and flabby, and hangs, no matter from what cause.

"It is beauty of form that attracts much more than the features. You will always find it so with both sexes.

"I will be only too glad to tell any woman who is interested what this simple French method is, if she will enclose a 2-cent stamp to pay for the postage. I will send an illustrated booklet in a plain sealed wrapper that will explain it all."

We suggest to our lady readers that they write to Madame Du Barrie for particulars of this remarkable French method, enclose 2 cents in stamps for the illustrated booklet and address it to Madame Du Barrie, Suite 1647, Quinlan building, Chicago, Ill.

TOO ILL TO LEAVE WHEN RELEASED

Prisoner at County Jail Given Suspended Sentence By Judge Cant.

Wasted to a shadow of his former self by imprisonment and sickness, Oscar Hanson, arrested in Hibbing for forgery, was given his freedom under a suspended sentence by Judge Cant in district court yesterday afternoon.

Too weak to hunt for a place to shelter him over night and without a cent to pay for lodging, he was obliged to accept the hospitality of the county jail, where he had been involuntarily kept since last February. He didn't have money with which to pay his fare to the home of his parents in Wilton, Minn., but his jailers and the men at the courthouse will probably raise enough to purchase the ticket today.

When Hanson was placed in a cell at the county bastile he was robust and healthy, pulling the scales at 175 pounds. But he contracted pneumonia and had to be taken to the hospital. He was released from the institution several days ago, almost a skeleton and weighing only ninety pounds.

The county attorney learned of his condition and stated to the court that he was willing that he should be allowed to go back to his home if he would acknowledge his guilt. He entered a plea of guilty to petty larceny and was given a suspended sentence.

but conditions are ideal for wheat that is in ground and already up.

Passenger trains are running on all roads, and though traffic is rather slow it is not greatly delayed. Freight traffic was somewhat delayed. Wire service will be restored by night to all points west of here.

Wires Are Down.

Crookston, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The sleet storm abated last evening, and was followed by snow, of which two inches fell. Wire and telephone service are partially paralyzed today, conditions being the worst in years. The snow is hailed with delight by farmers, who have over half their wheat in.

The chief damage is to telegraph wires, though connections with St. Paul are fair. All branch line telegraph wires are down in every direction, hundreds of poles being broken; and service will not be normal for ten days. Long distance telephone service is completely paralyzed in all directions, except the St. Vincent line and to Grand Forks. Fargo and the big cities are all cut off. Poles at Dugdale, on the Bemidji line are down, and similar conditions exist to the east. Telephone service will not be normal for two weeks.

Pavements Are Icy.

The weather is moderating today, and no damage will be done to budding trees if the weather does not grow blossomed, and are not damaged.

Train service has not been interrupted. Lawn shrubs and early plants would have been killed, but they were all covered. Paved streets and sidewalks are very dangerous, with a glare of ice. Horses cannot stand up, and many pedestrians have had bad falls.

EUGENE FOSS TELLS "INSURGENTS" THEIR TASK IS HOPELESS

fending and praising the Aldrich act whenever and wherever he spoke. It was the dominant issue.

Tariff as an Issue.

"It was along the same lines, when the opportunity came this spring, that I fought the campaign in the Fourteenth district, and the district which defeated me last fall for lieutenant governor by 5,000 votes has just sent me to congress by a majority of 5,600 votes.

"The insurgent Republicans hope, as I hoped for eight long years, to bring about reform within their own party. It's a mistake. It can't be done. To my insurgent Republican friends I say, 'Don't be a near-Democrat, be a real one. Come over with me where you belong and where you can do real service.'

"Party names mean little today, he declared, to the average man who thinks seriously.

"It was not a party victory in the Fourteenth district. It was a protest by men of all shades of political belief against an economic policy which has made and is still making it more difficult for the average man to stretch his income to meet his absolutely necessary living expenses.

"Life-long Republicans sat on the platform side by side with life-long Democrats when I discussed the tariff issue and the applause was as hearty from the one as from the other."

Mr. Foss started off humorously by saying: "We recently had an election in Massachusetts." He spoke first of his campaign and of the issues on which he won it. His campaign, he declared, had been one of publicity. The full strength of the Republican machine in the state, he said, was exerted in behalf of his opponent.

New England and the Payne Law.

"The entire campaign was fought on tariff lines," he said. "Our platform was put into the hands of the voter. I discussed the tariff in almost every town and village in the district, pointing out to the voters what this outrageous tariff was doing for them. I endeavored to show them how the tariff affected every article that they wore, ate or drank or that contributed to the comfort of their homes.

"While Senators Lodge and Aldrich claimed that the Payne-Aldrich tariff was drawn in the interests of New England and chuckled over the thought that they had given New England more than it was entitled to, the people of this most typical New England district have repudiated flatly the Aldrich act, and pronounced it unfair, unjust, inequitable. They realize that it would be disastrous to permit it to remain."

Mr. Foss declared that his election means that the people are tired of the Aldrich bill.

"It is a demand of Massachusetts and of all New England for free raw material, untaxed food and wider markets. It is a demand that we treat Canada decently and that we take down our tariff wall against her.

"I would go so far as to say," he continued, "that we should do this whether Canada lowers hers or not. We are the sufferers. We use her lumber, her coal and iron, her wheat, her woodpulp—her other products.

"The remedy lies in the hands of the people," he said in conclusion, "and they are going to apply it this fall, else I greatly misunderstand the signs of the times and the temper of the American people."

tent to which the injury interferes with employment and the annual earning capacity of the victim.

Where an employe is killed, his family will receive a sum equal to his wages for a year and a half, with an additional 10 per cent for each child under 16, and 3 per cent for each year of service above five years. In cases of injury a period of ten days must elapse before relief begins.

Legal Liability Not Affected.

Attention is called to the fact that for some years the subsidiary companies have been making payments to men injured and the families of employes who are killed in practically all cases, without regard to legal liabilities, aggregating about $1,000,000 annually. The new plan, however, is expected to bring additional benefits. Legal liability, it is stated, does not enter into the new arrangement.

Announcement also is made that a plan for pensioning disabled or superannuated employes is under consideration and it is expected this soon will be put into practical effect.

have charge of the state's response to the appeal.

The ouster proceedings originated out of a transaction at Gallatin, Tenn., in 1903. The Evansville Oil company of Evensville, Ind., sent a drummer into Tennessee and sold a quantity of oil to merchants in Gallatin. The Standard Oil agent learning of this, offered to give them ten gallons of oil per barrel to countermand their purchase orders. Four of the merchants accepted the offer.

Couldn't Fine Company.

The Standard Oil company and two of its agents were indicted on a charge of criminal conspiracy in restraint of trade, in violation of the Tennessee anti-trust act. One of the agents was convicted and his sentence to pay a fine was affirmed by the supreme court of Tennessee, while the company went free on the ground that the statute did not authorize a fine on corporations, but provided for ouster or dissolution as a punishment. The ouster suit was then brought.

for militant tactics speaking on woman suffrage in Great Britain, presented an exhaustive review of the situation in England. She declared that the cause has been misrepresented and distorted by the press of England, and compared the criticism of the suffragists there to that of the abolitionists in the United States.

Tells of Work in England.

She said in part:

"The essence of the campaign of the suffragettes is opposition to the government. The country seems willing that the vote be extended to women. This last parliament has shown its willingness by passing their franchise bill through its second reading by a three to one majority. But the government, that little group which controls legislation, would not let it become law.

"It is not a war of women against men, for the men are helping loyally, but a war of women and men together against the politicians at the head, who because of their own political interests, seem afraid to enfranchise women.

"The suffragists have gone with petitions to the head of the government as our representatives will go in a few days to the authorities in Washington. In Washington they will be received with courtesy. But Mr. Asquith has never, since he has been prime minister, received a deputation of women on this question of their suffrage. Each time he curtly refuses to see them and orders the police to drive them away or arrest them. Thirteen times the deputations of one society alone have been arrested.

Went to Cabinet Meetings.

"When the women found they could not approach the government in the usual way at the house of commons, they tried to voice their grievances at the public meetings of the members of the cabinet, exactly as the men do. But their questions were unanswered. They were flung out with violence and finally were excluded altogether. For protesting against this exclusion they were again imprisoned.

"But," you say, 'the women have been violent too—they have broken windows.' Three and a half years they endured this insulting treatment of their sex and offered no resistance. Then, after months of deliberation, they realized that it was absolutely necessary for the success of their cause that stronger measures be taken.

"Denied a hearing in the press, denied a hearing at the house of commons and denied a hearing at the public meetings, they adopted that time-honored measure of protest—the breaking of a few windows. It was a symbolic act of rebellion, a sign to the government of the great spirit of defiance in the hearts of its subject women—just as our fathers held the Boston tea party as an act of protest against the British government of that day. As that defiant deed was of enormous effect, so has been this deed on the part of the women."

TEDDY HAS TO DECLINE

tunately, Mr. Roosevelt's engagement to receive the members of the American colony tonight compelled him to decline this gracious invitation.

While Mr. Roosevelt was still at his morning meal, the four children of Mrs. Frederick of Chicago, who is residing temporarily here, entered the dining room and presented him with a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

Sees Sporting Exhibition.

The former president had lunch with American Ambassador Kerens and later called upon Prince and Princess Furstenberg and was escorted by the prince, who is at the head of the management, to the international sporting exhibition.

The day will be concluded with the court dinner at the Schoenbrunn castle, a brief visit to the Imperial opera, and the reception to the American colony at the embassy.

Emperor Francis Joseph yesterday intended personally to return Col. Roosevelt's call, but was deterred from so doing by a sudden storm which broke late in the afternoon. Therefore he was compelled to send his aide de camp. Such an honor as a return visit from the emperor is only intended to reigning soverigns.

For Col. Roosevelt, his call on the emperor was the main feature of a busy day. Mr. Roosevelt used the imperial court carriage placed at his disposal by Emperor Francis Joseph until his official calls had ended. Then he discarded it for the faster mode of traveling—the automobile. He enjoyed the exhibition at the riding school, where the celebrated Lipizzan breed of horses, a mixture of Spanish and Arab blood, performed evolutions, dancing and finallly coming on to the platform where Col. Roosevelt sat and circling his chair so close that their hoofs almost touched his feet. But, as Col. Roosevelt remarked afterwards, "these are only society horses."

Made Hit With Army Men.

A clattering charge of the Magyar-Hussars, which constitute the emperor's bodyguard, across the parade ground of the barracks, on the contrary stirred him to real enthusiasm, and after the evolutions he made a detailed inspection of the stables, horse hospitals, etc, volleying questions at the officers, who accompanied him. He displayed such intimate knowledge of the cavalry and its operations, that the enthusiastic officers ceased to regard him as a former president, but looked on him as a colonel of the Rough Riders and a companion at arms, and they concluded the inspection by escorting Col. Roosevelt to their mess room where his health was drunk and three cheers for him were given.

Throughout the day the people of Vienna displayed the keenest interest in the American, collecting in crowds wherever he appeared and often cheering him. Col. Roosevelt scrupulously acknowledged every popular manifestation by bowing and raising his hat.

Col. Roosevelt at the gala dinner last night, escorted to the table the Countess Festitch, formerly Lady Mary Douglass-Hamilton, once the wife of the Prince of Monaco.

Ambassador Kerens, Ambassador Hengelmueller von Hengervar and Former Ambassador White also accompanied Mr. Roosevelt to Kruzenstein castle, which from a hill commands a magnificent view for miles around. Count Wilczek expended a fortune in restoring the palace and collecting treasures with which it is filled.

Two hours were occupied with the inspection, which Mr. Roosevelt seemed to enjoy hugely. While in the castle chapel the party was entertained by a rendition of Handel's "Largo" by Countess Wilczek.

better terms. Mr. Finney said that every contract relating to Lake Tahoe water, was prepared by the reclamation service.

Answered Newell and Davis.

Mr. Finney also replied to the criticisms of Secretary Balinger by Director Newell and Chief Engineer Davis. These witnesses claimed that Attorney-General Wickersham held the "co-operative certificates" or "Garfield currency" to be illegal because he had been led to believe that there were no funds in the reclamation fund, whereas some $2,000,000 was available.

Mr. Finney said that when the matter first was presented to the attorney-general, both Messrs. Newell and Davis were writing that there was no money on hand for new projects of any sort. He said also that after the opinion had been rendered Newell complained that the statement of facts to the attorney-general was not a fair one and he believed that if the reclamation service had been allowed to present the matter, the opinion would have been different.

"It was agreed then that a new case should be presented to the attorney-general," continued the witness, "and so a complete statement, prepared by Mr. Newell, was included in the papers on which a second opinion was asked. The second opinion confirmed the first one."

HAVE TO DELAY DR. HYDE'S TRIAL

Witness for the State Is Stricken With Appendicitis and Goes to Hospital.

Kansas City, Mo., April 16.—On account of Dr. G. T. Twyman, a state witness, being stricken with appendicitis, and it being impossible to tell his exact conditon today, the trial of Dr. B. C. Hyde was adjourned until Monday.

A jury was selected shortly after 8 o'clock last night to try Dr. Hyde on a charge of murdering the late Col. Thomas O. Swope. Just as the twelve men were taking seats in the jury box, a telephone message to Prosecutor Virgil Conklin, announced that Dr. Wyman was being taken to a hospital to undergo an operation.

MANY SAY HE REVEALS THEIR LIVES WITH AMAZING ACCURACY.

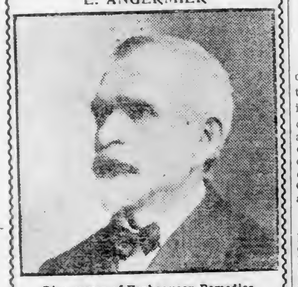
Free Test Readings Will Be Sent for a Short Time to All Readers.

Has the veil of mystery that has so long shrouded the ancient sciences been raised at last? Can it be that a system has been perfected that reveals with reasonable accuracy the character and disposition of an individual, and so outlines the life as to assist in avoiding errors and taking advantage of opportunities?

Roxroy, a man who has for twenty years been delving into the mysteries of the occult, making a scientific study of the various methods of reading the lives of people, seems to have reached a higher round in the ladder of fame than his predecessors. Letters are pouring into his office from all parts of the world telling of the benefits derived from his advice. Many of his patrons look upon him as a man gifted with some strange, mysterious power, but he modestly asserts that what he accomplishes is due alone to an understanding of natural laws.

He is a man of kindly feeling toward humanity, and his manner and tone immediately impress one with his sincere belief in his work. A huge stack of grateful letters from people who have received readings from him adds to other convincing proofs as to his ability. Even Astrologers and Palmists admit that his system surpasses anything yet introduced.

The Rev. G. C. H. Hasskarl, Ph. D., Pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, in a letter to Prof. Roxroy, says: "You are certainly the greatest specialist and master of your profession. Every one consulting you will marvel at the correctness of your detailed personal readings and advice. The most sceptical will consult you again and again after corresponding with you once."



If you wish to take advantage of Roxroy's generous offer and obtain a free reading, send your date, month and year of birth, state whether (Mr., Mrs. or Miss) and also copy the following verse in your own handwriting:

I have heard of your power
To read people's lives,
And would ask what for me
You have to advise?

Be sure to give your correct name, birth date and address and write plainly. Send your letter to ROXROY, Dept 54c, No. 175a Kensington High Street, London, W., England. If you wish, you may inclose 16 cents (U. S. A. stamps) to pay postage, clerical work, etc. Do not inclose coins or silver in letters.

Note—Under the new Postal regulations you can send a sealed letter to England for only 2 cents postage.

KNOCK OUT PATROL LAW

Portion of State Fire Warden Law of 1909 Is Ruled Against.

Declared Unconstitutional By Three Judges of the Fifteenth District.

Bemidji, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judges W. S. Clenahan, C. W. Stanton and B. F. Wright, the three judges of the Fifteenth judicial district, hold that the patrol section of the state fire warden law of 1909 is unconstitutional.

The constitutionality of the patrol section of the state fire warden law was attacked in several cases which were brought against railroad companies last fall, wherein the state attempted to enforce that provision of the law, which required the railroad companies to "employ at least one patrolman for every mile of their railroad through land liable to be overrun by fires, discover and extinguish fires occurring near the line of railroad, by which is meant a distance within which a fire could usually be set by sparks from a passing locomotive."

Judges McClenahan, Stanton and Wright decided to sit en banc and jointly consider a test case which was taken from the municipal court at Brainerd, the Northern Pacific Railway company being the defendant. The case was heard Sept. 23 last, the state being represented by John P. Coleman of St. Paul, H. F. Prince of Grand Rapids, with C. A. Hart for the Northern Pacific railway; Steele for the Great Northern Railway company; E. E. McDonald, Crookston Lumber company and R. J. Powell for the Minneapolis & Rainy River company.

Judge Wright Prepares Decision.

The different features of the law were gone into pretty thoroughly. The judges took the matter under advisement, and to Judge Wright was delegated the duty of writing the decision, in which the other judges concurred.

Judge Wright holds that the fire warden statute is void and that the fire warden paragraph of the statute is almost wholly composed of terms, no practically exact definition of which is known, and that the act itself does not define it; and that in case of a trial various witnesses would be unable to testify as to the season, the nature of the land through which the railroad passed and other material issues involved; and that in submitting the case it would seem almost impossible for the court to instruct the court intelligently in the matter.

An appeal will probably be taken that the supreme court will finally adjudicate the matter.

CASS LAKE CLUB MAKES PROTEST

Resolves Against Action of Interior Department in Withholding Lands.

Cass Lake, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Indignant over the action of the interior department in again withholding from entry Indian lands in this locality which the act of May 23, 1908, says should be opened, the Cass Lake Commercial club on Thursday adopted resolutions of protest which will be forwarded to Congressmen Lindbergh and Miller and Senators Clapp and Nelson.

The resolutions follow:

Whereas, on May 23, 1908, congress passed an act providing that any Indian having an allotment within the limits of the (Minnesota) national forest, created by this act is hereby authorized to relinquish such allotment and permitted to take another allotment in lieu thereof outside such national forest under the direction of the secretary of the interior; and

Whereas, said act further provides that certain other lands outside of said national forest, which "have been clasified as timber land shall open to homestead settlement as soon and as fast as the timber is removed therefrom, in conformity with the homestead law," and

Whereas, it appears that there are from 30,000 to 40,000 acres of said land, from which the timber has been cut and removed, and settlement thereof is prevented by orders issued by the department of the interior, which we believe are contrary to the letter and spirit of the said act of congress, and

Whereas, prior to the time the said orders were issued by the department of the interior, many settlers in good faith settled on lands from which timber had been cut and removed, and they are prevented from making entry for said lands while many other prospective settlers are prevented from making settlements, thereby causing great hardship to many hundreds of people; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Cass Lake Commercial club, in meeting assembled this 14th day of April, 1910, most vigorously protest against the repeated orders of the department of the interior which prevent the settlement and entry of these lands, which said orders are contrary to the letter and spirit of the law, and be it further

Resolved, That we call on our representatives in congress to ascertain immediately why such lands are not opened to settlement and entry as provided by law, and be it further

Resolved, That in the event that the department of the interior does not take immediate steps to open such lands, that it is the sense of the club in meeting assembled, that the situation is so grave, that an investigation should be ordered by congress to ascertain why its laws are not obeyed by the department of the interior, and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to our United States Senators Nelson and Clapp, and to Congressmen Lindbergh and Miller.

He is a daily worshipper at the shrine of Venis and a passively willing prisoner to her charms. Paying regular and magnificent tribute has become a habit with him.

THE DEMOCRATIC HOPE.

The speeches made Wednesday throughout the country at Jefferson day banquets made it very clear that the Democrats of the nation are in a very hopeful mood. They are confident of gaining control of the house of representatives, and they are very sanguine indeed about the prospects of gaining the presidency in 1912.

And surely there is good reason for these hopes. The Republican party stands convicted before the bar of public opinion of high crimes and misdemeanors richly meriting the punishment of defeat.

Its organization is in the complete control of the agents of interests which profit inordinately and unfairly at the people's expense. Its efforts are bent to the service of these interests, and not to the service of the people. Its behavior is shameless. So arrogant has it become that it even has dared to secure a new lease of power upon a pledge of tariff revision which it never meant to redeem. It has fooled the people by an equivocal promise the spirit of which, if not its letter, has been broken shamelessly.

Why, under these conditions, shouldn't the Democratic party indulge a glowing hope?

It may be that the drift of public opinion is not so much toward Democracy as away from Republicanism. Yet unless the people wish to continue the shameless and brutal misrule of the Republican party, which puts corporation menials in its highest places and provide a president who is spinelessly amenable to their uses, where are they to turn for relief if not to the Democratic party?

Chastened by defeat, purified by long abstinence from the fleshpots of political power, the Democratic party ought to be in a position to afford relief to the oppressed people. If the drift is not decidedly toward Democracy, that is because the Democratic party has been divided by dissensions, which was to be expected after four successive defeats in presidential elections. The prospect of prosperity will tend to cement the fractures in the party, and to spur it into a reorganization that will enable it to present a united front to the enemy.

Beyond quesion a great many people have become doubtful of both parties. The Democratic party has men in congress who are as faithful to the "interests" as any Aldrich, though less powerful than he. Yet it must not be overlooked that these men are quite as conspicuously in the minority in their party as are the "insurgents," who represent all that is worth preserving in the Republican party.

Some people believe that neither of the old party organizations will be able to solve the problems of the fight between people and privilege, and that a new party composed of the progressive elements of both the old parties is needed.

But it is altogether likely that the Democratic party will be given another chance before the existing political organizations are thrown up in the air and a new party is formed out of the debris. The Democratic party has been out of power long enough to masquerade as a new broom. A new broom sweeps clean; and certainly this country is greatly in need of a clean sweeping.

AS TO WAR.

Once or twice The Herald has ventured to express the opinion that war is rather a barbarous business, and that the spectacle of nations draining their resources to be prepared for it is about as civilized and as pleasant as the spectacle of a gang of rowdies going about armed with brass knuckles and billies and revolvers.

We had supposed those reflections to be respectable and harmless enough, but it seems they are not. At any rate, they have drawn down upon our luckless head the contents of many vials of wrath stored up for such purposes by the Army and Navy Journal, a publication which circulates largely among the soldiers and sailors of army and navy. In a recent issue which is called to The Herald's attention the Journal devotes a column to a brave ex parte battle against this newspaper's attitude toward war and preparedness for war.

The Herald had said that war and preparation for war are not good economic business for nations to be engaged in. It said that getting ready for war withdraws from productive industries during their years of greatest usefulness some of the best citizens of this and other countries, and that it devotes to the barbarous business of war gigantic sums which humanity sadly needs for other purposes. The Herald also said that as the law against carrying weapons is a law in the interests of public peace, a law against carrying armies and navies and 13-inch guns and high power rifles may be a good thing in the interests of international peace.

On the whole, perhaps it isn't surprising that the Army and Navy Journal, which caters to men whose business is war, should consider it an outrage that anybody should hold such views as these. A journal catering to burglars, if there were such a journal, doubtless would be indignant with an editorial against burglary. Not that there is any possible comparison between soldiers and burglars, even though there is a very strong comparison between war and murder. Some of the finest men in this country are soldiers; but how much better it would be if civilization were so far advanced that the splendid talents of these brave men could be devoted to studying ways of building up society and profiting humanity, rather than ways of tearing down society and destroying humanity.

For instance, the army engineer corps, one of the finest and most capable bodies of men in the world, is engaged in building the Panama canal, dredging harbors and channels and doing other great and progressive work for the benefit of the nation. It does more of this sort of work than it does of the work of war. What a benefit to the nation it would be if the men of the infantry, cavalry and artillery, and the men of the navy, too, were also working for humanity!

The Army and Navy Journal attempts to grasp the economic side of war and preparedness for war, and the result is its statement that if armies and navies were disbanded the industries would be flooded with workers, and that in the resulting competition wages and working conditions would become very much worse than they are. It is a pretty state of affairs indeed if the economic balance is to be maintained only by uniforming a lot of men, supplying them with guns, and making them drill in order to keep them out of the labor market!

It should not be forgotten that if the armies and navies were disbanded, men engaged in productive toil would no longer have to pay taxes to support the millions who are tied up in the worse than useless business of war. That in itself would be a tremendous gain. But suppose that the governments discharged no sailors or soldiers, but put them at productive work for the benefit of society. What gigantic good they could do for humanity! These are dreams, of course; but no man should be forbidden to dream them. If enough men dream them, in time they will be realized.

The Army and Navy Journal must assume that labor is always to be the only commodity left subject to competition, and that for all time to come men of wealth will continue to make the conditions under which men of no wealth work, and to exact from the fruits of their labors as great a share as their greed demands. For our part, we do not think so ill of the future, nor do we look to see civilization remain at a standstill.

Probably it will be a long while before there is international law to decide international disputes, and before swords are beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks; but he who believes that such conditions are not maturing in the womb of fate is a pessimist indeed, and deserves sympathy.

THE PURSUIT OF THE IDEAL.

"What's the use of talking about such things?" exclaimed the pessimist to the man who had been talking to him about how much better could be done in a certain direction. "You can't have the ideal on this earth."

Perhaps not. Perhaps the ideal is unattainable. Perhaps the ideal in art, in literature, in politics, in government, in individual excellence, is merely a pretty dream in the heart of a dreamer. Perhaps it is a will-'o-the-wisp, which men pursue and never catch, and which has been placed in their minds to tantalize them by a Providence capable of such an infamously cruel practical joke.

But ill bodes to the world if the day comes when men cease to cherish ideals and to seek to realize them.

If the world hasn't achieved the ideal it has made progress, and all progress has been made possible by men with visions of the ideal. Perhaps the realization has been far from the dream. Perhaps the achievement has been disappointing to the dreamers. Yet however far from the dream, and however disappointing to the dreamer, it has been progress just the same; a step forward which cannot be retraced; the gaining of a new footing, a little nearer to the ideal.

The ideal, too, seems sometimes to elude capture when it is closely pursued. That is because, from the viewpoint made possible by progress, newer ideals are born. The ideal of yesterday may seem paltry in the light of the ideal of today; but that is because, from the better view gained by pursuit of yesterday's ideal, newer and brighter ideals have been born in the dreams of seers.

To admit that the pursuit of the ideal isn't worth while because the ideal is beyond reach is to forbid progress. All progress is born of striving for ideals, and even if it were true that the ideal is impossible—which no true optimist will admit—it serves a wonderful purpose in leading humanity onward and upward.

A man who makes up his mind to aspire to the ideal in his relations with his fellow-beings may not achieve it; but most assuredly he will greatly improve his relations with humanity.

A man who makes up his mind that it is impossible to achieve the ideal, and therefore makes no attempt to achieve it, makes the impossible attempt to stand still. Nothing stands still. That which isn't going forward is going backward; and the man who isn't going forward and upward is going backward and downward.

A nation that determines that its government shall be an ideal government will not achieve the ideal—right away, at least—but its government will be greatly improved. Straining after the ideal means pushing forward toward it, and even if it isn't reached, moving forward is progress; and progress is as immutable a law of nature as the law of gravitation. That which goes forward lives because it deserves to live. That which goes backward dies because it deserves to die. Nature abhors stagnancy, and out of it breeds corruption that is death. Nature fosters progress; and out of it breeds a vital principle which is life and growth.

"Hitch your wagon to a star," said Emerson. Give play to your ideals, and pursue them eagerly. Even if you don't catch up with them you will be moving forward. The pursuit of them makes life worth living, and gives you the right to live.

GOVERNMENT BY PARTIES.

The party which is absolutely in control of the government of the United States is as absolutely controlled by interests which look upon the people of the United States as material for spoils.

The spectacle isn't pretty or encouraging, and it will be small wonder if it leads to serious consideration of the question whether government by parties is quite the best form of government imaginable.

Government by parties has had a full chance to show what is can do; and the fruits of that opportunity are Rockefeller, Carnegie, Morgan, Taft, Aldrich, Cannon, the infamous Aldrich-Payne-Taft tariff bill and widespread suffering from high cost of living accompanied by a very restricted enjoyment of rich pickings from excessive profits, with the growing menace of pauperism and crime underneath it all.

The kind of progress which has come out of government by parties, clearly, is a kind which the Rockefellers and the Morgans enjoy very much more than do the Hobbses and Smiths and Joneses.

The only kind of progress at all encouraging to the common or garden variety of people is that kind which has come when partisanship has been flung to the winds and public officials, obeying willy or nilly the irresistible force of outraged public sentiment, have made small raids upon the preserves of Special Privilege and captured slight gains for the plain people.

The longest step ahead yet taken was that involved in chasing Speaker Cannon out of the house committee on rules and making that committee elective by the house membership. That step was taken only when a minority of the Republican congressmen joined with the Democratic minority to do it. Thereby the "insurgents" became traitors to their party, as the majority of that party construes it; yet it was only by being traitors to their party that they could be faithful to the people. Such an alliance wouldn't have been possible five years ago, and that it is possible now is highly encouraging chiefly because it shows a drift away from government by parties.

The removal of Cannon from the committee on rules was a triumph of patriotism over partisanship.

The packing of the new committee with men amenable to the interests was a triumph of partisanship over patriotism.

By party rule a new tyranny has arisen, more vile and more dearly than any before in history because it comes masquerading as democracy.

If the pending problems in this country—all of which are parts of the one big problem of whether privilege or people shall rule the nation—could be grasped fairly and considered solely on their merits, they would be settled in a jiffy.

They never are grasped fairly or settled on their merits. That is why progress is slow. Party advantage, and within the parties the advantage of party cliques, are sought more earnestly than the people's welfare. That is how government by parties works out. It is government for parties, not for the people. Worse than that, it is government for inner circles in the control of parties, and back of that for the far-reaching, powerful and greedy interests that control these inner circles.

THE MAGIC MIRROR.

A current magazine picture shows an exceedingly homely girl gazing admiringly into a looking glass, where she sees the reflection of a graceful, beautiful, winsome lass.

What a fine kind of mirror that would be to possess!

And yet, isn't that the kind of mirror most people have? And isn't it a very wise and very kind contrivance that this is so?

Even those who know that they are plain, because kind friends and relatives are at great pains to leave them under no delusions as to their own personal appearance, may sometimes, in secret, look in their magic mirror and say, "After all; you're not so bad; there are lots worse looking than you are!"

And those who are handsome or beautiful and know it—the magic mirror conceals something from them, too. It conceals that conceit and self-complacency which is so plain to others, and which, if they but knew it, counts against them more than all their beauty counts for them. In that case, it is a question whether the magic mirror is kind or wise, after all.

But nobody, of course, sees himself—or herself—as others do. This matter of the real ego is a curious thing anyway. Take yourself, for instance. Which is the real self: the one you see, the one your wife or husband sees, the one your friends see, the one your enemies see, or the one strangers see? Here are five separate and distinct people; just as separate and distinct as John is from Jim, or Mary from Ethel. Which is the real personality? The answer is: none of them—and all of them.

Your own tendency is to see yourself as you would like to be, not as you are. The tendency of those who love you is to see you as they have idealized you, not as you are. Probably, on the whole, your friends and strangers see the real person more clearly than do you or your loving kin. It even may be that your enemies see you more clearly than you do yourself, though we hope that isn't so.

Since truth is the only thing worth while, the kind of magic mirror that really is needed is one that will show you not your ideal of yourself, not the ideal of yourself cherished by your loved ones, not the plain and somewhat tarnished vision of you held by your friends, and not the distorted conception of you that your enemies see,—none of these, but your real self. That is a kind of magic mirror that hasn't yet been invented, and if it ever is invented there are going to be some great surprises. Its frankness will seem cruelty to some, and they will hate it; while there are many plain, humble, unselfish souls who have given little time to thinking of themselves, but who will see a vision in that magic mirror that will surprise them with its beauty. They will see themselves, these modest souls, as the angels see them.

Are your legislative candidates pledged to the program of the Northern Minnesota Development association, with reapportionment at the head? Consider none who are not.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only; and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

SERVICE IS INTOLERABLE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The local train service on the Duluth, Virginia, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railway is the poorest as far as residents of the country along its line who depend on taking the train at the small stations recently dropped by the "flyer," are concerned, of any locality, I believe, in the United States.

If a person living at Angora, only about 100 miles from Duluth, wants to make a trip to the Zenith City it takes four days to make the trip.

The only way is to take the local freight train going north leaves Virat Angora any time from 12:30 to 6:30 p. m. About 4 o'clock would be the average time of its arrival at Angora.

Then, of course, one does not get to Virginia in time for anything except to hunt up his night's lodging, which he sometimes fails to find.

Returning, it is the same, as the freight train going north leaves Virginia before he can reach there in the morning on any train from Duluth. So, of course, that means another night in Virginia.

I believe there are as many, or more, passengers who depend on taking the train at Angora or at Cook, as all the settlers along the Tower and Itasca county road, as far west as Bear River, about twenty-two miles from Angora, take the train at that point.

The citizens of Angora are thinking seriously of starting a stage line to Tower, and take the Duluth & Iron Range train for Duluth if the Canadian Northern does not grant them some relief by way of better train service.

Modern Municipal Problems.

Life: Events in Philadelphia have added to the multitude of problems with which we are already burdened. The following few may be mentioned:

To what extent may a public service corporation have the exclusive right to transport passengers and, at the same time, the exclusive right not to transport passengers?

To what extent can a mayor be a director in a public service corporation and a public servant at the same time?

To what extent are policemen justified in clubbing citizens in the interest of non-resident stockholders of public service corporations?

To what extent are citizens justified in rioting when that is the only way they have of showing their disapproval of the acts of their representatives?

To what extent are citizens justified in giving a corporation a franchise to rob them and then in paying policemen and other politicians to see that the robbery is protected?

To what extent does a perpetual franchise to the public streets imply a perpetual franchise to the government machinery?

How much better would the police of Philadelphia have succeeded in their avowed object of peace if they had not assisted in the importation of strike-breaking thugs?

To what extent is a public service corporation justified in upsetting the peace of a community in order to show its love for non-union men?

THE WEATHER

COLDER

Raw, disagreeable weather is Duluth's hand in the latest deal of the weather bureau. Last night was not pleasant, by any means, and today is cold and damp. A continuation of the prevailing brand of weather is promised by the sage who calls the turn on the elements.

Cloudy, mild weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:18 and it will set at 6:58, giving thirteen hours and forty minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the folowing comment on weather conditions:

"The storm central Friday morning over Minnesota has advanced to the region north of Lake Superior. During the past twenty-four hours this disturbance caused further rains in the lake region, Ohio and Mississippi valleys, and rain, sleet or snow in the Dakotas and Manitoba. Much colder weather prevails over the Mississippi, Missouri and Red river valleys attending an increase in pressure over those districts. Freezing temperatures occurred this morning over Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Rocky mountain states generally, the lowest reported being 16 deg. above zero at Moorhead. North Dakota and Canadian reports are missing this morning on account of wire trouble attributed to a sleet storm in Manitoba.

"Temperatures varying from 20 to 25 deg. may be expected at the Head of the Lakes tonight."

Following were the maximum temperatures for twenty-four hours and the minimum for twelve, ending at 7 a. m. today:

The Codfish.

Bill Nye: A correspondent of the New York Post says that the codfish frequents "the table lands of the sea." The codfish no doubt does this to secure as nearly as possible a dry, bracing atmosphere. This pure air of the submarine table lands gives to the codfish that breadth of chest and depth of lungs that we have often noticed.

The glad, free smile of the codfish is largely attributed to the exhilaration of this oceanic altitoodleum.

The correspondent further says that the "codfish subsists largely on the sea cherry." Those who have not had the pleasure of seeing the codfish climb the cherry tree in search of food, or clubbing the fruit from the heavily laden branches with chunks of coral, have missed a very fine sight.

The codfish, when at home rambling through the submarine forests, does not wear his vest unbuttoned, as he does while loafing around the grocery stores of the United States.

Stays in Town.

Her corset long and slim,
Remarked: "I have economized
Because of Fashion's whim,

For I have sold my country place
And now remain in town,
I do not need a country-seat,
Because I can't sit down."

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Men and Religion.

A student in a theological seminary went to a country town for a Sunday as a candidate for the local pulpit. On his return his mates quizzed him as to the character of the organization which might elect him as its spiritual overseer. He did not seem particularly enthusiastic over the field. "Well," he said, "the fact is, fellows, I wasn't drawn toward that church one little bit. It has thirty women and just three men." At which the wag of the crowd slyly remarked, "You don't expect to find a church with all women, do you, Jones?"

"Has Robinson any religion?" asked a man of his friend concerning a third party. "Well, he may have it," was the reply, "but whatever he has I guess it all stands in his wife's name."

These two incidents point the way to what I wish to emphasize concerning the opportunity which present conditions offer men to ally themselves with the church. Too long we have had churches whose membership for all working purposes have been confined to women. They have paid the bills, taught in the Sunday school, sung in the choir, run the prayer meetings and in some cases swept the auditorium and rung the bell. Many a church would be crippled today if two or three women withdrew from membership and service. They not only preponderate in numbers over the men but usually outstrip them in fidelity and zeal.

At least this is the record up to date but because a thing has been it does not necessarily follow that it will always be. There's a new spirit abroad. Hasn't your ear yet caught the sound of the tread of masculine feet along the highways of the kingdom? What mean these men's clubs, brotherhoods, great national congresses like that scheduled next month for Chicago and which promises to surpass any previous occasion of the sort? More men in different parts of the country have sat down to missionary banquets during the last six months than in any ten years up to this time. And these diners have done something besides eat. They have heard the straightest kind of talk from leading business and professional men concerning their duty to support missionary enterprises with the same steadfastness and enthusiasm which their mothers and sisters, their wives and daughters have displayed for many a day. Yes, the men are waking up, not simply to a keen interest in certain definite propaganda, but to a realization of the fact that personal religion is an experience into which a full blooded, capable, hard-hitting man ought to enter. It may not come to him in just the way it comes to a woman with her more sensitive and high strung nature. He may not be able to render the exact service which his wife can render but he ought to be ashamed to be religious by proxy and slip into heaven bye and bye under the mantle of his wife's faith and love.

Religion when rightly understood appeals to strong men. The Christian religion began in a company of young men to whom their leader spoke because they were strong and capable of overcoming the evil one. Religion has never lacked masculine adherents of the manliest type of characters, men like Charles Kingsley of England, Henry Drummond of Scotland, Charles F. Hughes of America.

And if religion is to be a greatening force in modern life it needs the open advocacy and vigorous support of brainy, far-sighted, efficient men, because by their business sagacity, their powers of initiative, their knowledge of the world, they can do a service for the kingdom of heaven which no cloistered saint can ever render.

In view of this wave of masculine interest in religion and religious movements it is a good time, my brother, to show your colors, to take a fresh start and to press forward until you really come into full possession of the rewards, the inspirations and the peculiar opportunities for service and influence which go with the genuinely religious life. I rode a half hour on the cars the other day with a man over 50 years of age who has just taken this step quietly yet decidedly and he was one of the happiest men I have met for many a day.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1890.

In ten days grading will begin at West Duluth for the new and great plant of the Marinette Iron works, which has just been secured for this city. The buildings will cover 125,000 square feet of space, or between two and three acres. Over 2,500,000 brick and 500 cords of stone will be used in the construction of these shops, which will be of solid brick and stone. They will be erected on blocks 205, 206, 207 and 208, Third division of West Duluth. The cost of the plant will be about $300,000, and the machinery must be in working order by Dec. 1 next. The company has been in operation twenty-two years and is one of the largest makers of sawmill machinery in the world. It also makes pumps and machinery for waterworks, chemical and fire engines and mining machinery. The company will be reorganized in Duluth, with a capital of $500,000, and will employ, when in full running order, 500 men. The work done at Marinette amounted to $500,000 a year, and it is expected the annual production will soon exceed $1,000,000.

The subscription committee of the Duluth-Superior Regatta association is is meeting with great success. Yesterday the committee called on A. M. Miller and asked him to subscribe $500. He promptly did so, and said they could just as well have had $1,000 if they had asked for it. Luther Mendenhall followed with a liberal subscription, and others brought the total for the day up to $1,600.

A little girl was rescued from death by drowning at West Duluth yesterday by J. P. Olson, driver of Kippin's water tank. The child was crossing a creek on a plank near the residence of William Jennings, when she fell. Her cries attracted the attention of Mr. Olson, who saved her.

Theophilus F. Smith of St. Paul, supervisor of the census for the Third district of Minnesota, is in the city making preparations for the coming session. The work begins on the first Monday of June and the enumeration must be completed by June 15, which gives only about ten days for the work. Between fifteen and twenty enumerators will be required in Duluth.

A CHAPTER ON CUSSING

BY SAVOYARD

A Jersey justice has held that the word "damn" is not profanity as denounced in the statute made and provided in that commonwealth in behalf of sound morals. It may be a breach of good manners to say to a lady, "You talk like a damn fool," but that is a matter for Turveydrop to adjust and not for Caesar to punish.

The speech we call "cussing" is vast and expensive, and reaches all the way from disgusting blasphemy to the exaltation of inspiration. Nobody but an idiot is blasphemous. He employs cussing to supply a vacancy of mind. But your down-right, blunt, candid man cusses for emphasis only, and he is an artist if he knows his business. "Our army swore terribly in Flanders," says "My Uncle Toby;" but what must have been the profanity and the blasphemy of the English forces in France during the "Hundred Years' War," when the Maid of Jork knew the enemy as "these Goddams." Ours is the best language in the world for cussing. If you would court your sweetheart, speak the Italian; if you would converse with friends, speak French; if you would pray to God, speak Spanish; if you would be a teamster, speak German; if you would make a trade or cuss your enemy, there is nothing like English.

In that delightful narrative, Campbell's Life of Thurlow, is related this episode:

"A body of Presbyterians made application to Lord Thurlow to assist in repealing certain statutes which disqualified Non-conformists from holding civil offices. He received the delegation with great civility, and hearing them out, answered: 'Gentlemen, I am against you, and for the established church, by God. Not that I like the established church a bit better than any other church, but because it is established. Get your damned religion established, and I'll be for that, too. Good morning.'"

Perhaps that was profanity, but it was emphasis. This man, the very expertest cusser in history, made the proudest and perhaps the most dignified speech the house of peers ever heard, when, with an hauteur Lucifer could scarce have imitated, he hurled the defiance that he was the equal of the proudest lord he looked down upon.

But nobody would let Thurlow go without a relation of his method, when lord chancellor, with George III. It was the duty and the custom for the chancellor to take acts of parliament to the king for "consent." It was a mere formality, for no prince of the house of Brunswick over dared to use the veto. Thurlow would come in with his arm full of documents as long and as broad as those butchers' bills the lively maid of honor talks about in the "Suffolk Papers."

Thurlow would open and begin to read, and after five minutes he would say to the king: "O, hell, you haven't got sense enough to understand it; sign your name here!" Fancy that proposition put to a president of the United States! When parliament was discussing the "Regency bill," Thurlow was on both sides of it. If the old king was permanently insane, he was for the bill and the Whigs; but if his poor intellectuals were to return to old George, Thurlow was against the regency and for the Tories. One day the news was favorable to a recovery, and Thurlow made a speech against the regency, closing with a fervid: "When I forget my king, may my God forget me!" Wilks, who was present, and who hated Thurlow, muttered: "Forget you! Forget you! He'll see you damned first!" And that is a rather artistic sample of cussing.

There is something fascinating about the cussing of one who knows how to do it. In "The School for Scandal," where Sir Peter Teazle says to his friend, "This is a damned wicked world we live in, Sir Oliver!" the pit always rises to the actor who has that part. I recall my first advent here. It was the Forty-sixth congress, 1880. There was a member from Brooklyn, N. Y. He was an irreconcilable goldbug, a Republican of the name of Crittenden. In a speech against 16 to 1, he exclaimed: "Mr. Speaker, this is all damned nonsense!" Congress roared, and every newspaper in America immortalized the old fellow next day.

The title of duke of Cumberland is worn by a prince of the house of Brunswick. Some years ago there was a bill sent up to the lords from the house of commons, abolishing church rates. All the high churchmen were bitterly opposed to it, and the duke of Cumberland was appointed to wait on Hooley, archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England, to request him to move the rejection of the bill at the next sitting of the peers.

The prince and the prelate met and were in hearty accord over the matter, and the archbishop agreed to move the rejection. He was the gentlest, the mildest, the most pious, the serenest man of his cloth, as refined as the best of women and his converse as chaste as the language would allow. But when Cumberland made report it was like this: "I have seen his grace and it is all right. He says this the G—d d——dest meanest bill he ever head of, and he'll be G—d d——d to hell if he don't come in person and move its rejection!"

The Tory lords were astounded at the report; but when they reflected that the duke was the most expert and inveterate cusser in England, they burst into a roar of laughter, much to the surprise of the duke, who was utterly unconscious of the profanity with which he had larded his report.

When I was a boy down in Barren county, Ky., there lived just over the line in Green county Stanton Buckner, a prosperous country gentleman with broad acres and many slaves. He was a kinsman of the great Dick Buckner, one of the profoundest jurists our Anglo-Saxon race ever produced, and in somewhat remoter degree he was kin to the grand old hero of Glen Lilly, Simon Bolivar Buckner, the greatest Kentuckian who now remains between earth and sky.

"Stant" Buckner was a most enthusiastic Methodist. They "churched" him a dozen times for cussing, but he would instantaneously demand to be taken back "on six months' probation," damning himself the while if he would not live and die a Methodist.

In that neighborhood about everybody belonged to the church, either Methodist or Baptist, with a little sprinkle of Presbyterians and now and then a Campbellite. There was intense rivalry between the Methodists and the Baptists, and the latter sect had a preacher of the name of Keen, who was both an able man and a brilliant orator. He was very tall and very slender, and they called him "Shoe-String Bill" Keen. Though too young to know much about it, I frequently sat spell-bound in the church when that man preached, and promised myself that I would try to do better and escape the hell and damnation he painted.

Well, the Baptists had a "big meeting" at the Union church at "Beech Grove," and Keen was the center of attraction, assisted by some lesser men of the cloth. There were some 100 conversions, of whom eighty-odd joined the church, and of the eighty, some sixty-odd joined the Baptist church.

That was a mortal affront to Stant Buckner. He shook his head and indulged in a deal of cussing. Finally a happy thought struck him, and he sent for "Father Taylor," perhaps the most eloquent orator the Methodist pulpit ever produced, not excepting Bascom, or Moffatt. Father Taylor came. It was the glorious month of August, the fat year 1855. There was an immense concourse at Beech Grove, and the "meeting" was held outside the church. Father Taylor was at his best and the 1,500 folk then and there present were simply entranced. When the minister completed a most eloquent climax, Stant Buckner arose from his seat, his face aglow with an ecstasy of enthusiasm, and marched across the altar, pointing his finger, and exclaiming:

"Now, what do you G—d d——d Baptists think of that? What is your G—d d——d 'Shoe-String Bill' Keen now?"

It was not blasphemy; it was not profanity. The man was perfectly unconscious of the fact that his language was not perfectly correct. It was inspiration. It was genius.

A large crowd, at least forty, went to Buckner's to dinner that day. The weather was fearfully warm and the dinner sumptuous. There was fried chicken for all, but the piece de resistance was that Kentucky boiled ham that the world could not match. Stant set about slicing it. Father Taylor was on his right, and Mrs. Buckner was opposite her lord and master, smiling and apprehensive.

About the time Stant finished carving the ham, the little nigger servant girl poked a plate of smoking bread at him with a "Have a hot biscuit, Mars Stant?"

"Hot hell and damnation!" roared the lord of the manor, "No! Bring me an iceberg, damn you!"

And speaking of preachers. Perhaps Tom Fisher, of the Baptist church, was even a more eloquent platform speaker than even Father Taylor. Fisher went to Burksville, Cumberland county, Ky., that same year of 1855, to hold a "protracted meeting." The Crimean war was not yet concluded, and the minister took it for text in several of his sermons. He preached for a couple of weeks without a single "mourner." It was his first and only failure.

The last day he did not preach at all. The meetings were held in the courthouse, for no church, and not even the temple of justice, could accommodate the crowds, and on this Sunday the courthouse yard was full of folk hoping to hear a word or two of the sermon.

Fisher came into town on horseback and hitched the animal to the fence. He stalked into the courtroom, mounted the judge's stand, and said something like this:

"I have wasted two weeks here doing my best to serve my Master and set on foot a revival of religion, and all without avail. I shall shake the dirt of Burksville off my shoes and shall testify in the day of judgment against this town, for I might as well try to plow up hell with a flimsy pine shingle as to seek to revive a reverence for God here. Burksville is the Gibraltar of hell and the Sevastopol of damnation!"

And then out he walked, mounted his horse, and rode away.

IN THE LITERARY WORLD

A MODERN CHRONICLE. By Winston Churchill, author of "Mr. Crewe's Career," "Richard Carvel," etc. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.50.

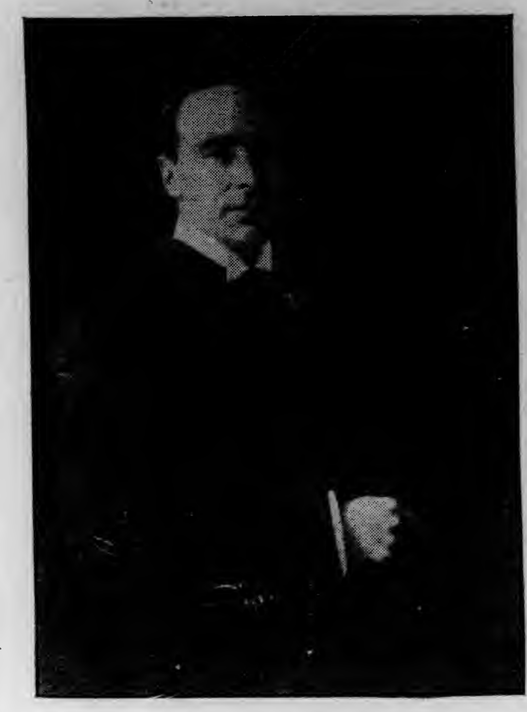
No history here; no politics, except a faint echo now and then; no "problems," except as human life always involves problems; just humankind, set forth by a hand, grown skilled in the art of painting it, which in this volume produces the best and highest result it has yet achieved.

It is a little surprising, to those used to Mr. Churchill, to find that he has lured them into reading a society novel, and more amazing still to find that they are glad of it. "Our heroine" is Honora Leffingwell, to whom we are introduced at the age of 18 months. She had been orphaned by a runaway in France, and she was brought up in St. Louis by good Aunt Mary and Uncle Tom, who completed what her heritage from a lightheaded and gay pair of parents had given her by letting her weave magnificent dreams about her European birthplace and by dressing her better than the children of rich neighbors. Her father and mother, killed a-pleasuring, were the subjects of some of these dreams, which were all unconscious of the dubious heritage of which they were an evidence. As a child, she wanted Uncle Tom to be rich—Uncle Tom, who was rich indeed in the love and respect of men, in the humble adoration of animals and children, in his kinship with wild nature and in his simple content. Peter Erwin, a boy in the bank where Uncle Tom was teller, and later cashier, was her bond-servant from babyhood, and even when he was a rising young lawyer and she a beautiful girl with temperament and an imagination devoted to luxury and the power of wealth. She accepted Peter as one of the disguises of Providence, valued him for what he brought her, and wished he would wear clothes that would give him more distinction. It wasn't until years later that she realized that he had a distinction of simple, yet powerful personality that clothes could not give.

Honora had men at her feet all her life long. Nearly everybody made it a point to propose to her. At this period of her life, and for long after, she was an intensely selfish and worldly young woman. Yet she could pity Peter when she left for a famous boarding school affected by society, and it cost a pang to wrench herself away from Uncle Tom and Aunt Mary for the winter, as it was believed by all but Peter—forever, as it turned out. At Sutcliffe Manors, the famous boarding school, she tasted of the fleshpots of wealth and found them good. Her eagerness to please her rich friends puzzles one, at first. It may be simple joy in these surroundings, and expansion of spirit in this luxurious atmosphere; it may be more or less deliberate cultivation of their interest in order to prolong the rose-colored hour. Being "our heroine," however, we hesitate to embrace the latter theory, much as it presses itself on the attention.

When she married Howard Spence, a self-sufficient and complacent young New York stock broker, we fear that she had in mind the riches in reach of aggresive, ambitious young manhood in Wall street. Something of her power is realized from the fact that a vicomte, who had come to America to marry a fortune, offered her his heart and chateau, though he knew she was poor. She was sorry for him, and she dreamed of what it would have meant to be a vicomtesse. But a poor vicomtesse—that, too, occurred to her thought. When Peter, East on law business, appeared on the day of her engagement—Peter, with his lean, kind face, his mixture of simplicity and self-respect and common sense—she felt strangely ill at ease and doubtful, and she wondered what there was in him that aroused strange emotion, and that made her long to throw herself in his arms, as she had done when a child, and weep there. No such good fortune befell her. She had to hear of Peter say that he loved her and wanted her for his wife, and to tell him that she was going to marry Mr. Spence. Well, she married Mr. Spence, who spelled Prosperity. She found him, however, to be only potential prosperity, prosperity to be realized only by the power of her own beauty, working through rich friends. Her home was not a mansion in New York, but a house in a New Jersey suburb, where Howard seemed content to settle down and grow fat and bald and stodgy. She looked over the ramparts of the fashionable world that was her heart's desire from the drab outside, and the waiting was sordid. We get piquant pictures of the outer rim of society, where the little fishes swim who are trying to break into the great quick riches, and of lurking bankruptcy and tragedy. There are perils for one with Honora's tastes. There are men of wealth who are willing to use their influence to help on an ambitious husband if the beautiful wife is properly appreciative. Even her husband bade her be friendly to "Trev" Brent, a dangerous man with women, she is told, but a power in the financial world. Out of this complication, however, she extricates herself rather well. The beginning of her punishment came when, following on one of his widely separated visits—there are three of them in the book—changes her ideals from riches and luxury to better ones—for the time being, at least—she was swept away by Hugh Chiltern's personality, loved him, and was willing to divorce her husband for him. By that time she has scaled those coveted ramparts, and after standing for a moment in the charmed circle toward which her life-long endeavors had bent her, she flung herself back over the ramparts again for a man who had always had his will with women. For his part, when they were married he abandoned for her his wild pursuit of excitement, which had led him around the world, and settled down on his father's estate to better the country squire. She expected love to make him over to her liking, but she found impulses in him deeper than love. Her neighbors, knowing her story, ostracized her even in that small town, while no word of cheer came from Society in its capital. Respectable friends failing to appear, Hugh brought her another kind, and from that point the story mounts rapidly to its crisis. To carry it further would be to tell what the reader has a right to hear direct from the author.

It is the story of the development of a woman, and it is convincing. Little of the final result of all this ripening experience appears in the early history of Honora. She had beside her the potential realization of all her heart's desires, and she left it to marry for money and position. She bore her sordid fate until it had yielded her all that she had expected of her marriage, and then she permitted herself to be swept away by passion. The word "development" assumes that the capacity for her final though belated self-realization was in her all the time; and though it is hard to believe it in view of this history, such is the power of the author of this story that belief is irresistible. Is Honora intended to be an individuality, or a type?



It is a powerful and consistent romance. It is an American novel of which any American may be proud. In it is quite the strongest and truest and best work Mr. Churchill has done. A word, too, should be said for the quaintly excellent pictures provided by J. H. Gardner Soper.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES. By Delos F. Wilcox, Ph. D. Vol. 1: Pipe and Wire Franchises. New York: Engineerings News Book department. $5 net.

It is strange indeed that in spite of the deep public interest that exists in the subject of municipal franchises, this book, just out, is the first attempt to gather the facts relating to that subject into comprehensive form. Yet the wealth of information is so great and the capacity of the author so well known, that it is not surprising to find this work luminous, candid, fair and wholly adequate.

The first volume takes up the history of franchises, showing how in the early days cities welcomed franchise-seekers with open arms, so anxious to get public utilities that they were willing to give for them almost anything that was asked; how, profit connected with public utilities becoming apparent, grafters beseiged their owners; how the public awoke and demanded compensation for franchises; how lower rates were demanded when it was clear that the public utilities were making much money; and how the sentiment for municipal ownership has had its growth and development. After this introductory, which is broad and comprehensive, the book takes up pipe and wire franchises, leaving to the second volume, which will come about a year later, the discussion of transportation franchises and such questions as popular control of public service corporations, taxation, etc.

Tho purpose of the work is to simplify, so far as possible, fundamental conceptions as to the nature and purpose of franchise grants; to state as clearly as possible the necessary conditions to be imposed in connection with various classes of franchises; to describe the best types of franchises actually in force in different parts of the country; and, finally, to discuss in a general way the principles involved in the regulation of public service utilities by means of taxation, rate regulation, public service commissions, the referendum and municipal ownership.

The book should prove invaluable to all students of the important subjects it handles; and it will be found lucid, unbiased and remarkably full of valuable information.

CAVANAUGH, FOREST RANGER. By Hamlin Garland, author of "Main Traveled Roads," "Rose of Dutcher's Coolly," etc. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.50.

In this strongly interesting novel romance and conservation are mingled deftly. Both are vigorous; the latter vigorous enough to draw a commendatory introduction from Gifford Pinchot, the former vigorous enough to enlist every reader's interest. It is up-to-date, so much so that it registers the effect in the West of the discharge of Pinchot as chief forester, and tells how the members of the forest service were in despair and how the maggots in the cheese of national wealth squirmed with delight.

Lee Virginia Weatherford, returning to her Western home after years spent at school in the East, found her mother harshly spoken of as the keeper of a questionable inn, who sold bad whisky, and found her old, ill, slatternly, unkempt and worried. Times had changed, too. The old fight of the cattlemen against sheep herders and farmers was still on, but there was a new fight between both and the guardians of the people's natural wealth. The violence of this conflict between the old West and the new forms the basis of the novel. In her mother's hotel Lee found but two decent looking men, Forest Supervisor Redfield and Forest Ranger Ross Cavanaugh, the latter a young Englishman who had adopted this country as his own and who was fighting its newest and best battle as a forest ranger. The town had gone to seed, and Lee's mother Lize Weatherford, had gone to seed with it. Conditions were unbearable, but Lee faced them out. The book is a vivid picture of the New West, and the story is full of absorbing action.

THE HEART OF DESIRE. By Elizabeth Dejeans, author of "The Winning Chance." Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott company. $1.50.

Horton Payne was attracted by Kate Moore on a train where both were traveling alone. Not an unusual happening in itself; but Miss Moore was mysteriously situated, and was a strange combination of shy, reserved girlhood and self-possessed, experienced womanhood. Even when circumstances forced Payne to be of great service to her, she left him suddenly and mysteriously, and he did not see her for years, until he found her in a California winter resort, under the name of Kate Talworthy, in but not of a gay party in which twelve women out of twenty-four couples were divorcees. Instead of being poor, as she was on the train, she was rich; but she was still mysterious, and still keeping Payne at arm's length for dark reasons. Besides, she loved another man, whom she was also keeping at arm's length. There are mysteries in plenty, and so successfully concealed are they that if anything they are almost too impenetrable. There are also mysteries about Pacquita, the young girl who is loved by the other man whom Kate loves. Finally these mysteries are straightened out in a convincing way. It makes an unusually entertaining novel, in which the author shows a gain in power since her first novel, "The Winning Chance," which was so successful a year ago.

Of Books and Writers.

Two books are to be added this spring to Macmillan's American Social Progress Series. Of these, the first, which will be published within a few weeks, is "Governmental Action for Social Welfare," by Jeremiah W. Jenks, professor of political economy and politics at Cornell university. The author here presents a great deal of information and comment which the average citizen should possess, in a manner which will win his attention and understanding.

Prof. Jenks has not only won high distinction for himself on account of his scholarship, but also because of his public services. He has served as an expert agent of the United States industrial commission on investigation of trusts and industrial combinations in the United States and Europe, as well as consulting expert of the U. S. department of labor on the same subject, and he has also been special commissioner of the war department, to investigate questions of currency, labor and internal taxation. His book shows the result of these many different fields of labor and is marked with the signs of the scholar as well. His style is interesting, readable, shrewd and practical.

The second addition to the series, which will follow somewhat later, is "Social Insurance;" "A Program of Social Reform," by Henry Rogers Seager, professor of political economy, at Columbia university.

Canada is the scene of Mrs. Humphry Ward's latest production, "Lady Morton, Colonist," which Doubleday, Page & Company publish forthwith—the Canada of vast satin-smooth fields of greenish blue wheat, of illimitable wilderness and primeval mountain grandeur; and of a hero, too, who is Canadian born and has grown up with the Northwest, sharing all its hopes and ambitions. This sturdy, self-made engineer with political aspirations, typifies the human forces that are putting chains upon the rudimental wilds and opening up this great empire to civilization. Lady Elizabeth Morton, a wealthy aristocratic English widow, is filled with enthusiasm for the vast empire she is speeding over, but her sensibilities are so finely attuned to a life of refinement and culture that she hesitates before giving up her luxurious ancestral home to wed this Canadian, who is the total opposite to the famous polished English connisseur, who has come half round the world to claim her. She finally does, however, even though the hero is held back by pride, and she has to do the proposing herself.

"He that sells what isn't his'n,
Must buy it back, or go to prison."

Unfortunately, Daniel Drew did not always act up to his motto. Drew was one of the notorious Drew-Gould-Fisk-Tweed combine that wrecked the Erie railroad in the early 70's. So dingy was his career that his biographer feared to treat it in the ordinary way, lest its seeming bitterness should react and excite sympathy for the man. Bouck White conceived the brilliant idea of having him tell his own story, and has produced the first adequate biography of the most picturesque and spectacular figure Wall street has ever seen. The provincial, uncouth language gives the book a humorous tone, while the unabashed self-revealment that was characteristic of Drew, and his attitude of explanation and self-adjudication, combined with the facts of Drew's gigantic projects make this inside view of the Fisk-Gould-Tweed regime tremendously fascinating. But what places this book above the level of ordinary Wall street revelations, is the personality of the men—a personality which by its sheer human interest, will grip hold of every reader whether he be familiar with big financial transactions or not. Doubleday, Page & Company publish it immediately.

The J. B. Lippincott company, encouraged by the unusually large sale of the Pennell's "Life of Whistler," brought out this spring a volume on "Manet, and the French Impressionists," by Theodore Duret, which is perhaps the most important book on the subject of art since the Pennell volumes were issued. Following up the success of Percy C. Madeira's book on "big game" shooting, "Hunting in British East Africa," and on account of the continued interest in all things "African," the Lippincotts have two volumes dealing with African colonies on their spring list—"Sierra Leone" and "Fighting the Slave Hunters in Central Africa." Eben E. Rexford, among the most widely known and most successful amateur gardeners in this country, is represented this year with a book on "Indoor Gardening," which the Lippincotts have supplied with beautiful illustrations, a special title-page and decorated lining papers. The Lippincott list of spring fiction this year is small but select, and includes four new novels. These are, "The Heart of Desire," by Elizabeth Dejeans, whose first novel, "The Winning Chance," was the surprise success of last spring; "Routledge Rides Alone," an exceptionally fine novel showing the futility of war, by Will Levington Comfort; "Raleigh," a romance of Elizabeth's court, by Stephen Lovell and William Devereux, and "The Daughters of Suffolk," by William Jasper Nicolls. Interest in Sir Ernest Shackleton and his wonderful volumes of exploration, "The Heart of the Antarctic," increases daily; and Robert Hichens' "Bella Donna," still the most widely discussed of the recent books is now rapidly passing through a fifth large edition.

Ex-Forester Gifford Pinchot, who is now on his way to meet Ex-President Roosevelt in Naples for what is thought may prove to be a conference of national importance, has written in his introduction to "Cavanagh—Forest Ranger," Hamlin Garland's new romance of the mountain West, just published by the Harpers' some notable words, among them are these:

"• • • I have read with mingled feelings—with keen appreciation of your (Mr. Garland's) sympathetic understanding of the problems which confronted the forest service before the Western people understood it, and with deep regret that I am no longer officially associated with its work (although I am as deeply interested and almost as closely in touch as ever) • • •

"The service contains the best body of young men I know, and many splendid veterans. It is nine-tenths made up of Western men. It has met the West on its own ground and it has won the contest—an episode of which you have so well described—because the West believes in what it stands for.

"I have lived much among the Western mountain men. I have studied their problems, differed with some of them, and worked with many of them. Sometimes I have lost and sometimes I have won, but every time the fight was worth while. I have come out of it all with a respect and liking for the West which will last as long as I do."

Mr. Dawson was obliged to leave the expedition a few months ago for personal reasons, and since his return to this country has been lecturing and showing the only photographs of the expedition that have been exhibited with the exception of those taken by Kermit Roosevelt himself. Mr. Dawson sailed for Europe on April 2 to rejoin Mr. Roosevelt in Paris and accompany him through Europe.

His novel, "The Seventh Noon," which has performed that most difficult of feats—winning favor with critics and public alike—is a remarkable story of a young lawyer whose revolt against the humdrum of his daily life led him to take one week in which he could live as he would like to live—free of all thought of the future. For incident no less than for psychology Mr. Bartlett's novel has made a profound impression, and has proved itself one of the most popular of the season's volumes of fiction.

SAVING BABIES' LIVES

Hot Summer Months Mean Growing Death Rates for the Children of Tenements—How New York is Trying to Meet the Problem.

By WILBER C. PHILLIPS, Secretary of New York Milk Committee.

(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau.)

That a tremendous difference in the birth rate and infant mortality rate exists among the wealthy and the extreme poor; that a great number of the thousands of needless infants' deaths which occur annually take place in the congested quarters of New York city; and that these conditions spring from sheer ignorance, (easily preventable) on the mothers' part—these are the significant results of an investigation made recently by the New York milk committee. The commitee's investigation grew out of a desire to ascertain what percentage of the 16,000 deaths which occur annually in New York city are found respectively among the rich, the middle class and the poor.

Three sections of the city were included—one of twenty-eight blocks, comprising a fashionable residential district in the neighborhood of Fifth avenue, Madison avenue and Central Park; the second of five blocks, comprising a middle class residential district in the neighborhood of One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street and Lenox avenue; a third of three densely populated blacks, comprising a typical tenement house district bounded by Avenue A, East Seventy-fourth street, First avenue and East Seventy-second street. In 1907, the estimated population of these various areas was approximately the same. In the twenty-eight fashionable blocks there were 7,561 residents, in the five middle class blocks there were 7,696, and in the three tenement blocks there were 7,856. The number of births recorded in thes blocks in 1907, however, varied very widely. In the twenty-eight fashionable blocks only thirty-seven little ones were born, whereas in the five middle class blocks 160 babies were born, and in the three tenement blocks 434 babies were born. In other words, eleven times as many babies were reported as born in three tenement blocks among the poor as were born in twenty-eight fashionable up-town blocks.

Knowing that the greatest danger to infants exists at the time of greatest heat, the milk committee, at the suggestion of Dr. L. Emmett Holt, selected a period of fourteen days, of which the first seven comprised the hottest week of 1907. In this way not only the immediate but the after-effect of a period of excessive heat was observed—something that is rarely done. The average mean temperature of the first week from July 18th to July 24th was 78.6 deg. In the three tenement house blocks sixteen deaths, or 4 per cent of the total number of infants known to have been born during the year died during the two weks—nine during the first week and seven during the second. Had a similar death rate prevailed throughout the rest of the year, the mortality would have been more than 100 per cent. In the four middle-wealthy residential blocks of approximately the same population no deaths were recorded. These facts tell their own story. The probable absence for the summer of most of the wealthy mothers and many of the middle class mothers cannot be considered, as factors in the case, because the ability to leave a hot city and thus avoid a principal cause of infant's death—(like the abilty to employ infant specialist, trained nurses, etc.)—is a purely economic advantage. Light, air, sanitary surroundings and proper nourishment, are all factors in the reduction of infant mortality. The lack of the means to purchase these commodities spells misery, disability and death.

For the wealthy mother, expert knowledge on all matters affecting the life of her little one are available. Infant specialists prescribe an exact diet; trained nurses administer and supervise; in all details of the baby's growth she is supported by the best counsel and advice. If the child or the wealthy mother does poorly or dies, it is because scientific knowledge has failed, not because that knowledge has been unavailable.

In the case of middle class mothers, the handicaps are perhaps greater as these mothers, lacking the means to avail themselves of expert knowledge, are obliged to rely upon less trained physicians and to seek information from sources that often prove untrustworthy. But because, these mothers have as a rule, more children than the wealthy, and because, being free from heavy social demands, they can give the children more personal care and attention, they acquire a certain experience and knowledge which is handed down from generation to generation and which, to a large degree, tends to offset the advantage of purchased knowledge of an expensive character.

It is among the mothers of the lower strata of society that the need for increased knowledge on infant feeding, infant hygiene and matters pertaining to infancy, is most keenly felt. Step by step as one descends from the extreme rich to the extreme poor, he finds conditions increasing which militate against the lives of little ones. Where people are poorest, and where the scantiest means are found to combat evils which threaten, there invariably we find the darkest tenements, the narrowest and most foulsome streets, the lowest standard of living and the greatest ignorance. In consequence of all this the death rate among infants, as all persons know who work in these localities, is appalling. Especially in the summer time the babies literally die like flies. Up and down the hot streets white hearses pass frequentiy. The fear of something terrible hangs like the sword of Damocless over the frightened, ignorant, and too often superstitious mother. Why do the babies die? The mother does not know. She only knows that her baby is vomiting and lying lifeless in her arms, and that at any moment it may follow where many others have gone. A timely word, telling them to do or not to do the thing in which their ignorance is murderous, in many instances would save their baby. When they begin to realize this their eagerness to learn—their hunger for instruction—is pitiful, more pitiful than physical hunger, or its twin-spectre, undernourishment, stamped on the face sof so many, many women and children of our tenements.

This is the real tragedy of infant mortality. The unsatisfied desire of souls for knowledge, the permission of spiritual suffering and death.

To prevent the needless sacrifice of the innocents, the New York milk committee since June 1, 1908, has maintained a number of infants' milk depots in congested quarters of New York city. These depots, in a sense, have been experiment stations where the relative value of raw and pasteurized milk, the efficacy of class and instructional work among mothers, the encouragement of maternal nursing, problems of milk distribution and relief, and the proper feeding of infants, have been worked out and where it has been demonstrated beyond all doubt that by following certain known methods, the deaths of large numbers of infants are absolutely needless. Some of the most promiment physicians in New York city are members of the milk committee and confidently believe that if the work, of which it has laid such strong foundations, can be extended quite generally throughout the city, it will result in the saving of thousands of baby lives annually.

When there is no fever and little (if any) swelling, you may know that it is only necessary to apply Chamberlain's Liniment freely to get quick relief. Try it. For sale by all druglsts.

DO NOT HEED ORDINANCE

Complaints Made as to Disregarding of New Traffic Rules.

Some Have Not Familiarized Themselves With the New Laws.

Because much complaint has been heard by some, who claim that drivers of wagons as well as some automobile drivers, are disregarding the city ordinance put in effect some time ago, the main features of the ordinance are printed below:

Definitions.

Section 1.—The term "motor vehicle," as used in this ordinance, shall include all vehicles propelled by other than muscular power, except such vehicles as run only upon rail or tracks. The terms "chauffeur" shall mean any person operating a motor vehicle for hire as the employe of the owner thereof. The term "owner" shall include any person, firm or corporation owning or running a motor vehicle or having the exclusive use thereof, under a lease or otherwise, for a period greater than thirty (30) days. The term "street" shall include any street, avenue, alley or public ground within the limits of the city of Duluth.

Passing Vehicles.

Sec. 2.—Every person using any vehicle on any street in the city of Duluth shall drive or ride his vehicle at the right of the center of the street, and when turning to the left to enter an intersecting street he shall not turn to the left until his vehicle shall have passed beyond the center of such intersecting street; provided, that when the street is for any reason not in suitable condition for use to its fullest width, or is obstructed, such person may use the traveling part of the street regardless of which side of the center of such street said traveled or beaten part may be; and in such cases persons using vehicles shall, when meeting, turn to the right of the center of the traveled or beaten part of the street, so that their respective vehicles may pass without interference. In passing vehicles going in the same direction all persons shall drive or ride to the left side of the vehicle to be passed.

Looking to the Rear.

Sect. 3.—Every person using any vehicle on any street in the city of Duluth shall, before turning out to pass any other vehicle, and before turning around, and before turning out of the line of traffic for any purpose, look carefully to the rear of the vehicle which said person is using upon the side toward which he contemplates turning, and if he fails so to look and in so turning out causes a collision with any vehicle coming from the rear, he shall be deemed guilty of gross negligence.

Slow-Moving Vehicles.

Sec. 4.—Every person using any slow moving vehicle on any street in the city of Duluth shall travel near the right curb and allow vehicles moving more rapidly to travel nearer the center of the street.

Standing Vehicles.

Sec. 5.—No person using any vehicle on any street in the city of Duluth shall stop his vehicle or leave the same standing except at or near the curb at the right of the center of the street, and in no event shall any person stop his vehicle or leave the same standing in such position that its front or the animals attached thereto are headed against the line of traffic. Where the grade exceeds 4 per cent heavily loaded teams may stand facing in either direction. No person shall stop his vehicle or animals or leave the same or either of them standing at or near right angles to the curb on Superior street, between Eighth avenues west and Fourth avenue east. No person shall leave any motor or vehicle standing whether attended or unattended, upon Superior street between Eighth avenue west and Fourth avenue east; provided that for the purpose of taking on or discharging passengers, or for the purpose of loading or unloading freight, or where the conditions and circumstances are such that said vehicle does not materially obstruct traffic, it may be left unattended but permitted to stand for a period not exceeding twenty (20) minutes.

Meeting Other Vehicles.

Sec. 6.—Every person using any vehicle on any street within the city of Duluth shall upon meeting any other vehicle turn seasonably to the right so as to allow said vehicle a fair and equal opportunity to pass without interference.

Registering Motor Vehicles.

Sec. 7.—Every owner of a motor vehicle which shall be operated or driven on the streets of the city of Duluth, shall register with the city clerk a statement containing a brief description of the motor vehicle owned by him.

Registration.

Sec. 8.—No person shall ride or operate a motor vehicle on the streets of the city of Duluth unless such vehicle shall have been registered with the city clerk of the city of Duluth.

Signalling Devices.

Sec. 9.—Every motor vehicle operated upon the streets of the city of Duluth shall be provided with a suitable bell, horn or other device for the purpose of signalling, and shall, during the period from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise, display at least two (2) lighted lamps visible from the front of said vehicle, and one (1) lighted lamp visible from the rear of such vehicle.

Mufflers.

Sec. 10.—Every motor vehicle operated upon the streets of the city of Duluth using gasoline as a motive power shall be equipped with and shall use a muffler, so called, and the same shall not be cut out or disconnected within the limits of the city of Duluth.

Stopping Motor Vehicles.

Sec. 11.—Every person operating a motor vehicle upon the streets of the city of Duluth shall, at the request or on signal from a person riding, leading or driving any animal, or on evidence of fright on the part of any animal so ridden, led or driven, bring such motor vehicle immediately to a stop.

Speed Permitted.

Sec. 12.—No person shall drive or operate a motor or other vehicle on the streets of the city of Duluth at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper under all the circumstances.

Every person driving or operating a motor or other vehicle on the streets of the city of Duluth shall, upon approaching a bridge, a sharp curve, a steep descent or a cross or intersecting highway, and in passing from a side street into a main street, have such vehicle under perfect control, and shall not drive or operate such vehicle in such place at a rate of speed exceeding one (1) mile in eight (8) minutes. On all streets within the city of Duluth the rate of speed shall not exceed fifteen (15) miles per hour, except on London road, between Twenty-sixth avenue east and Fortieth avenue east, and on such portion of London road the speed shall not exceed twenty-five miles per hour.

License to Operate Motor Vehicles.

Sec. 13.—No person shall operate a motor vehicle upon the streets of the city of Duluth without first obtaining a license.

Registration of State Numbers.

Sec. 14.—Every chauffeur operating a motor vehicle upon the streets of the city of Duluth shall register with the city clerk of the city of Duluth his name, address and the number assigned to him by the secretary of state under the provisions of the general laws of the state of Minnesota.

Accidents.

Sec. 15.—In case of accidents to persons or property on the streets of the city of Duluth, due to the operation thereof of any motor or other vehicle, the person operating such vehicle shall stop, and upon request of any person injured or of any person present shall give to such person his name and address.

Penalty.

Sec. 17.—Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred ($100) or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding eighty-five (85) days.

RULES ARE MADE PUBLIC

Glidden Tour Contest Board Makes Known Conditions of Reliability Run.

The Cars Will Start From Cincinnati, Ohio, on June 15.

The rules which are to govern the 1910 National Reliability tour of the American Automobile association for the Glidden and Chicago trophies have been sent to all automobile manufacturers by S. M. Butler, chairman of the contest board. This is the first time in the history of the famous Glidden tour that the rules have been issued in a separate form, and far enough in advance of the start of the tour to permit prospective entrants to study them in detail and make their preparations for the contest.

There are two trophy awards this year, the Glidden trophy and the Chicago trophy. Only "stock" cars, previously registered as to all their mechanical details with the contest board, will compete for either trophy.

Under this schedule cars are penalized from one to 500 points, according to the seriousness of the mechanical troubles developed.

In the event of two or more cars finishing with a tied score, as has occurred in former ours, the rules provide that neither of the trophies shall be awarded; but suitable medals will be issued to the tied cars certifying that they have qualified as winners, and their names will be inscribed upon the trophies.

Every entrant must be a member of the American Automobile association or of one of its affiliated clubs. The cars must be turned over to the technical committee of the contest board on June 13, two days prior to the start of the tour from the city of Cincinnati, Ohio. Each car must carry, constantly, its full equipment, as cataloged by its maker. Considerable additional equipment is permitted under the rules, including tire inflating tanks or pumps. Cars in the Glidden division must carry four or more passengers, and cars in the Chicago trophy class must carry two or more persons.

Entrants will be responsible for the acts of the drivers and passengers in the cars.

The contest board reserves the right to refuse any entry. Entrants will receive their official numbers in the order in which entries are received by the contest board. These numbers must be plainly displayed on each side of the hood, on the radiator, and if possible on the rear of the body. Every entrant must nominate an observer, who will be assigned to ride on a different car each day during the tour.

Special tool bags will be furnished by the board and all tools used must be carried in these bags, except tire tools. Observers are required not only to keep a sharp eye on the tool bags, but also to see that no tools are used other than those carried in the bags.

An inventory of all extra parts carried by a car must be furnished prior to the start. They will be sealed and checked by the technical committee in charge. Any number of tires, rims or chains may be carried without penalty. There will be no penalty for tire repairs, providing the engine is kept running while such repairs are being made. Time consumed in repairing and replacing tires is to be added to the day's running time.

The announcement by the national commission of the rules under which the Chalmers "30," offered by Hugh Chalmers to the champion major league batsman of 1910 will be awarded, has created a great deal of interest among the big league sluggers who usually stand well to the top of the averages.

"The offer of an automobile is awakening a lot more enthusiasm among both players and fans than any trophy which could be offered," said Ty Cobb, the champion batsman of 1909. "I would much rather win an automobile than any other prize. I think the offer of a Chalmers "30" is simply great, and I hope to be lucky enough to own a new Chalmers next fall."

"A motor car for the leading batsman has the usual medals and loving cups beaten a mile. It is a very generous offer on the part of Mr. Chalmers," says Hans Wagner, the champion batsman of the National league. Ed. Collins, runner-up in the American league last season, says:

"The offer of a Chalmers "30" to the champion batsman is a very liberal one, and should certainly receive the hearty recommendation and approval of every American league performer. I, for one, think the automobile well worth working for."

"I wish to congratulate Mr. Chalmers upon giving the ball players of the two major leagues something really worth working for," says Mike Mitchell of Cincinnati, who stood second to Wagner in the National league batting averages of 1909. "I cannot think of a more suitable prize for the batting champion. It is certainly a much more desirable one than the usual cup or medal. As usual, Chalmers is in the lead with a great offer of something worth striving for," says Sam Crawford of the Detroit Tigers. "I own a Chalmers car already, so I know just how good a prize is in store for the season's leading hitter."

According to statistics, there are approximately 175,000 automobiles of all kinds in operation in the United States today. These cars represent an investment of $350,000,000, consume 400,000 gallons of gasoline daily and 35,000 gallons of lubricating oil.

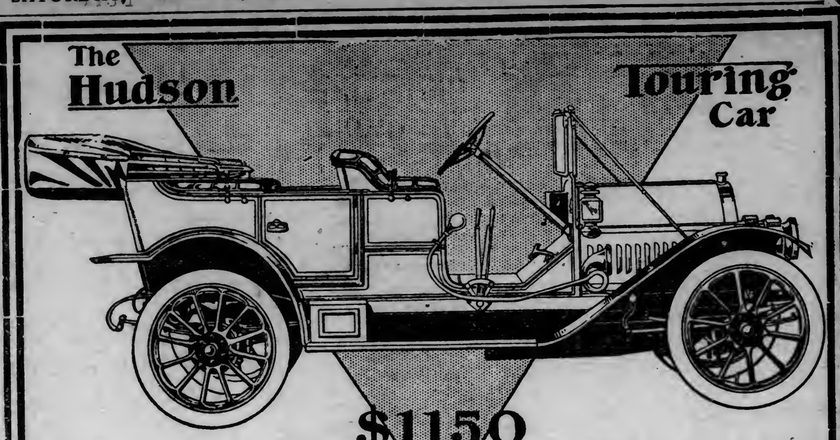
A well-known mechanic, in speaking of so-called automobile troubles, said recently that 75 per cent of the troubles were mere trifles. He says:

"One owner told me that his radiator was leaking so badly he could not keep any water in it, and the car was so badly overheated it would not run. I found that the little pet cock used to drain the car was open. It was but a second's work to close it, and everything was lovely.

"Another frantically telephoned that he had been stalled on a ferryboat and could not turn a wheel. I asked him if he was sure he had gasoline, and he was the surest man you ever saw. When we arrived we found the tank empty.

"One man left his car standing with the gear engaged and couldn't turn his engine over. If he had, the car would have run over him.



"Some use their coil box as a receptacle for keys, tire irons, etc. This causes short circuits, back-kicks and broken wrists.

"One big road race is a greater strain on the engine and car than a whole year's ordinary use.

"An experienced driver never has any real trouble with a car unless he subjects it to some unusual shock or strain."

One Conductor Who Was Cured.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect, and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Leington, Ky., Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of Rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. For sale by all drugists.

FROM THE MINES AND THE SMELTERS

MINING AS AN INVESTMENT

Eighty-Two Mines Paid Quarterly Dividends This Year Aggregating $16,267,441—Handsome Profits that Accrued to Stockholders and Investors.

For eighty-two American mines and metallurgical works to pay dividends aggregating $16,267,441 for the first quarter of 1910 is a continued indication that mining, as now carried on, is an industry that will stand comparison with any as an investment. A careful compilation made by the Mining World reveals the fact that these eighty-two companies have distributed among stockholders, since their incorporation, dividends amounting to the remarkable sum of $588,577,301. This is a return on the $529,576,373 capital issued of 11 per cent.

These huge profits have accrued not only to individual stockholders, but have also contributed generously to the income of such securities holding corporations as Amalgamated Copper, Phelps-Dogde, American Securities and others, which are heavily interested in operating mining companies. Nine of these corporations, with an outstanding share capital of $310,850,000, declared dividends during the first quarter of 1910 amounting to $3,853,585, making their total since incorporation $111,780,269, a return of approximately 37 per cent.

To the totals above can be added large profits divided by numerous private and close corporations, to say nothing of the vast sums that have been earned by smaller mine owners and prospectors.

United Pays Dividends.

Still another source of profit, though not so great as formerly, is that of selling metals on commission. Only one company—the United—has reported as having paid dividends in 1910, the amount being $250,000, making its total since incorporation $10,250,000.

The gold-silver-lead properties, fifty-five in number, are in the lead with $6,552,851 for the quarter and

AT THE SUPERIOR & BOSTON

Fine Indications in Gardner Workings—Two Hundred Tons Monthly Output—Management Contracts for Thousand Feet Diamond Drill Sinking.

Globe, Ariz., April 16.—During the past week the results obtained in development at the Superior & Boston mine have been increasingly favorable. In the Gardner workings the winze put down from the 400-foot level has been continuously in ore averaging 8 per cent copper to its present depth of forty feet. In the bottom of this winze some native copper prevails. Drifting east and west from this winze on the fourth level has advanced about 100 feet each way and for most of this distance has been in ore averaging nearly 8 per cent. The ore taken from the Gardner workings has an iron content averaging 45 per cent and contains only about 25 per cent of insoluble, thus making a material easily smelted. With the aid of a five-drill air compressor recently installed at the Gardner shaft, the underground work will be rapidly carried on and should be productive of excellent results in the course of the next few weeks.

In the eastern part of the mine crosscutting toward the Old Dominion fault is progressing steadily. For the past ten days the crosscut has been driven through faulted ground containing much mineral, chiefly in the form of hematite. It is believed that the crushed state of the ground there is due to faulting parallel to the Old Dominion vein and that within a comparatively short time one of the walls of the lode will be encountered.

In the Great Eastern and McGaw workings about two carloads of ore averaging between 8 and 10 per cent copper are being stoped daily and shiped to the Old Dominion smelter. This ore is almost wholly oxidized litlte or no sulphide being found in that part of the property.

The method of stoping without the use of timbers which has been worked out and adopted at the Superior & Boston mine by Supt. J. D. Wanvig and Mr. De Rhodes, the mine foreman, has proven very successful not only in accelerating the rate of production, but in decreasing the expense of mining.

The Superior & Boston Copper company has contracted for about 1,000 feet of diamond drilling. This work will be commenced soon in the sixth level station of the McGaw shaft. Two holes will be put down on an incline of about 45 deg. One of these holes will penetrate the Old Dominion fault. According to present arrangements the drilling will be continued to tap these veins at a depth of about 900 or 1,000 feet from the collar of the shaft.

The output of the Superior & Boston mine for the month of March was about 200 tons of fine cppper. This production would have been considerably larger had not a shortage of cars curtailed the shipment of ore.

THE RADERSBURG DISTRICT

Keating Company is Heaviest Producer of Gold—Sufficient Ore in Sight to Yield Profit of $250,000 in Next Few Years.

Butte, Mont., April 16.—The introduction of new capital has created an interest in the Radersburg district, and with the opening up of some of the more prominent properties on an extensive scale promises to bring that district into the public eye as one of the greatest gold-producing sections of the state and possibly in the West.

The three most prominent properties at the present time are those being operated by the Keating Gold Mining company, the Ohio-Keating company and the Black Friday company, all of which are being equipped with electrically driven machinery for development.

The only handicap to the district at the present time is the lack of railroad facilities, and the ore is hauled by wagons a distance of from twelve to eighteen miles in order to be shipped to the smelters.

The Keating Gold Mining company is the heaviest producer of gold in the district, and owns a group of claims formerly operated on a moderate scale by the late John Keating. The property also includes the Blacker claims, adjoining the original Keating group, which were also partially developed a number of years ago.

Since the properties passed into the possession of the Keating Gold Minig company they have been developed by means of a straight shaft to a depth of 400 feet, and an inclined shaft is being sunk on the Blacker claim, north of the Keating shaft.

The formation is an andesite, and the filling is a quartz carrying high in iron. The gold values are generally high, and net the company, after paying for transportation and all treatment charges, from $9 to $40 a ton. On the 400-foot level the veins have been drifted upon for a distance of about 1,000 feeet, ore having been taken out at intervals only, and on the south side the drift proceeds for a distance of about 400 feet. On the 300 and 400-foot levels a number of very high-grade ore shoots have beeen opened up, although in no portion of the property has any great amount of stoping been done. The richest ores in the mine are

HIGHER VALUES IN LIVE OAK

Good Progress Made by Air Drills in Developing Property—Two Drifts Being Extended in Good Grade of Concentrating Ore.

Globe, Ariz., April 16.—The Live Oak mine, one of the richest of Globe district's low grade disseminated ore properties, at its present stage of development is being increased in value rapidly as the development work progresses from week to week.

From the shaft which is now sunk to a depth of forty-three feet below the 300-foot level of the mine two drifts on the third level located 200 feet apart, are being continuously extended westward in a good grade of concentrating ore. Two raises located the same distance apart in an east and west line have opened the low grade ore body to its upper limit about eighty-five feet above the third level and a third raise is now being put up from Drift No. 314 located 400 feet west of the shaft. This raise, also, is in an average grade of ore so far as it has been driven. The average grade of the ore developed is about 2.5 per cent copper, but during the past week the material taken from Drifts Nos. 310 and 314 has assayed considerably higher than this.

A new ten-drill air compressor recently installed at the Live Oak is operating five air drills, two of which are used to accelerate the shaft sinking while the others are operating in the drifts. The compressor also supplies air for two power drills at the Keystone mine adjoining where development work is under way, chiefly on the 250-foot level. From time to time more drills will probably be put in commission as new drifts in other parts of the Live Oak mine are started.

The Star churn drill recently purchased began work this week west of the present developed ore body.

The Live Oak Development company, with its present force of forty-three men, is making excellent progress in the development of its mine and as the results so far absolutely assure the mine of becoming a big producer, the operations in the future will simply add to its already great proven value.

President Hoval A. Smith of the Live Oak Development company, is now in Globe and is accompanied on this visit here by D. L. Fairchild, one of the directors of the Warrior Development company, which is also controlled by the Hovland & Smith interests.

AT THE LAKE COPPER MINES

Lode of Unusual Strength and Width Believed to Have Been Located by Section 12 Exploration Company—Improved Conditions in the Kearsarge Lode in the Mohawk Mine.

Houghton, Mich., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Considerable interest is at present centered in the exploratory operations of the Section 12 Exploration company, a development company, organized a few months ago for the purpose of exploiting a tract of land lying next north of the Isle Royale property. The development company has two diamond drills in service engaged in taking a cross-section of the property held under option, and in this work is securing some exceptional showings of copper ground in a horizon generally believed to lie too far to the eastward to be included in the Lake Superior mineral belt. Four drill holes have been sunk in this territory to date all of them showing some copper and two showing copper in commercial quantity. Results indicate that a lode of unusual width and strength has been located there closely resembling the Baltic lode and in all probability identical with that famous bed.

Mohawk.

Recent developments in the Mohawk mine reveal greatly improved conditions in the Kearsarge lode, tributary to Shafts Nos. 4 and 5. The character of the ground there opened compares favorably with the newer ground being opened in the Ahmeek mine and though there is no comparison between this ground and the general average of the Ahmeek the improvement is such that if continuous will closely rival the rather remarkable ground opened in that property. At the No. 6 shaft, the second crosscut corresponding to the fifth level in the Mohawk mine has encountered the lode. The showing at this depth is somewhat improved over that obtained in the crosscut above and at either point is better than the average opened in the mine. The shaft has attained a depth of 315 feet, and will be sunk to greater depth as soon as the work of crosscutting the lode at the fifth level has ended. In the meantime drifting both ways upon the lode at the fourth level continues without interruption and is resulting in the development of first-class commercial ground. The situation elsewhere in the mine continues to show little improvement at depth, but in general is not materially better than that heretofore noted.

New Baltic.

New Baltic's No. 3 diamond drill, which at a depth of 908 feet entered an amygdaloid lode thirty feet thick and thought to be identical with the west lode of the Baltic formation, has entered trap rock and at a depth of 1,000 feet is thought to be within sixty to 100 feet of tapping the east lode or main working bed, in which such sensational results were cut by the No. 2 drill hole a few months ago. This bed underlies the west lode at a depth of about 200 feet, and were cut in the No. 2, or discovery hole, discloses a width of seventy feet, of which about nine feet next to the foot wall contact carries copper in rather exceptional quantity. The No. 4 drill hole has just entered the ledge at a depth of ten feet. This hole is the first of a series that will be put down in making the cross-section of this property.

North Lake.

North Lake has secured a further showing of copper ground, the latest discovery being made by the No. 7 diamond drill which has just cut through a lode thirty-six feet wide. The core reveals a very fair state of mineralization, the copper running largely through stamp work, and is probably the best showing yet obtained in this property. The new lode underlies the so-called Nos. 1 and 2 Adventure lodes recently cut in the drill operations on this property, and though possibly identical with the so-called No. 2 Adventure lode, is according to all data an entirely new bed. The lode is an exceptionally healthy looking and well formed amygdaloid, and where intersected by the No. 7 drill hole of commercial value.

The Twin Lakes Development company, recently organized by local parties to exploit a tract of 1,200 acres lying in the Elm River-Winona section, has recently had an examination made of this property by Mr. J. P. Edwards, the discoverer of the Superior and New Baltic lodes, and it is said has resulted in the disclosure or an amygdaloid outcropping forty feet thick. The No. 1 drill hole on this property has been located and the drill is being rigged up so that actual operations are expected to be in progress early next week. The drill will operate in a horizon just west of the great eastern sandstone, and in which it is

PARROT VERY WELL TREATED

Butte People Think Merger Terms Are Liberal---Butte Coalition Stockholders Do Not Figure in Merger at Present--- The North Butte and Tuolumne Vein Dispute.

Butte, Mont., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The report from the East that an effort is being made to work up an opposition for the approaching special meeting of stockholders of the Parrot Mining company, is not receiving much sympathy in Butte, where the conditions are better understood and the value of the Parrot mines are known. The general opinion here seems to be that 90,000 shares of Anaconda in exchange for the Parrot holdings is a very liberal consideration. The Parrot mine has for several years operated at a loss, and it finally became necessary to close it, the statement of the management being that the mine cannot be worked without a loss at present copper prices. The only other mine of the Parrot company is the Little Mina, which for a time gave great promise of developing into a big mine, but it has not "made good." The Mina has been opened to a depth of 1,200 feet, and on three differen levels good bodies of ore have been opened, but they proved of very limited size. The Mina vein is a large one, and the management hopes that with greater depth larger ore bodies will be found in it. At present the Little Mina is making a small profit. In the Parrot mine itself the two lowest levels have been opened at a depth where the Anaconda and other mines found their second and richest deposits of copper ore, but in the Parrot the lower levels are poorer and the ore bodies smaller than they were on any of the upper levels. The Parrot company owns twenty-seven mining claims, comprising about 236 acres, but only two claims have been producing. The Parrot owns no reduction plant, and relies entirely on the Washoe. Like other subsidiary companies of the Amalgamated, its smelter rate is very low at the Washoe, and it obtains its supplies from the Amalgamated at practically cost. This situation would confront Parrot if by any means the merger proposition could be defeated, which is not likely. It would declare its intention of remaining independent, and stay outside the merger. It would then, most likely, remain idle until it could afford to pay a reasonable price for its supplies, should the Amalgamated care to collect it. It wouldn't require great foresight to see what would happen to Parrot. Under the merger plan it is proposed to change the continuous loss into an immediate dividend paying proposition. The Parrot company's present capitalization is 230,000 shares, $10 par, selling on the market at about $3,680,000, but less than half of the stock is on the market, 115,299 shares being in the treasury of the Amalgamated company. The proposed exchange will give the Parrot a market value of $4,500,000, giving Anaconda a value of $50 a share, and the loss in operations would be converted into a dividend of at least $2 per year. It is natural that there should be some dissatisfaction over the merger terms, but while some Parrot shareholders think they are not treated fairly, stockholders of Butte Coalition and several other companies are particularly bitter when they compare their postion with that of the Parrot and Butte & Boston shareholders, believing that the two latter above all are getting the better of the merger deal.

Butte & Boston.

The Butte & Boston has a present capitalization of 200,000 shares, $10 par, of which 199,840 shares are outstanding. It also has a bonded debt of $1,000,000, of which the Amalgamated owns $146,000. By the merger it is proposed to give Butte & Boston 300,000 shares of Anaconda, valued at $15,000,000, at $50 a share, or $7,500,000 at Anaconda par. The Butte & Boston operates only the Silver Bow, Berkeley and Gray Rock mines, and has been an irregular dividend payer, although it has paid $13.75 a share since Jan. 1, 1907, or 137½ per cent. Last year the Butte & Boston produced 20,955,910 pounds of copper, 1,158,672 ounces of silver and 7,376 in gold.

Trenton.

The Trenton Mining & Development company goes into the merger at a better rate than could have been possible several years ago. The Gagnon mine, the only one worked by the company, is developing one of the richest producers in the district. The Trenton owns 426 acres of mineral ground in the Butte district. Its present capitalization is 100,000 shares, having a par value of $100 per share. Anaconda proposes to exchange 120,000 shares of its stock, giving the Trenton a value of $6,000,000 if Anaconda is worth $50 a share. Last year the Gagnon mine output amounted to 7,168,318 pounds of copper, 623,728 ounces of silver and 577 ounces of gold. It will greatly increase that production this year.

Alice Company.

The Alice Gold & Silver Mining company, for whose property the Anaconda company offers 30,000 shares of its stock, or $1,500,000, is capitalized for $10,000,000, divided into 400,000 shares, having a par value of $25 per share. Its property has been a non-producer for many years, but is now being examined for its zinc values.

Butte Coalition.

While Butte Coalition stockholders have been much dissatisfied with what some publications represented as their

LAKE SUPERIOR IRON MINES

Independent Iron Company to Develop Spencer Property Near Iron Mountain—Calumet Mine Has Suspended Operations —Underground Dining Room at Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s Great Western Property.

The Independent Iron company, the organization of which has recently been completed and which will operate in the Lake Superior region, has been incorporated under the laws of Arizona with a capital stock of $1,000,000. The company is controlled by Michigan men and is officered as follows: President, John A. Russell; vice president, Capt. John T. Spencer; secretary, William L. White; treasurer, McArthur Rittenhouse, all of whom are of Detroit with the exception of Capt. Spencer, who is of Iron Mountain, Menominee range. The directors are the aboved named officers and William A. Jackson, L. C. Stanley, Eugene F. Bradt and William B. Cady of Detroit, and Frederick B. Shepherd of New York city. The company has acquired the holdings of mineral lands and explorations of Capt. Spencer on the Menominee range and elsewhere in the Lake Superior country. It is the intention to develop the Spencer property to the north and west of Iron Mountain to a shipping stage at once and it is hoped to forward several sample cargoes this season. When this is accomplished other tracts will be developed, exploration being conducted meanwhile at various properties, among them the old Erie mine on the Marquette range.

The Calumet mine has suspended operations. It employed 100 men. The mine is a property of Pickands, Mather & Co., and is located in section 8, 41-25, in the Felch Mountain district, northeast of Iron Mountain. It is a producer of low-grade ore, and it has a large amount in stock. It is not known how long the property will remain idle, but if the past history of the Calumet is a criterion the suspension will continue a considerable time. The mine was first opened in 1882 and has been idle most of the years since then. It has produced altogether only 120,000 tons of ore, of which 52,000 tons were sent out in 1907. No shipments were made last season at all. Putting the Calumet on the inactive list is contrary to the general tendency of the times, when operations in the Lake Superior region are being conducted on a scale never attained before, but it is of trivial moment and without significance. The firm of Pickands, Mather & Co., has a long string of mines on the Menominee, Gogebic and Mesaba ranges, it rankling next to the Steel corporation in that respect, in fact, and these are capable of furnishing much more ore than the operating concern could possibly forward this season.

The Groveland District.

Some seven or eight miles west of the Calumet mine is the Groveland property, in section 31, 42-29. This mine will become an important producer. It was taken over some two years ago by the Huron interests, composed of Ohio furnacemen, principally for the purpose of procuring the ore known to still be contained in the old workings. Exploratory work has since revealed what appeared to be a very large body of ore of excellent grade, and preparations are being made now to develop this deposit on an extensive scale. Additional machinery has been ordered, and additional accommodations are to be provided for the working force, which is to be materially increased. Two boarding houses, each of which will care for twenty men, will be constructed this summer, as will eight additional dwellings. The Groveland or Randville district has not been held in particularly high esteem in the past, but it is becoming evident that it is to be heard from in no uncertain manner. The Breitung interests, which are conducting diamond drilling operations, has found ore, so has the John T. Jones Furnace company of Iron Mountain. This latter concern has a shaft down and is now testing its deposit laterally. Mr. Jones is about ready for another trial of his electrical smelter at Iron Mountain, he having made various changes that are believed to have resulted in material improvements to the plant as at first devised. The inventor has succeeded in greatly lessening the cost of treatin ores, not only iron, but lead and zinc, and he believes his method destined to revolutionize the smelting business.

At its big Chapin mine at Iron Mountain, the United States Steel corporation wil soon commence the erection of a model dry-house. The building will be of stone and steel construction and will be erected in the vicinity of "C" Ludington shaft. The dimensions will be 64 by 104 feet. The dry will contain 660 steel lockers for the clothing of men, and will be equipped with shower baths and enamelled wash basins. The construction will be modern and sanitary throughout. A contract also has been awarded by the Steel corporation for the erection of twenty additional dwelling houses at the Dober mine at Stambaugh, at the western end of the Menominee range. The Dober is a fine property from which more than 2,000,000 tons of ore have already been shipped and which still has extensive reserves. A diamond drill is now in commission underground, engaged in investigating the possibilities of the W. H. Selden tract, adjoining on the west and which is believed to contain a continuation of the Dober deposit. In the same portion of the Menominee range, Oglebay, Norton & Co., of Cleveland are exploring the Greenhoot lands. This tract is in the vicinity of Pickands, Mather & Co.'s Baltic mine and was partly tested by the Oglebay-Norton people in 1907. Ore was found at that time, and it will now be de-

GOOD RESULTS ON CORDOVA

Churn Drill Operations on Eureka Claims Exploring Low Grade Sulphide Body Indicated by Drilling —Warrior Prospecting Montgomery Vein.

Globe, Ariz., April 16.—The churn drill operations on the Eureka group of claims of the Cordova Copper company are continuing to explore the low grade sulphide body formerly indicated by the drilling. The first two drill holes passed through about 100 feet of schist assaying slightly less than 2 per cent copper. At the third location of the drill, a sulphide of copper was first encountered at a depth of forty-five feet where samples taken showed the presence of considerable chalcocite. At the present depth of about 250 feet the assays show a higher copper content than those taken near the surface. The churn drilling will be relied upon to determine in a fairly accurate way the extent of the disseminated sulphide to the satisfaction of the management before further underground work will be undertaken on any large scale. The existence of a fairly large body of chalcocite-bearing schist is indicated in a general way, but the commercial value, of course, cannot be definitely determined until prospecting operations have been further continued. Thus far a considerable area of sulphide in schist has been indicated underlying the porphyry common to that district.

Warrior.

The usual shipments of ore from the Wariorr mine are made daily, four six-horse teams being in use every day delivering the ore to the railroad on Miami Flat. The tonnage shipped daily at present is 105 tons of chrysocolla ore assaying about 9½ per cent copper.

The stopes from which the ore is mined are being extended westward closely following the exploratory drift driven along the large vein of silicate ore. Raises put up at intervals open the ground for stoping and the highest of these from the 300-foot level is in what is apparently a large body of ore assaying 10 per cent copper. As the intermediate level above is supplying a large part of the ore shipped to the smelter it is likely that the intervening ground is, for the most part ore which can be mined and shipped, the stopes so far having been put up about twenty-five feet from the 300-foot level.

North of the underground workings the churn drill is operating at the surface and has drilled through the dacite capping into the underlying schist. Casing is now being put into this hole at the depth of 250 feet. As soon as this work is done, drilling will be continued to explore the schist body, the object of the hole being to prospect at depth the Montgomery vein which has yielded the bulk of Warrior ore so far. Although no ore has yet been encountered, it is considered very probable that at depth a commercial sulphide ore body may be discovered, thus showing an extension of the high-grade ore now being mined on the 250 and 300-foot levels of the mine.

ONCE MORE TAKING OUT ORE

Sinking is Resumed in the Clipper Shaft of the Ely Central—Bottom Reached in the Eureka— Stubborn Battle Won.

Ely, Nev., April 16.—They are sinking again in the Clipper shaft of the Ely Central mine and taking out better looking ore than ever.

They have reached the bottom of the Eureka shaft with three compartments, a set of bearers will be put in, and sinking will be resumed there at once.

This, in brief, the story of the Ely Central Copper company for the past few days, means much to the management and to stockholders. More than thirty days have elapsed since the miners were able to get into the bottom of the Clipper shaft. They were driven out by water just when the shaft was getting into the richest ore yet found in this remarkable hole.

The last assays taken from the shaft showed 1.20 per cent copper at the 125-fot level and 1.55 per cent copper at the 130-foot level. At the 127-foot point, an assay of the gold and silver values was taken, and the remarkable returns surprised the mine management to such an extent that they were loath to report them until they had progressed further with the shaft.

The assay could not forever be kept a secret, however, and the returns are now pretty well known in the district. The gold is $20 an ounce, 135-foot point was 1.14 ounces, or about $22 a ton. The miners who were down in the hole declare that the showing is the best they have ever seen in the district.

In the Eureka shaft they have reached a point where they can work with the utmost confidence, and from now on progress will be rapid. The shaft is as straight as an arrow from the collar to the 410-foot point, where they are putting in another set of timbers. Early next week they will be sinking in this shaft from the 430-foot level, to which point the two compartments had been sunk when it was decided to retimber the third compartment.

Development has now reached a point toward which the management had been striving for a month. With a cave-in to combat in one shaft and a big stream of water to master in the other, the conditions on Ely Central were not encouraging, but the grit behind the mine do not know what discouragement means. The greater the difficulties the greater the energy put forth to overcome them.

The Ely Central has won its long fight against the rushing waters and the shifting sands, and its moment of triumph is at hand, for again the ore is coming up out of the Clipper shaft and each day will witness the unfolding of one of the biggest mines in the district. The indications are that they have not yet got into the best of their ore, that they are on top of a big body.

CONTROL OF CINCO DE MAYO

Returns to Capt. A. J. King, Who Took $680,000 Out of the Mine—Includes Fourteen Mexican Claims—Biggest Deal in Years.

Douglas, Ariz., April 16.—Like a bolt out of a cloudless sky came the announcement that Capt. A. J. King had obtained an option on the famous Cinco de Mayo mine, the mother of the fame that has grown to great proportions because of the following strides made in El Tigre and other mines in the Lucky Tiger district, south of Douglas. Capt. King and his associates had been working quietly for several weeks, and finally the deal was completed whereby the former operator of the Cinco de Mayo and associates paid down an option price running into five figures, and signed up with the owner, Col. Francisco Garcia of the City of Mexico, whereby the New York man, Capt. King and his partners take over the property, on certain conditions stipulated in the papers. An engineer representing the New York capital in the deal, will arrive in Douglas today or tomorrow to look after the New Yorker identified with the deal.

Capt. King, ten years ago, in conjunction with Col. Garcia, operated the Cinco de Mayo, and in fourteen months took out of the bonanza $680,000 worth of silver. One ton of ore ran as high as 21,000 ounces of silver, and there were many which went above 12,000 ounces to the ton.

AT THE ARIZONA-MICHIGAN

Indications That Ore Body May be of Much Greater Size Than Anticipated—Superior & Globe Shaft is Down 650 Feet.

Globe, Ariz., April 16.—At the property of the Arizona-Michigan Mining company the sinking of the vertical prospect shaft on the Blackbird claim is making a favorable showing. The shaft is being sunk on a four-foot vein between limestone walls and has now attained a depth of 140 feet. The vein at this depth consists of highly mineralized matter chiefly iron and manganese, with copper carbonate occurring with it. The shaft sinking is being carried on with the aid of a whim which will probably be replaced with a hoist at no very distant date.

At a depth of 100 feet a drift has been driven along the vein for about twelve feet and in the near future cross-cutting from this drift will be commenced to determine the exact width of the vein at that point. One of the walls at present is very well-defined but the other wall is not in evidence so that it is very possible that the driving of a crosscut may prove the vein to be of much greater size than anticipated.

On the 500-foot level of the Telfair shaft on the other end of the company's property the crosscut driven southward measures 700 feet and is being extended in shale containing little or no mineral. The formation, however seems to be changing and with about 150 feet more of driving, the Old Dominion fault should be encountered. While from such information as it is possible to get from the underground workings of the other mines in the region it is hardly probable that the fault will carry ore in great quantity at that depth yet in case it has been protected from leaching, it may prove to contain valuable deposits. In any event, exploration at greater depth should open an ore body.

Superior & Globe.

The lateral workings on the 650-foot level of the shaft put down on the property of the Superior & Globe Copper company are being extended at the usual rapid rate. The crosscut driven north from the shaft is still advancing in non-mineralized diabase at its present length of between 350 and 400 feet. The drifts driven along the fault encountered by the crosscut at a distance of 245 feet north of the shaft measure about 150 feet both east and west and are continuing in vein matter consisting of crushed diabase containing much hematite.

While comparatively little trace of copper has been found in the Superior & Globe workings so far, yet the general appearance of the formation indicates that the vein matter has been thoroughly leached and thus holds forth good reason for the belief that development at greater depth will open copper bearing lodes. It is considered very possible, also, that the present drifts may strike a part of the vein protected from leaching where copper deposits may be found.

BLACK HILLS TIN AND MICA

Revival Expected in the Old Harney Peak Ground—Lengthy Litigation is at Last Ended—Developments in the Custer District.

Hill City, S. D., April 16.—Things are almost in readiness for the permanent work to commence on the property of the Pahasa Mining company, formerly the old Harney Peak ground, near here. Those familiar with the tin situation in the Black Hills look for a revival of the industry. Ever since Former Senator Kittredge succeeded in unwinding the litigation into which the company was thrown when operations ceased twenty years ago, C. H. Kammon, the general manager and superintendent, has been carrying on systematic development work. Now attention is being turned to the Cowboy shaft. The Cowboy is the principal claim of the company. It is one and a half miles west of Hill City. Not since the work was abandoned has anything been done on this claim, and the 300-foot shaft is two-thirds filled with water, all the hoisting machinery and steam plant having been long ago removed. The shafthouse has now been raised and enlarged, the shaft retimbered to the 100-foot level, boilers and hoisting machinery replaced, pumps in position and the unwatering begun. Other shafts will have to be reopened and prepared for permanent operations, and it is more than likely that a small reduction plant will be erected on the Cowboy ground for tests.

Operations have begun in the mill of the Ideal Mining company, located between Custer and Keystone, and owned by the Van Camps of Indiana. The company has been working steadily for the past year, and has developed its mine and erected a treatment plant that appears to meet the requirements of the ore. This ore is of a fair grade, although the ledge shows streaks of a richer material. This mill is capable of handling about 200 tons a day.

Recent work upon the property of the Ludwig brothers in the Rochford district has shown up a ten-foot quartz ledge, that contains ore which pans well. The owners are now having some samples assayed in Deadwood. The ground is located four miles east of Rochford and near the old Minnesota Mining company's property. The ore is a blue quartz similar to the Minnesota brand, and is believed to be an extension of that ore.

William Sauer is still developing his vein containing both gold and silver on a ranch in Fall River county. The ledge shows twelve feet wide and 400 feet long, and sufficient of the ore has been uncovered to lead Sauer to take steps to form a company. Returns from samples he sent to the school of mines at Rapid City show it to be a light sulphide ore containing $13.23 in gold and $109.45 in silver.

Custer, S. D., April 16.—Mica mining in the Custer district is growing to be one of the leading industries of the Black Hills. Two principal companies are operating in this district, the Westinghouse and the Chicago Mica company, formerly the Black Hills Porcelain Clay & Marble Co. The former company found upon entering the field the widespread impression that the mica beds were but pockets and likely to pinch out before much work had been accomplished. But it went ahead with its development on the New York and White Spar mines and the supply soon began to increase and improve in quality as depth was gained. Today the Westinghouse company has a depth of 400 feet on the New York mine and has a much finer quality and a larger quantity of mica than at any time during its operations, and its shipments to Denver and Pittsburg are steady each month. The Chicago Mica company was recently reorganized under the present name and is financially equipped to do extensive work.

PALMER MOUNTAIN TUNNEL

Striking Example of the Uncertainties of Mining—Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars Swallowed and Outlook is Dubious Today.

Seattle, Wash., April 16. — Few monuments to the uncertainties of mining town higher than the Palmer Mountain Power & Tunnel company at Loomis, Okanogan county, in the northern part of this state. For years the scene of marked industrial activity, its enterprises swallowing hundreds of thousands of dollars, the outlook for the undertaking is dubious today. A strong element of the shareholders have finally come to the opinion that the enterprise is a flat failure and that the only course presenting itself is to wind up its affairs in the hope that a few thousand dollars may be saved from the wreck.

Palmer Mountain did not lack showings of gold-bearing ore. The Black mine high up on the hill, contained pure white quartz so plentifully shot with virgin gold as to be a genuine bonanza. No richer ore was ever taken out. There was ample reason to believe that Palmer Mountain was a veritable treasure house. Ten years ago the fact was not as clearly understood as now that these phenomenally rich free gold ores do not extend into deep levels save in rare instances. However, the whole surface of Palmer Mountain was checkered in claims and it was believed that here would be the source of vast fortunes.

It was at this juncture that the tunnel plan was evolved. The theory was that instead of sinking on each individual claim at vast aggregate outlay till the purposes of the claim owners would be served for a tithe of the cost by concentration on one great tunnel driven through the heart of the mountain at an angle to crosscut the well-known drift of the veins. Ore bodies thus crosscut would have an enormous tonnage blocked out above which could be mined for a fraction of the cost of sinking and hoisting. An ore reduction plant was a feature of the conception.

Just how much money was actually put into the enterprise is unknown. Stock was sold at varying prices. Certainly more than $1,250,000 was raised. Today the tunnel company has $4,000 feet of workings twelve feet wide and eight feet high in the clear that represents an enormous cost, for some of the rock encountered was so hard that it took an outlay of $30 per foot to penetrate it. There is a power plant with appurtenances that represents a small fortune and various investments that have cost much money. The power plant is practically the only asset on which anything can be realized, although the tunnel itself may return a small percentage of its cost if leased.

The tunnel enterprise crumbled because the theory on which it was based did not work out in practice. It is said that despite almost countless surface showings only one six-inch stringer of ore was encountered in the whole tunnel and that this stringer was base. Had the veins gone down the outlay on the enterprise would have been a bagatelle to the rich rewards it would have reaped, but they didn't. Had the company been seeking one vein alone hundreds of thousands of dollars would have been saved, because when the tunnel failed to cut the one vein the work would have been saved because when the tunnel failed to cut the one vein the work would have been abandoned. But there were innumerable veins and if one failed to go deep, surely the next would! And so matters went on from year to year.

Some investors in Palmer tunnel were possessed of large means and the $20,000 or $25,000 they may lose will not mean poverty by any means. Unfortunately there are too many instances of widows, shop girls, factory operatives and small farmers to whom their investments mean everything. An old woman's home near Springfield invested a considerable portion of its funds in Palmer tunnel shares.

At a recent meeting of the company in Springfield the directors had prepared a report expressing the opinion that the enterprise was a failure that wisdom dictated the appointment of a receiver and the sale of the company's assets under the hammer. Shareholders who had not lost every vestage of hope took issue with this view and urged that one last test should be made before the proposition was abandoned. This policy attracted more shareholders as it was enunciated, and a majority finally carried such a resolution. Plans for the test will doubtless be completed soon and put into effect this summer.

TO REOPEN FOLEY GOLD MINE

Twenty Stamps Soon to Be Pounding Out the Gold--Seine River Gold Mines Will Again Come to the Front.

Fort Frances, Ont., April 16.—A. Lincoln Hoffman, a well-known citizen of Duluth, was in Fort Frances for several days last week consulting Crown Attorney George in respect to the development of the property of the Foley Gold Mines Company, Ltd. Mr. Hoffman is the secretary-treasurer of this company and Mr. George is the Ontario solicitor. Mr. Hoffman stated that it was the intention of the company to immediately commence operations at Mine Center. The company has been under a process of reorganization for some time and those who are interested financially in it are extremely optimistic that the company will be able to be shippers of gold bars from this district to the new Canadian mint within a very reasonable time.

The company owns 1,100 acres of gold-mining property in this district but the property which will be operated first is the "Foley Mine" property situated near Old Mine Center on Shoal lake. This mine was located first in 1894, and was purchased by Joseph C. Foley in 1895 for $40,000 in cash. In 1896 a one-half interest in the mine was sold for $125,000, and in 1898 the property was purchased by a British company. When the security market flattened out during the Boer war, the company was forced into liquidation and the property was repurchased by Mr. Foley. When the latter died some years ago the property was tied up, and a long course through the probate court was necessary in order to obtain a good title. This has now been accomplished and the Foley Gold Mines Company, Ltd., organized under the laws of this province, with a capital of $1,000,000, now owns not only the Foley Gold Mine, but also some of the best mineral-bearing properties in this district.

The property, together with the development, machinery equipment, and buildings, represents a total cash outlay of $250,000, and the development at the Foley mine has been sufficient to convince the present operators that the veins are true gold-bearing fissures and undoubtedly go to great depths, carrying with them unusually good possibilities for gold.

Edgar P. Rathbone, an English mining engineer, has reported that in his opinion, the ore developed is worth over $500,000. The property has during the past year, been examined by a large number of engineers, geologists and mining experts and in all cases, reports have been very favorable, and many of them have been extremely flattering.

Conditions are now more favorable than ever before for cheap and economical operation, and there is no doubt of the success of the company. The building of the Canadian Northern railway through the heart of the Seine river gold fields has now placed within easy reach of the main line of the railway all the well known gold bearing properties and now that the Foley mine with its 20-stamp mill will soon be at work pounding out the gold from the rich ore, others will soon follow suit. That this well known property is once again to resume work is due almost entirely to J. L. Morrison of Duluth who has worked patiently under all sorts of adverse conditions and difficulties to make it a gold producer.

MINING AS AN INVESTMENT .

$153,870,633 since incorporation. This is equivalent to a return of 79 per cent on the outstanding $194,418,434 share capital.

Of these fifty-five properties, thirty-three are located in the United States and they paid in dividends during the first quarter of the present year $4,-152,418, making their total disbursements since incorporation $117,219,-019, an 88 per cent return on the issued share capital of $132,287,694. In the lead for the quarter is Goldfield Consolidated of Nevada with $1,778,-549 to its credit and $5,689,165 since incorporation Tonopah, another Nevada property, is second for the year with $350,000 and $5,300,000 since incorporation. Camp Bird of Colorado is third for the year with $196,800 and $5,951,560 to date.

Canadian Properties.

Eleven Canadian properties in the above class, all but three in Ontario, contributed to the quarter's total the sum of $1,870,640. Since incorporation, but a few years ago, these properties have yielded profits in the shape of dividends to the amount of $14,606,386. Nipissing leads, as usual, with $450,000 for the year and $3,840,000 to date. Kerr Lake ranks second for the quarter with $300,000 and $1,830,000 to date.

Ten Mexican companies paid dividends during the first quarter of the year amounting to $514,593 and $19,-150,228 since incorporation. Esperanza leads for the year with $198,000 and $10,216,750 since incorporation. Lucky Tiger is second for the year with $107,250.

Eighteen of the eighty-one companies paying dividends in 1910 operate copper properties, all in the United States, and these paid $6,161,452. Since incorporation these properties have yielded profits permitting the payment of dividends totaling $326,-696,520, a return equivalent to 308 per cent on the outstanding $106,665,989 share capital. Calumet & Hecla leads for the year and in total dividends paid, having distributed during the past quarter $800,000 and since incorporation a total of $111,350,000, which is equivalent to 4,454 per cent on the outstanding $2,500,000 share capital. United Verde ranks second for the quarter with $675,000, while Anaconda and Nevada Consolidated rank third with $600,000 each.

Montana Is Third.

In connection with the dividends paid by these eighteen copper properties it is of interest to note that the three leading copper producing states contributed to the quarterly dividend payments in the following order: Michigan leads with a total of $1,-841,900 and since incorporation $146,-229,050; Arizona is second for the year with $1,477,590 and $60,644,733 since incorporation. Montana ranks third for the quarter with $1,350,000 and to date is credited with $117,-975,000. Two Nevada properties paid $130,000 for the quarter and $1,330,000 since incorporation. Two Utah properties paid during the quarter $595,062 and to date $9,505,237.

Six metallurgical companies contributed to the quarter's total the sum of $3,273,138, making the total since incorporation $95,560,148. This, based on the issued $222,991,950 share capital, is equivalent to a return of 43 per cent. American Smelting & Refining company leads with $1,275,000 for the year and $61,588,053 since incorporation.

THE RADERSBURG DISTRICT

yet to be opened up in the Pinchback, Leviathan and Keating veins.

On the 400-foot level the north drift has been opened up a considerable distance north of the Blacker shaft, but on the 300-foot level the north drift extends only to the Blacker shaft, leaving several hunored feeet of the veins yet unexplored.

It was for the purpose of increasing the facilities for working the ore bodies north of the Blacker ground that the Blacker shaft was sunk, and it has proved the opening up of some of the richest ground in the group. The Blacker shaft is now down a distance of nearly 550 feet, and the limited amount of drifting that has been done on the 500-foot level has proved that the veins are much wider and richer than on the levels above. A few days ago the drift on the lower level opened into three feet of exceptionally high-grade ore, the values running up to $50 a ton, net, after paying for the smelting and transportation. Sinking will be continued to open up the property at great depth.

It is conservatively estimated that even with the present handicap the Keating Gold Mining company has sufficient ore in sight to yield $250,000 inside of the next few years, and with the building of a railroad, thus materially reducing the cost of handling, the profits will be increased to close $1,000,000 in that period.

presumed the several Lake and Adventure lodes lie.

Atlantic.

Atlantic's operations continue centered in an attempt to locate commercial ground in the Baltic lode on its section 16 property. Shaft sinking was ceased some time ago at the twenty-fifth level and rifting at that depth is now in progress. At the sixteenth level north crosscutting in a search of the southerly extension of the Superior lode was stopped a few weeks ago and attention is now being paid to a lode cut in this work which though barren apparently is identical with the Superior lode. Net results to date have been rather discouraging and are not now particularly bright. There has been some talk of reopening the old mine on the ash bed, and though this may eventually be done, such plans have not been definitely decided upon by the management.

South Lake.

At the South Lake property, diamond drilling continues in search of the underlay of the Lake lode. The No. 2 drill hole has attained a depth of 1,750 feet and is expected to cut this copper deposit at any moment. The best data available concerning the pitch of the Lake lode at this point indicated that the lode would be encountered in this hole at anywhere from 1,600 to 1,800 feet of depth. The No. 1 drill, operating to the northward on this property, is being operated with difficulty owing to the tendency of the ground to cave. Two or three copper-bearing amygdaloids were cut in this hole, but none were of any particular promise and the work in general at that point is without feature.

The richest car was chloride, the other rich bodies being sulphides and pure stephanite. About 6,000 or 7,000 feet of development work has been done in the mine, one tunnel alone running about 1,300 feet. Slce Capt. King ceased to operate the mine, which passed out of his control in a technical way, Col. Garcia has worked the property from time to time, and other work has been done in this development.

When Capt. King operated the mine the Cinco de Mayo property included only thirty pertenencias, embracing what is now La Derrota, or the Cinco de Mayo denouncements. The option now includes the following claims in addition to the La Derrota denouncements: The Sampson, with five and a half pertenencias; Valentina, with twenty-seven; Los Huecos, with nineteen hundreths pertenencia; the Alaska, forty; Luis, six; the Pacheco, with thirty; Juarez, with nineteen; Valentina Continacion, with three; Libertad, eight; Contrario Imperio, six; Independencia, twelve; the Morelos, with eight, and the Constitution with twenty-seven, making a total of 241 pertenencias, including also Exito with eight and El Triumfo with ten pertenencias, adjoining, and the Sachley, also adjacent, with a little less than two pertenencias.

It is understood that a heavy cash prices was paid down for an option, and that the selling price for the mine is an even $500,000 gold.

Recent strikes in the Tigre district which have been phenomenal even for the proverbial richness of the silver mines in Sonora, have attracted attention in New York and other Eastern cities, and the deal now on for the transfer of this, the first great producer in the region, is probably the result of this interest. Reports concerning the Roy, taken over not long ago by Capt. King and his associates, in the same district and immediately adjoining the Cinco de Mayo, have been favorable, and other grounds have changed hands in the near vicinity of both the Lucky Tiger and the Cinco de Mayo which will be heard from in deals ere long.

LAKE SUPERIOR IRON MINES

termined whether it exists in merchantable quantities.

Underground Dining Rooms.

A novelty, even in the Lake Superior regions, where the most up-to-date mining methods are in vogue, is the underground dining rooms at Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s Great Western property in the Crystal Falls district of the Menominee. These rooms—there are two of them, one each on the eleventh and twelfth levels, 1,100 and 1,200 feet beneath the surface, respectively—are cut in solid rock. They are ninety-five feet long, twelve feet wide and eight feet high. The floor is of concrete, which is flushed daily, and the walls are whitewashed. The rooms are heated with steam and lighted with electricity. A washroom, 17 by 12 feet, and supplied with hot and cold water, opens into each one. The dining rooms are each roomy enough to accommodate 200 men, and they are extremely popular. The miners are privileged to have warm meals brought to the shaft each day, and at a certain time the man whose duty it is to attend to the dining room and the blasting powder ascends to surface and gathers up the pails and baskets. The men generally have their dinners eaten by the time it would take to hoist them above ground, and then they stretch out on the benches and rest. Aside from the time that is saved, the hazard of underground toil is lessened, the crowding of the men in the cages when ascending or descending to and from dinner having heretofore been a situation occasionally productive of accident. The Great Western is not being vigorously operated this season. This is because the mine has not been shipping all the ore produced the past three years, and the stock pile has grown until it now contains in the neighborhood of 400,00 0tons. The deposit is a large one, but the grade of ore has been declining until it has reached a class which is hard to market. The mineral contains much manganese. When the present working shaft was sunk it was thought that it was located so far from the deposit that it would never be in danger. This belief has proved erroneous, however, for the shaft is in ore now. Sinking is in progress to a new level, which will be opened this summer.

Sure to Have Another Trial.

The old Erie property, in section 28, 47-30, in the Republic district of the Marquette range, is to be given another trial. It has been taken over by the newly organized Independent Mining company, along with other options held by Capt. John T. Spencer. The Erie has never been given a thorough test. It was opened years ago, when it produced a few thousand tons of ore. The shaft was put down only 200 feet. The vein had narrowed from fifteen feet to two or three feet at that depth, and the ore had become considerably mixed with quartz. Subsequently three diamond drill holes were bored, the deepest of which was less than 100 feet. Since then the property has been idle. In view of the developments in the western portion of the Marquette range in later years, it appears that the work heretofore carried on at the Erie was at altogether too shallow a depth. It has often been commented as decidely strange that the great Republic fold, where there is a bend after the form of an immense horseshoe of the rock formations, has thus far produced only one profitable mine. The Cambria Steel company's Republic property, beginning operations in 1874, has been a constant contributor to the production of the Marquette range, and already has 6,200,000 tons to its credit, with large deposits still to be mined. Its ores have been, and are yet, of high grade, and for many years they formed the basis by which the standards of quality and price were set for the entire Lake Superior field. Such ore as was produced at the Erie ran about 66 to 68 per cent in metallic iron, where it was clean, and it was well within the Bessemer limit as to phosphorus. The product was very similar to the speculars mined at the Republic. Since this latter property is developed to a depth of 2,000 feet, it appears entirely probable that the work at the Erie was not carried downward sufficiently far to find the real deposits. For that reason the operations now to be conducted will be watched with interest, and particularly by the owners of other old-time explorations in the district, among which may be mentioned the Cannon, Magnetic, Berea and Mercopolis.

Hoose & Person, the Iron Mountain contractors who will carry on stripping and mining operations at the Rogers-Brown company's Portland property in the Michigamme field of the Marquette range this season, are assembling their equipment and will have their work well under way very shortly. The contract nas been enlarged and now calls for the removal of 150,000 cubic yards of overburden and the mining of 250,000 tons of ore. Two steam shovels will be employed. A locomotive and considerable trackage have been added to the equipment, and this will insure much greater dispatch in handling cars. It is understood that the Chicago & Northwestern road will build on an extension to the mines west of Michigamme, and that Hoose & Person have secured this contract, also. One thousand steel ore cars, ordered some months ago, are being delivered to the Northwestern road this spring. Half of these are for service on the Menominee and Marquette ranges, and half on the Gogebic range.

exchange value, it develops that after all they do not figure in the merger at all at present, and that its holdings in Red Metal and Alice will merely be taken over by the merger, Anaconda stock being exchanged for them and placed in the Coalition treasury. Beside the Red Metal and Alice, the Coalition owns 3,000 shares of International Smelting & Refining company stock, which pays 8 per cent dividends at present. It also has a treasury surplus of $3,000,000 or more. At the time of its last annual report the surplus was nearly $4,000,000.

Washoe.

As previously stated, the Washoe Copper company will get but 380,000 shares of Anaconda for its property, which includes three or four good producing copper mines in the Butte district, the vast coal fields at Bear Creek, Mont., and the big Washoe smelter at Anaconda, upon which there has been spent $12,000,000. The exchange gives Washoe a total value of $19,000,000, allowing $50 a share for Anaconda. Since Jan. 1, 1909, the Washoe paid 46 per cent in dividends. The Amalgamated owns about all of the Washoe stock.

Boston & Montana.

The Boston & Montana company has agreed to accept 1,200,000 shares of Anaconda stock, giving its property a value of $60,000,000. The company is capitalized for $3,750,000 in 150,000 shares having a par value of $25. It also has $200,000 in bonds outstanding, bearing 7 per cent. The company produces in excess of 100,000,000 pounds of copper per annum.

The Big Blackfoot Lumber company, with a capitalization of $25,000,000 goes into the Anaconda merger at a valuation of $15,000,000, or about the valuation placed on its standing timber by cruisers.

The Diamond Coal & Coke company gets 100,000 shares of Anaconda, or a market value of $5,000,000, which is generally considered a million or two less than the actual value of the company's property in Wyoming.

The Clark Properties.

There is talk of other Butte companies going into the Anaconda merger, but the only one that is at present under consideration is said to be the properties of W. A. Clark. There are serious vein controversies between the Amalgamated and Clark, and the purchase of the latter's properties by the Anaconda would be the simplest solution.

North Butte.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the North Butte Mining company will be held in Duluth, April 18, and two sets of proxies have been received in Butte, the company proxies running to Thomas F. Cole, James Hoatson, Charles A. Duncan and Joseph B. Cotton and Frederick R. Kennedy. Charles A. Clark of the Boston stock exchange is also soliciting proxies in order to get a minority representation on the board of directors. The directors whose term of office expires are James Gayley of New York, Charles A. Duncan and Joseph B. Cotton of Duluth. In a reecnt letter to Mr. Clark, Thomas F. Cole said the North Butte mine was improving continually, and the property was in excellent condition. Relative to the controversy with the Tuolumne company, Mr. Cole said: "A great deal of misleading information has recently been given out by the newspaper to the effect that we do not own the apex of the Jessie vein. We do own it and the neighboring company, which was claiming the ore in this vein, has simply a five-eighths interest in a small triangular piece of land through which the vein passes. We own it on both sides of this small strip."

Mr. Cole's statement relative to the Tuolumne controversy confirms the unbiased and uninfluenced statement of the matter that has appeared in these letters heretofore. This narrow triangular strip of ground referred to by Mr. Cole is owned jointly by the North Butte and Tuolumne, the title of each being perfect. According to Mr. Cole's statement the Jessie vein apexes, as heretofore stated, north of this strip, and dips under and through the triangle. It appears, therefore, that Mr. Cole's contention is that of his company that where the vein remains within the triangle the Tuolumne company is entitled to five-eighths of the ore, but that after the vein gets outside the strip it all belongs to the North Butte. As heretofore stated, the contention of the North Butte is that this vein remains in the jointly owned strip of ground for a depth of several hundred feet. The public claim of the Tuolumne people has been that the Jessie vein separates into two branches and that they unite again at a depth of 1,200 feet, from which point the Tuolumne owns it entirely. Mr. Cole doesn't seem to think so.

Thayer Optimistic.

E. B. Thayer, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining company, who has just completed his semi-annual examination of the Amalgamated properties in Butte, says he has never known the mines to look so well as they do at present. This is especially true of the bottom levels, and there is but one exception to the rule, and that, he says, is the Parrot mine. Some unusually large and high grade bodies of ore have been developed on the upper levels of the High Ore and Diamond mines, while the 2,300-foot level ore I have seen in a Butte mine," said Mr. Thayer. The new strikes in the High Ore and Diamond are of ore bodies never before worked in any portion of those mines, and are being opened on three levels from the 1,800-foot up. Every mine in the district, with the exception of the Parrot, is working again, though, of course, not nearly at normal. Shaft sinking at the new Gagnon shaft, the Badger State and Belmont is being pushed. The Gagnon is down about 600 feet and will be sent to the 2,300-foot level, where connections will be made with the old workings of the mine. The Badger State has reached a depth of 1,700 feet, and will be sunk 100 feet deeper, after which the country will be explored at that depth. The Belmont, which is to be made one of the Anaconda working shafts, has reached a depth of 1,450 feet and will be sunk to a depth of 2,400 feet, the only interruption to the sinking being for the purpose of cutting stations at each 200-foot point. At the 2,400-foot point connections will be made with the 2,800-foot level of the Anaconda, which, it is expected, will be opened by that time.

Ohio Mine Sold.

The Ohio mine in the Radersburg district is now owned by the Ohio-Keating Gold Mining company, the bond having been taken up and a warranty deed secured by the company. Beside the Ohio, which is considered the best gold mine in the district, the company owns seven other claims, forming a solid group of 128 acres. The ocmpany is installing electrical machinery which will work a saving of 50 per cent in the cost of power."

JOHN PEYTON MADE COACH

Former Yale Oarsman Will Assume Charge of Crew Candidates.

Lapstreak Races Decided Upon---New Course Will Be Measured.

John Peyton of this city, a former member of the Yale varsity eight, last year a member of the senior eight of the Duluth Boat club, and also a brother of two other Peytons, well known here as two of the best oarsmen ever developed at the Head of the Lakes, has been selected as coach of the oarsmen of the boat club.

While the plan to make Mr. Peyton coach was talked of last night, the decision to tender him the position was made this morning.

The new coach attended Yale three years. Each year at the New Haven institution he was most actively engaged in rowing. He made the freshmen eight the first year, that eight winning the freshmen event from the other Eastern colleges.

His second year at Yale Peyton made the college eight that won from Pennsylvania, Harvard and other Eastern college crews.

During his third year at Yale the Duluth man made the varsity eight. This was the eight that rowed such a great race against Harvard at the American Henley, only to lose through the collapsing of the stroke a short distance from the finish. The stroke died a year later.

JOHN PEYTON,
Chosen Coach of the Boat Club Crews.

After weighing the matter deeply, the members of the rowing committee came to the unanimous conclusion that in every way Mr. Peyton was qualified to take charge of the rowing interests of the club. He is a man well liked by the other oarsmen, and has also had the necessary experience to fit him for the somewhat exacting position of coach.

The coach will assume his duties Sunday morning. From that time until the end of the season he will have complete charge of the crews and all candidates for the crews.

Before entering Yale the new coach established an enviable athletic reputation at Phillips Exeter. For three years he won the running high jump, an unusual record for a man of his size. He also made the football team and took part in gymnasium athletics.

At the meeting last night it was decided that a series of lapstreak races will be held the present summer. These races will be held weekly, starting on June 4.

These races are planned primarily with the idea of developing interest and oarsmen, two prime necessities. The The crews will be shifted about from time to time. The four men most often in a winning boat will be rewarded with a trophy.

There will also be a series of four-oared races for men with wider rowing experience. The Kelly-Kilporin trophy races will be held as usual also.

A course will be laid out and proper workings made. There has for some time been a dispute as to the true length of the course that the boat club crews have been rowing over. The new course will be a mile and a half and will have starting and finishing posts.

E. S. Ver Wiebe, the Harvard football player who was personally commended by Theodore Roosevelt for the part he took in a certain Harvard-Yale football game, will come out and try for the crew. Mr. Ver Wiebe is a large and powerful man and has had some experience with college rowing. He is a most desirable man for the boat and the men are anxiously awaiting his appearance.

Brown, the Canadian oarsman, who has been prevented from getting out with the men because of rush o. work at the opening of the navigation season, will be out this evening and will be an active candidate from now on.

It is believed that there will be enough candidates for two eights. There has been an eight and two fours on the water almost every evening, and with the more thorough organization of the rowing department, it is believed the number of candidates will increase.

Indications point to a most successful season. With the outlook so bright the members of the rowing committee will do everything in their power to insure the success of the crew.

The launch has been ordered ready for Monday. It will take candidates from the Fifth avenue dock to the boat house. It is planned to get some of the candidates out at 5:30.

Beell Defeated.

AS SEEN FROM THE SIDE LINES

(BY BRUCE.)

Some Character, Tex.

Now that the big fight and all the principals have been coming in perhaps for more than their share of publicity, they have been hunting up the personal history of "Tex" Rickard and telling some of the peculiar traits of the man from the West.

It is said that Rickard has a nerve that would make a piece of pig iron look like molasses that sister has tried vainly to cool. He is one of the kind of gamblers that are born, and since a mere youth has been gambling with fate as well as cards.

Once winter found the adventurous Rickard in the frozen stretches of Alaska. Rickard and his partner had failed to strike pay dirt. Winter was on and they were broke. They finally reached the point where the only thing left in the cabin cupboard was an old trouser button. With long face and sorrowful voice Rickard's partner informed him of the sole possession of the cupboard.

"I'll match you to see who eats the button," proposed "Tex."

While the owner of a saloon and gambling hall in Alaska, a gink blew along the trail and asked that all limits be raised. He was told to go ahead, as the nine canopy overhead would be the only limit.

The stranger bucked the Tex "tiger" until he had everything in the place. Then he proposed that Rickard bet the saloon and gambling hall. They say "Tex" readily agreed, and soon the lucky individual was the owner of the establishment.

Rickard put up his gold cuff buttons and the diamond pin he had. When approaching morning drove the shadows of night on to the westward, "Tex" was again the owner of the establishment, in addition to having a firm hold on the obese roll of the stranger.

Rickard is getting a big gamble on the fight; yet if all the stories about him are true, a little thing like a $101,000 purse will not worry "Tex" in the least.

How's This, Superior?

A torrential tirade may be expected from that hot and passionately angry swinger of the quill of the Superior Telegram, if the advices from Winona, stating that Koepping will report with the other players for a tryout, is correct.

The scribe with the stinging pencil has raked wrath down upon the head of the peaceful Elliott and has cut all the leashes of the dogs of war. He has threatened to disrupt the league should Angel Child Koepping play with the hated clan of Winona.

Well, what about it? Here they are saying that the fast second-sacker will show up at Winona and will be given an opportunity to make the team—if he is fast enough.

That is sticking a heated pin of malice deep into a wound made sore and tender by what the Superior writer considers the most piratical happening since Capt. Kidd went into retirement. In Superior they have demanded that Koepping be returned to the team, and that in the more peaceful future Killian refrain from butting into what is really none of his—business.

Another thing---this fire-eater on the sheet across the bay demands that Winona cut down its players to the salary limit, though the salary reduction is not supposed to come until the first of June. That is just how wrought up they are in Superior.

Coming around from the kitchen steps, where facetious flirting with the second maid is permitted, and talking seriously to father, it would be safe that Koepping should go to Superior. There is, perhaps, no rule that will compel him to be returned to the Superior club; it is, rather, an unwritten baseball law, a courtesy between managers, that should not have been violated in the case in question.

Superior has no claim further than that on the player.

But the wrath of that writer!

Educate the Scorers.

Other papers over the Minnesota-Wisconsin circuit are taking up the idea of having John A. Elliott call the official scorers together and have them better instructed in uniformity of scoring rules. If all the papers will fall in line behind the movement, the Elliott person may be made to see the practicability of the suggestion.

Last season the league made a very serious blunder in the selection of its scorers. The seriousness of this blunder was realized after the close of the season. Some of the reports of the game were not at all in keeping with the actual stunts that were pulled off on the diamond green. The giving out of correct information concerning the game has a large place in the developing of the proper appreciation. Therefore, educate the official scorers of the circuit.

Hope It's True.

Really, Algernon, the reports from the training camp of Jeffries have such a rose tinted hue that sometimes it is rather taxing the credulity of guileless man to believe all the stuff. Some of the information that has come from the training camp of the boiler maker has more the sound of press stuff than real news.

From the camp of no other fighter has this class of stuff come forth. Reading between the lines, you will observe that there is very little real news in the camp. A mountain is made out of a mole hill. The fact that Berger puts on the gloves with Jeffries is heralded over the country, yet the haberdasher has been boxing with Jeffries, if you could call it boxing, for the past year.

When Jeffries engages some real live sparring partner and we hear of him in daily workouts, then will it begin to look as if he were getting down to cases.

Bob Armstrong being chased all over the ring by Jeffries, and the big negro shrinking from the blows of Jeffries, sounds as if the imaginative mind of some press agent had touched the story up. Sparring partners that shrink from blows are really of little use to men aspiring to regain that form which will enable them to cope successfully with a man holding the title of world's champion.

Why doesn't Jeffries get a live sparring partner? Joe Choynski is on the way, and then there will be James J. Corbett. The only thing that prevents these men from belonging to the G. A. R. is that they did not fight in the Civil war.

Salary Limit Low.

With the Minnesota-Wisconsin league growing as it is, it is very probable that another season will see the team salary limit raised. The present limit $1,300 per month, is going to make some of the managers go some to get inside of the financial fence.

Winona was never inside the paling last season. There were some other teams that might not have been run on that plan of economy that would remind one of the cost of living as laid down by Mr. Cook.

But it is very likely that next season will see the salary limit of the teams of the league boosted several notches. Of course the future action will depend in great measure upon the success of the league the present season. If the league attains to the degree of prosperity which it is expected to reach, there will be little else to do but extend the shekel boundary line.

Kuehnow for President.

There is already talk in political circles of the Minnesota-Wisconsin league that A. W. Kuehnow of this city may be the next president of the league. There is the doubt of Mr. Kuehnow accepting the position, should he be assured of election, however.

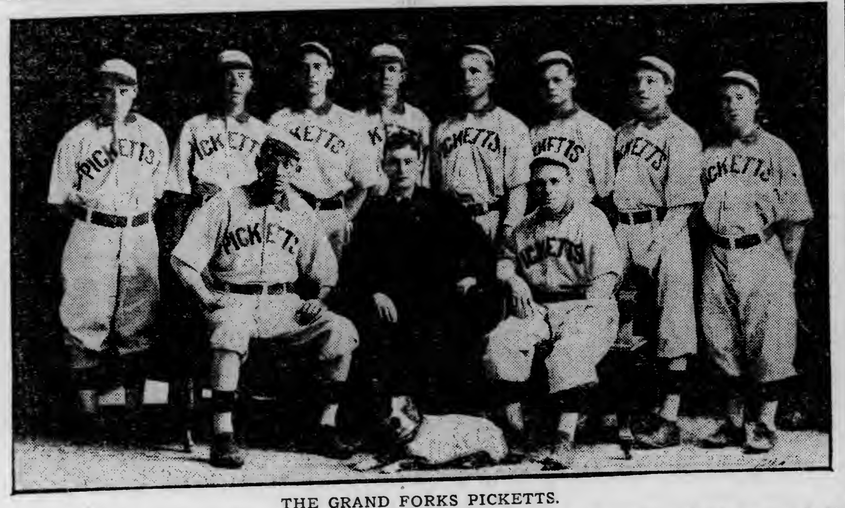
Mr. Kuehnow is one of the best informed men on baseball in the league. He has been identified with the development of baseball in this part of the country for a number of years. He is one of the men who played a large and important role in developing the Minnesota-Wisconsin league, and there are already political straws flying about, which point to the asking of Mr. Kuehnow to accept the league leadership at the annual meeting of the magnates at the close of the present season.

One of the northern cities will get the honor of the office, it is believed, and the selection of the treasurer and secretary of the Duluth club, would be conferring the honor upon a city that deserves it in the fullest sense of the word.

Billiard Champion.

New York, April 16.—For the third time in his career as a brilliant player, Edward W. Gardner of Montclair, N. J., won the national amateur championship at 18.2 billiards, when he defeated C. F. Conklin of the Chicago Athletic association at the Hamilton club, Brooklyn, last night.

Gardner won six straight games, defeating all the other competitors, and in the final issue won from Conklin by a score of 400 to 319



Conklin is tied with Poggenburg of the Liederkranz club for second place, each winning four games and losing two. They will play off their tie tomorrow afternoon.

Joseph Mayer of Philadelphia won the high individual run honors with 122. The high average prize goes to Poggenburg, who today made 16 16-24 in his game against Dr. Douglas.

FAST INDEPENDENT BASEBALL TEAM REORGANIZED AT GRAND FORKS

Reading from left to right: Standing—A. E. Chandler, J. M. Shannon, T. A. McIlraith, Ted Schumacher, J. Alrick, E. McIlraith, J. P. Conny and A. Franklin. Sitting—E. Kelleher, W. E. Shepherd, Manager and J. Chandler, Captain.

East Grand Forks, April 16.—With splendid prospects for a very successful season, the Grand Forks Picketts, admittedly the strongest independent organization in this section of the state, will open Sunday afternoon in a game against the Fargo (N. D.) Red Sox. From that time on one game a week against the strongest independent organizations in the Northwest will be played.

The Picketts are an organization of old standing in Grand Forks and East Grand Forks, having been in the field even before the days of the old Northern league. Last year they made a remarkably good record and this season with practically the same line up, they promise to repeat their performance.

Games up to May 30 have already been scheduled, being as follows: Crookston, April 24; North Dakota university, April 30; Fargo Athletics, May 1; Thief River Falls, May 8; Fosston, May 15; Grand Forks U. C. T., May 22; Clyde or Grafton, N. D., May 29 and 30.

During the past few days a great deal of work has been done on the grounds in this city to put them in condition for the season's play. They have been enlarged, sand covered and new facilities for caring for the crowd have been made in the erection of additional grandstand and bleachers.

Since the Northern league days, Grand Forks and East Grand Forks have had to be content with the independent article. Grand Forks would not stand for Sunday baseball so the Picketts hit upon the plan of holding Sunday games in East Grand Forks. The plan is working out very well, and every Sunday big attendances are the rule.

PROSPECTS OF THE BIG LEAGUE TEAMS FOR 1910

The National and American Leagues Open With Assurance of Good Season.

Pittsburg and Detroit Are Most Likely Candidates for 1910 Pennant.

(By Tommy Clark.)

The baseball season of 1910 is with us, and from now until next October political scraps, grafting cases and other things that have been taking up the valuable time of the general public will have to be thrown into the ash heap. More important subjects are to be settled and discussed. They are as follows: What teams will capture the pennant in the National and American leagues? Can Fred Clarke and the Pittsburg Pirates make it two straight and win another world's champion, or are Frank Chance and his Cubs strong enough to win another flag? Will Johnny McGraw win out this year, or will Clarke Griffith and his band of Cincinnati kids cop the much coveted gonfalon? Are Hugh Jennings and the Detroit Tigers going to equal Comiskey's record and make it four straight? Can Connie Mack spring another surprise, or will the Boston Red Sox walk off with the banner?

In sizing up the four leading teams in the National league one finds that the Pittsburg Pirates are every bit as strong as last year, and if nothing unforeseen happens they will cop again.

The Cubs are not as strong as they were in 1908 even though Kling has been reinstated. And another thing is that this great baseball machine is not running as smoothly as it did a few years ago. McGraw has been working hard trying to whip together a pennant combination for the last two years and has corralled several crack youngsters that he hopes will fill up the weak spots on the team. Clarke Griffith and his great band of youngsters will be in the hunt all season. Taken all in all, the fight for the banner should be a good one.

Of course, advance dope often goes wrong. The team which looks strongest on paper may not loom up prominently at all when the real battles are being fought on the diamond. Take the Phillies last season, for instance. The Phillies last season, for instance. Nearly every student of the game thought Billy Murray's charges would finish high up in the first division and that they would be fighting for the pennant all the way, with splendid chances of landing the plum. But as matters turned out the Quakers were never very serious contenders after the Fourth of July.

The Pittsburg Team.

Those who profess not to take seriously the Pirates' chances are pointing out that the Pittsburg team is built up around three men, who are likely to go to pieces most any time. It is needless to say that the three veterans referred to are Manager Fred Clarke, Hans Wagner and Tommy Leach, all of whom have been on the Pittsburg team for the last ten years. It is true that these men are all veterans and that sooner or later they must pass from the scene of diamond activities. But the prophets are going a step too far when they declare that this season may see the last of these players. They evidently forget that Leach led the National league in batting in 1909, that Wagner was the leading batsman for the seventh time during his career and that Clarke not only hit well and scored a lot of runs, but that he was the leading outfielder in the older organization.

There is no denying the fact that Clarke, Leach and Wagner form the bulwark of the Pirates' strength. It is a fact, however, that every team depends more on one or two men than on all the others combined. And it is also a fact that dependence on veterans is more warrantable than on youngsters. There are scores of cases on record where young players have broken into fast company under most auspicious circumstances, have shone effulgently for a single season and then quickly dropped into oblivion.

Of course there is no contention as to the right of Wagner, Clarke and Leach to be called stars. Taken individually they are three of the grandest ball players that ever donned uniforms. Taken collectively they form a trio which has no equal in the game today. Their abilities, considered from any angle, stamp them as indispensable to the Pittsburg team, and if all three were to disappear from the baseball horizon at the same time it would be a blow to the Pittsburg team from which it would require years to recover.

Wagner looks good for two or three more years at shortstop. When he has slowed up so that he is not considered speedy enough for that position any longer it is more than likely that he will take to first base, where he will not be required to cover so much ground, but where he will be a tower of strength to the team.

Instead of deteriorating, as some claim, fans who have seen Tommy Leach in action year after year are of the opinion that the little wonder is better today than for many years. The move from the infield to the outfield helped Tommy a lot, and it is a fact that last year he did not suffer at all from the complaint which slowed him up at times in past years. Leach is a wonderful little baseball machine.

As for Clarke, his work last season speaks for itself and refutes the assertion that he is going back. He was rated many years ago as the best left fielder in the business, and there is no reason to rate him lower than that at the present time. Although he has been in the game a long time, he plays with the same enthusiasm which marked his work when a youngster. He ranks with the greatest in history without even considering his managerial ability.

Valuable as are Clarke, Wagner and Leach, even aside from them the Pittsburg team in 1910 will shape up as well as any other in the league. This trio comprises the only real old players on the team except Phillippi and Leever, who are not likely to be used to any great extent. Pittsburg will have three comparatively young infielders in Miller, Byrne and either Sharpe or Flynn. Byrne should be better than last year, for he will start the season with the team, whereas in 1909 he did not break in with the Pirates until late in the summer and had only a short time in which to accustom himself to the Pirates' style of play.

Clarke's Problem.

Clarke is up against the same problem he faced last spring, that of choosing a first baseman. But it is not likely that the Pirates will be any worse off in that position than they were in 1909, even though neither of the present candidates comes quite up to expectations.

It is true that Clarke must choose between Flynn and Sharpe, but both men look good, and it may be only a question of picking the better one.

Clarke is not worrying about first base. He evidently figures that if the Pirates could win a pennant with Abstein covering the initial sack they can do it with either Flynn or Sharpe.

There is nothing to worry about in the catching department with George Gibson, that fiend for work, as the headliner and three good substitutes.

The pitching department will assuredly be no poorer than last season, and it should be stronger. One veteran at least will be among the missing. Vic Willis has been sold to St. Louis. Clarke intends to place much dependence on his young heavers.

Adams, Brock and Brandom should do even better than last year when given regular work, and it is likely that they will be called upon often the coming season. Then, with Maddox, Camnitz, Powell, Leifield, Phillippi and Leever and one or two others to fall back upon, the Pirates will have a staff which should hold its own with anything in the league.

No matter from what angle a person views the Pittsburg bunch the team looks distinctly formidable. In fact, the team is strong enough to repeat this season.

The Cub's Chances.

Hard luck pursued the Chicago Cubs throughout the early stages of the 1909 training grind and league race combats, and this year Chance is determined to guard against any and all branches of the athletic kinks. Had Kling joined the club, or had Johnny Evers appeared for the initial scraps, or had "Big Ed" Reulbach reported at the tap of the gong in winning shape, or had Miner Brown kept the early kinks out of his salary wing, Chance's men would have almost romped in with their fourth straight National league bunting. Other tribulations trailed astern the club, and this year Chance is out to rule the bunch with a rod of cast iron in order to retrieve the lost laurels.

Looking over the New York Nationals as now composed and studying their personnel it begins to look like the one big "if" club of the National league. It has more uncertainties, more possibilities, more chances to spring surprises or to get it in the neck than any other outfit in the eight, and a delightful vell of "ifs" and "buts" and a delightful vell of "ifs" and "buts" already hides its future. If all the "ifs," or even half of them turn out right it will be hard to stop the Giants in their onrush for the pennant. If the "ifs" go the other way the Giants are likely to be the foothills of fortune and the Patsys of the second division. and the Patsys of the second division.

A lot of people are figuring on where the Cincinnati Reds will finish this season. One thing is certain, and that is that they ought to maintain their place in the first division. From the dope at hand there does not seem to be much chance for any of last year's second division clubs to overtake the defiying youngsters. Brooklyn and Boston are hopeless propositions when it comes to breaking into the first division. The St. Louis Cardinals have greatly improved since last year, but not enough to overcome all the ground that they would have to make up to get in line with the Reds. The Phillies, handicapped by alien ownership, an interfering president and a new manager, will have their troubles in beating out the Cardinals, to say nothing of the Reds. The outlook for the Quakers is not nearly so promising as the latent strength of the team would lead one to suppose at a casual glance at the lineup. They are well fortified in every department but there are lacking the team work and the comradeship which makes a consistent winner. It is a safe prediction that the Phillies as at present conducted will not cut much of a figure in the championship race.

The American League.

On paper and judging from the way its lineup now compares with that of any given competitor, the Detroit Tigers really ought to make it four straight this season. The great batting team which Jennings rules ought to make a four-time affair and shatter the records, inasmuch as it has all the others outfits befuddled one way or another. Boston's Red Sox may hit as hard as the Tigers, but will not combine the hits to equal purpose, nor can the Boston pitchers be depended on. The Chicago White Sox will outpitch and outfield the Tigers, but cannot bat against them, and thus it goes all down the line. Detroit has something on all the bunch. Given an even break of luck, therefore, what is to stop the Tigers from raking in a fourth championship and, as usual, receiving their regular belting from the National league flag winners a few days later?

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, as the English announcer had it, there is a chance that the Tigers may come a lovely cropper. The breakup, if it comes at all will probably be among the infielders, and there is quite a chance that the Detroit infield may prove a hollow shell, and then again it may not.

The Detroit pitchers are a fairly good set who won because of the great batting behind them. They are not the sort of pitchers who can gallantly carry a team on their hurling skill, the way the White Sox sinkmen have often had to do, but are men who would flounder if the batting support should ever weaken.

The Tigers have won without great catchers, instead of being piloted to victory by the backstops, as was the case with Pittsburg and Chicago. A Kling or a Gibson back of the plate for Jennings would have clinched the pennant by so huge a margin that the race would have been a joke. The Tiger catchers are only ordinary, and should they retrograde a little further the team would be in heavy seas indeed.

Jennings corralled a young catcher named Casey, who is being given a trial, and one who is alleged to be the real goods as a backstop, one of the quick thinking and quick working kind. Two or three young pitchers have been showing splendid form, and the addition of even one first-class pitcher to the Tiger team would make a big percentage of difference in its horoscope.

Taken as a general proposition, it looks like another Tiger flag, but then there's always a chance, and the American league has furnished many wonderful surprises.

Cleveland Again.

Cleveland, considered a dangerous contender for the pennant at the start of last season, again presents a strong front this year, and with Deacon James McGuire at the helm the Naps

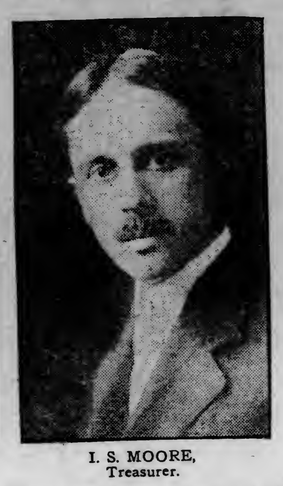
FOUR CAPTAINS AND THEIR ASSISTANTS WILL HAVE CHARGE OF THE DIFFERENT LINES OF SPORT AT THE DULUTH BOAT CLUB DURING THE COMING SUMMER

CHARLES D. BREWER, Sailing Captain.



JOHN McGREGOR, Rowing Captain.

ALBERT S. AMES, Secretary.

"DAN" MAHONEY, Club Captain.

I. S. MOORE, Treasurer.

R. W. MARSHALL, Motor Boat Captain.

W. H. KIICHLI, Field Captain

A departure somewhat original in boat clubs of the country has been inaugurated the present season by the officials of the Duluth Boat club, the biggest and most prosperous aquatic club in the Northwest.

The club has been divided into four departments, each department remaining under the controlling head of the club. Each department is conducted by its own officials, with final reference to the president and governing body of the organization.

In this manner the motor boats, rowing, field and yachting departments of the club will be conducted the present season.

Sailing will have its own committees, captain and ensigns, as will the other three departments. The sports of the four departments will be conducted so as not to conflict with each other.

The present season promises to provide much in the way of sport. There will be an open motor boat regatta some time this summer, and the weekly yachting and motor boat races. There is a busy season of tennis ahead, and the oarsmen are starting upon what promises to be a very successful year.

The organization of the four departments is the result of the growth of the club. The growth of the club has made necessary the sub-divisions of the sport departments.

It is planned to have sports every Saturday afternoon through the season, with some sport programs during the evenings.

can be counted to set a dizzy pace throughout the season. Some mighty changes have been wrought in the makeup of the club, but in Addie Joss, Cy Young, Heine Berger and Fred Falkenberg the club has the nucleus of a strong pitching staff. Little is known of the real ability of the young slabmen, although Manager McGuire touts them all comers, and the list includes Messrs. Gregg, Harkness, Mitchell, Bowyer, Linke and Doane.

"Nig" Clarke, Harry Bemis and Easterly will do the backstopping, with Higgins the outsider.

On the Nap infield many of the old guard will strive for continued good fortune, including George Stovall, the demon; Larry Lajoie, Terry Turner, Neal Ball, Bill Bradley and Perring. Ira Nicholls, the comer bagged in a deal with the Athletics, is out to make some of the warriors travel and may land a job on the Nap infield. The outfield looks mighty strong on paper, with Joe Birmingham, Elmer Flick, Lord and Krueger, the latter of Columbus, all hunting for places.

Jack O'Conner, the new manager of the St. Louis Browns, has made strong efforts to weed out some of the warhorses of former days, and O'Conner sees more than a fleeting chance at the pennant.

Powell, Pelty, Howell, Bailey and Graham represent the veteran pitchers. Bill Abstein, former Pirate, will play first base, and Stone, Hoffman and Griggs are the likely gents for the garden berths, although Demmitt, secured from the Yankees, is touted a veritable whale.

Hughey Duffy should make a good manager for Chicago, but the outfield of the White Sox is weak, the infield doubtful, while the batteries are excellent. He will have an entirely new infield, with the possible exception of Purtell, but pitchers should show up strong, but if they have the same outfield they had last year, there is only a chance that it will be weaker.

George Stallings of the New Yorks is pinning all his hopes to Lou Criger this year, and the former sparring partner of the only original Hiram Young, seventh wonder of the pitching firmament, should do a lot of yeoman work with the pitching corps. Chase, Gardner, Laporte, Knight and Austin all have been around the circuit several times as wearers of the New York uniform and will continue the fight for permanent jobs. Hemphill, Engle and "Birdie" Cree are slated to hold their jobs as outgardeners. Stallings has five catchers, eight infielders and six outfielders. Of the pitchers many are old-timers, including Doyle, Brockett, Manning, Quinn, Warhop and Hughes, while Vaughn and Glade are highly touted.

Connie Mack has announced that he will hold on to all the veteran pitchers this season, and the bunch when once under way is about the hardest staff to beat in the American league. Theodore Bender, Eddie Plank, Harry Krause, Jimmy Dygert, Cy Morgan and Jack Coombs to start with. In Friene, the youngster picked up on the coast, Mack claims to have discovered another star who will shine even more brightly than his find of last year, the eminent Mr. Krause.

In the other departments the Mack men will probably remain the same as last year, for it seems improbable that any of the newcomers can cop the positions held in 1909 by Harry Davis, Baker, Eddie Collins, Barry and Dan Murphy. Hard Hitting Danny looks to be a safe bet for rigat field work, while Oldring and Hartzel will almost hold their places.

Pat Donovan and his Boston Red Sox are bound to make things warm for their rivals this season. Pat thinks so well of his charges that he will not make any changes in the lineup of last season. All during the 1909 campaign the speed boys were in the thick of the fight, and the former manager of the Brooklyns is sure that the team will improve over last year's performances.

Jimmy McAleer, late of St. Louis and now head of the Washington troupe, announces that with Tabasco Eberfeld at the wheel the oracles of the national pastime will see something better than a basement position for the senators in 1910.

RHOADES HIT FREELY AND THE MILLERS WIN.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 16.—Minneapolis hit Rhoades freely and the former Cleveland pitcher was very wild, the locals winning 10 to 4 in a loosely played game. The weather was cold and raw. The hitting of Ferris and Williams, and Downie's remarkable fielding featured the contest. The score:

St. Paul, Minn., April 16.—St. Paul defeated Milwaukee again yesterday in a ten-inning game by a score of 8 to 7. The Saints took the lead at the start but Milwaukee forged ahead and enjoyed a good lead until the eighth when a batting rally by the locals tied the score. NAPS SLIP ANOTHER GAME OVER ON DETROIT.

Detroit, Mich., April 16.—Yesterday's game was almost a repetition of the opener, Detroit making it a tie in the ninth and Cleveland in the batting out four runs and winning in the tenth. Willett and Linke pitched fine ball, baseball luck being against the former, while Cobb alone could hit Linke, so that his passes did not count against him. Works was easy for the visitors. CROWD THRILLED BY TWO MISHAPS

Two American Records Are Also Broken on the Motor Drive.

Playa Del Rey, Cal., April 16.—Two American speedway records were broken on the motor drama here yesterday afternoon. The crowd also was thrilled by two mishaps, which barely escaped being serious.

In the ten-mile free-for-all, while leading by a good margin, the Darracq, being driven by Ben Kerscher, threw a tire. The car was making eighty miles an hour at the time. The tire rolled along the upper rim of the track for 200 feet, and then leaped the outer fence. The car swerved to one side and it was with the greatest difficulty Kerscher brought the machine to a stop without an accident. Bragg was following closely in a Fiat and missed the rolling tire by only a few inches.

In the second mile of the fifty-mile race, the Buick, driven by Nikrent broke a steering knuckle and slid off the track. Nikrent slammed on all the brakes and the car was stopped right side up. The pitch of the track prevented an accident, as it caused the car to slide toward the inside instead of shooting through the fence.

In the ten-mile stock car race, for cars of 451-600 cubic inches piston displacement, Oldfield in the Knox defeated De Palma in the Fiat in 7:22:92, which establishes a new speedway record for this class of cars.

Nikrent in a Buick established a new American speedway record in the 161-230 cubic inch class by driving ten miles in 8:40:17.

MINNY LEAGUE NOTES

The official notice of releases issued this morning shows that C. McShane, a player who has been trying out with the Milwaukee team this spring, has been unconditionally released to the Eau Claire team. Richard Moore, a third baseman who has been a candidate for Tebeau's Kansas City team, has also been released to the Eau Claire aggregation.

It is believed these two men will materially strengthen the Schoonhovenites, as they are both reported to be fast men.

In addition to these men, Schoonhoven, the benedict, has most of the best of last year's team on hand. It looks as if Eau Claire will be stronger than last season, which fact will make the team a pennant contender from the start of the season.

Superior has let loose of Dutch Vogt. The German played some fairly good baseball for drill last season, but when he asked for his release there was not much hesitation upon the part of O'Dea.

In Landry and Payne, O'Dea is of the opinion that he has two very fast men. The playing of the other candidates on the trip, especially that of Dolly Gray, has been gratifying to the Duke.

Chafee, the catcher secured from Eveleth, has been doing the bulk of the backstopping and has been doing it well. Shaeler of this city is with the squad and will relieve Chafee of some of the work.

The way Superior is defeating Class C teams upon the trip, is causing the fans across the bay to open their eyes. It is being noised around the circuits that the O'Dea team is going to be one of the hard bunches to throw the hooks of defeat into.

Kurick, a second baseman purchased from St. Louis, has joined the squad. He comes to O'Dea well recommended and should play fast baseball in class D, if he lives up to advance reports.

Anent the Koepping controversy, the following from the Superior Telegram will give a faint idea of the feeling held by the Superior fans over the fact that Koepping is not likely to play with Superior the present season:

"Kurick, the new second baseman purchased from St. Louis, is on the job and yesterday contributed a pinch hit that brought in a score. It is possible that he will beat Jim Leighty out for the second base job and may even prove to be as valuable a man as Koepping who was jockeyed out of the league by Freebooter Killian, the Minny league body-snatcher. By the way, Koepping left yesterday afternoon for his home at Elgin and unless something happens in a couple of days will journey to Watertown where he will join Bert Clapper's team. It's too bad to lose outs from this league as he was a great little drawing card, especially in Superior. As yet no official notice has been taken of the Winona yeggman by President John A. Elliott who gets $300 a year from the league for doing something or other. If the league has any money to spare it might offer a suitable reward to the person who can discover exactly what the corpulent president does to earn that $800."

Jake Schuler will not be seen with Winona the present season. He will manage the Dixon, Ill., team the present season and has been granted his release by the Winona management. Schuler is an infielder and was to have been tried out at short or third base. Killian has twenty-four men under contract. These men will report Monday and practice will start then.

Joe Safford of La Crosse is said to have the promise of two players of the Indianapolis team, as Charley Carr has a large bunch and some weeding must be done. Silent Joe has been working hard on the trail of that very difficult object, a baseball player. He has some promising candidates in sight and will have a strong team to face the barrier on league opening day.

PUTS IN HARD DAY'S WORK

Jeff Is Working Overtime for His Championship Match With Johnson.

Cramp in the Neck Bothers Big Fighter for Some Time.

Ben Lomond, Cal., April 16.—Jeffries put in the hardest work of his present training session yesterday. The afternoon's workout included boxing, rope skipping, shadow boxing, bag punching and a half hour's tug at the weights. After this he played handball with Berger.

In the second round of the boxing bout with Bob Armstrong, Jeffries rather puzzled the handful of spectators in the gymnasium by suddenly ceasing to spar after Armstrong had landed a rather stiff punch on his chin. For a moment it appeared that the colored heavyweight had dazed Jeffries, but it developed a few seconds later that the muscular cramp in the back of the neck had caught the big boxer so suddenly that he could not continue until the masseurs had rubbed the affection away. The sparring was resumed, but Jeffries did not thoroughly rid himself of the cramp until well into the third round.

Berger gave Armstrong instructions to send his punches in as hard as he could, and obeying orders he landed some smashing blows on his big adversary. When Jeffries came back for vengeance, however, the black refused to stand his ground. He was just able to go through the three rounds by dint of an extremely conservative attitude in the matter of mixing it.

Jeffries worked a trifle faster today, but is handicapped by having to keep the full power of his punches up his sleeves.

Jeffries did not regard the cramp seriously.

"I turned my head suddenly last Friday while boxing with Armstrong," he said, "and the cramp hit me then. The boys will rub it out in a few days and it won't bother me again."

The fighter's wind seemed good after his workout, which lasted an hour and three-quarters. The morning's exercise included ten miles' drill on the road and a row on the river.

A dozen telegrams from all over the country reached the training camp during the day, all conveying good wishes to the fighter on his birthday.

Word was received that Joe Choynski left Chicago yesterday and is now on his way to join Jeffries.

Enough for One Day.

Chicago, April 16.—A ten-mile run through the parks was Jack Johnson's training work today. He finished strong, but decided that the work was enough for one day.

MANY BETS ARE BEING PLACED

Huge Sums Will Change Hands on Outcome of Fight.

New York, April 16.—New York sporting men on Thursday figured that as a betting proposition the approaching fight between Jeffries and Johnson will be without an equal in the history of the sporting world. Bob Murphy, proprietor of the Hotel Albany, who was stakeholder of the forfeit money up by the fighters before it was finally delivered into the hands of Big Tim Sullivan, believes that between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 will change hands as a result of the fight.

Aside from the cash that he is already holding as a result of bets made early, Murphy has heard of a lot of big bets, and declares that he has heard many others made tentatively, the money to be posted just before the big fight.

It is remarkable that all the early betting is at even money, and New York sports are inclined to believe that the odds will not vary even on the day of the fight, unless one of the big men shows a decided lack of training. All along it has been believed that Jeffries would be as good as a 10 to 8 favorite, but there is plenty of Johnson money in sight, and Johnson's backers are willing to take all the bets offered.

ACCIDENT MADE JIMMY ARCHER GREAT CATCHER.

Jimmy Archer became a great catcher through an accident. The former Tiger and present member of Frank Chance's backstop brigade owes his success to a serious burn received several years ago. Much has been printed about the marvelous throwing ability of Archer. Jimmy can throw from a crouch position and he uses simply his forearm in making the "peg" to second or third or first. At catching runners trying to steal or runners off base, he is equally good.

Dr. William E. Keane, physician for the Detroit club, explained how Archer has acquired the ability to throw in his peculiar style.

"A few years ago," said Dr. Keane, "Freddie Payne, Charlie Schmidt and Archer were suffering from broken fingers. I treated them, and when Archer came to me I suggested having an X-ray examination.

"When Archer rolled up his sleeve I noticed a scar tissue extending from above the elbow to nearly the wrist. I asked him what had happened to him, and he explained that a few years ago he was badly burned and the scar remained.

"This scar tissue enables Archer to snap the ball to the infielder. He simply has to use his arm. The 'snap' in the tissue gives the ball the same speed that the many muscles employed by other catchers in throwing give them. No one could consistently throw the way Archer does. It would tire a man out in a short time."

THE SCANLONS IN BASEBALL

Four Brothers Are Rivals of Famous Delehanty Stars.

There is the Moore family in the boxing profession, who have made themselves famous, and the baseball fans don't forget the Delehanty family. The latest to loom up in the way of baseball families is the Scanlons. The last named family is now touted at the equal of the Delehanty family in turning out ball players. At present there are four Scanlons playing baseball.

"Doc," the Brooklyn pitcher, is well known by the baseball bugs. Then there is Frank, the left handed hurler with the Philadelphia club of the National league. There is another brother, a catcher in the Eastern league, and the latest of the Scanlons to break into the baseball business is the youngest of the family, who has been signed to pitch for the Worcester club of the New England league. He is a southpaw.

All Are College Men.

All four of the Scanlons are college men. "Doc" first broke into the limelight when pitching for Syracuse university. The other three all attended Notre Dame. Frank was the star pitcher for the Indiana university team, not losing a game in two years. The brother who goes under the name of Wilson in the Eastern league was Frank's backstop at college.

The Scanlons are strong for assuming names when playing professional baseball. Frank, after he left college, joined the Allentown team. There is a big German population in Allentown, and in order to make his players popular with the "fans" the manager always tried to get players with German names. In fact, no one can play on the Allentown team unless he responds to a "Heinie" name. When Frank Scanlon joined the Allentown team the manager informed him that he would have to give up the name of Scanlon. By the time the day rolled around for Frank to pitch his first game for Allentown, the manager had him trained to a nicety in answering the name of "Heinie Straub."

When His Real Name Was Known.

It wasn't until the Philadelphia Nationals bought Frank that any of the bugs in Pennsylvania knew his name was Scanlon. "Doc" himself once paraded under a fictitious name. It was a couple of years ago when Sunday semi-professional baseball was in the game. Those were the days when the semi-pro teams hired big leaguers to help them out when they had a hard game on.

One of the Jersey teams wanted a hard hitter one Sunday, and "Doc" was sent over under the name of Sweeney. He played center field. For nine innings neither side was able to score a run. "Doc" came to the bat four times in the nine innings and each time struck out. He came up again in the tenth with two out and electrified the few "fans" by putting the ball over the fence.

ROMPS HOME EASY WINNER

John W. Scherer's Gretna Takes Carter Handicap in Easy Fashion.

Race Opens Track Season in the East---Crowd Was Disappointing.

New York, April 16.—John W. Scherer's Gretna, carrying No. 13 in a race of thirteen starters, romped home an easy winner yesterday in the fifteenth running of the Carter handicap, beating James F. Gaffney's Alfred Noble by nearly two lengths. M. L. Schwartz's Far West was third.

The victory was a surprise to the experts, most of whom had picked B. Schreiber's Jack Atkin as a sure winner, but the Schreiber entry had the double handicap of a bad start and top weight.

The race marked the opening of the racing season in the East, but, contrary to expectations, it was attended by a much smaller crowd, than has graced similar occasions in the past.

Pencilled odds on racing cards were more or less surreptiously displayed.

McCRONE MAY PLAY WITH DULUTH TEAM.

There is the possible chance that Merry McCrone may be seen in a Duluth uniform the present season. The former White Sox player has refused to report to Monmouth, Ill., the team managed by Lew Drill, former manager of the Superior team. It is reported today that there is a chance that Kuehnow may be offered the player.

Chattanooga has Lister for first base and cannot use McCrone. If Monmouth cannot prevail upon McCrone to join the team, he may be turned over to come other team. There is that chance that he may land in Duluth.

Mr. Kuehnow stated today that he would be glad to get McCrone, should the terms of the player's return be fair.

How to Make a Handy Receptacle.

No one can say that a soiled clothes bag is a thing of beauty and a joy forever: indeed, it is a most unsightly thing and inconvenient in the extreme, and if hanging in a closet or behind a door (places to which it is usually assigned), it is hard to get into and harder to get out of. And as baskets made for holding soiled clothes come pretty high in price, few girls and boys can afford to have them in their dressing-rooms. Here is a good substitute for the basket, and one which will do away with the inconvenient bag. Take a good-sized box—a cracker or soap box will do—and join the lid to the body of the box by means of small hinges. Line the box and lid with paper, any color that you like. Cover the outside with chintz or cretonne, using bright-headed tacks to hold it in place. The lid might be padded to make a seat, and a cotton fringe, harmonizing in color with the covering, put on as a border. Tassels at the four corners add to the appearance of the receptacle. Such a box does not look badly at the foot of one's bed or under the window. In fact, it has the appearance of a neat piece of furniture.

Lucky Cave -- A Story of Two Lost Children.

BY MAUD WALKER.

SALLY, Paul and Steve started out on an exploring expedition one morning in the latter part of April. The weather was fine, and as the three walked briskly along the broad country road their spirits were buoyant, and they were full of eager anticipation. The surrounding country was new to them, for they had just arrived at the little village three days before, having come from their home in an Eastern state far, far away. The trip to this Western state was one of pleasure for the children, and they were visiting in the home of relatives who had cordially invited them to come and spend the remainder of the spring with them, and to stay on throughout the summer if their Western country village proved interesting enough to keep them.

On the morning of which I write Sally and Paul had decided to take a long walk into the country, but were in doubt about taking Steve, the youngest of the three, and a delicate little chap; but he had begged so hard to go, that they had consented to let him bear them company. And their aunt—a Western woman fully alive to the pleasures of the country—agreed that a forenoon spent in the mountains would prove not only beneficial to them, but would afford them keenest enjoyment. And she directed them on their way to the most delightful spots, naming places on the mountain side about three miles distant from town. "You'll find a spring of the purest water trickling from between great boulders," she told them. "And there is a natural stone bench—we natives call it the rock couch—where you may sit and eat your luncheon. And your appetites will be in fine condition, too, after your three miles' walk."

And so the three children trudged along, as full of strange imaginings as it is possible for city children in the Far West to be. They even fancied bears or lions coming out of lairs to look at them menacingly. But, of course, they knew no such animals now existed in that part of the world, but it lent excitement to their "expedition" to fancy such encounters.

After having walked about a mile from town they reached the foot of the mountain they were to ascend. At the base stretched a pretty, little farm, where they stopped to rest and to beg a drink of water. The farmer's wife, a wholesome woman with a cheery smile, invited them to come in and rest a bit in her cozy sitting-room, and instead of water she gave them buttermilk to drink—fresh and cold. Then, as she chatted with them of her home, a robust little boy, about Steve's own age, came running in. He had been in the garden with his father when the children stopped at the gate, and seeing them, had left off his work to come in and get acquainted with the stranger. It took less than five minutes for this little chap (named Tom) and Steve to become very well acquainted, and when at last Paul said they must go up, or across to the westwards? It looks pretty interesting to the westward. See all those rugged points and boulders standing out against the sky?"

"Yes, let's go in that direction," agreed his sister. "I love adventure, and that looks as though it might be full of wildness. Let's go that way." And Sally pointed toward the west where loomed great crags and boulders, giving to the side of the mountain a most formidable appearance. "Above us seems to be all timber and rather even ground."

So they turned their steps westward, and soon were lost in the beauty of the landscape. But while they were still aimlessly wandering about a heavy fog gathered and they were unable to see more than a few hundred feet around them. But they were not afraid, for Paul declared he knew the way by which they had come and that they would at once retrace their steps homeward.

"Oh, it will be a great pleasure to have him with us," declared Mrs. Hunter. "He and Tom will have such a day, and maybe he'll want to remain over night with us. If so, we will have plenty of room—bed and table—for him, and I assure you nothing in the world could make Tom happier than to have his new-found friend."

Paul and Sally thanked Mrs. Hunter for her cordiality and told Steve to make no trouble for his hostess. Then, saying good-by for a few hours, they went on their way. They found the spring of pure sweet water, and sat on the "rock couch" to eat their luncheon of bread and butter, hard-boiled eggs, cold meat and cookies. They had supplied themselves with a tin cup from which to drink spring water, and the meal was a most enjoyable one.

After luncheon Paul looked at his watch. "It's just half-past twelve," he said. "We've got an hour or more to spare exploring the mountain before returning to the farm for Steve. Shall we go up, or across to the westwards? It looks pretty interesting to the westward. See all those rugged points and boulders standing out against the sky?"

"Yes, let's go in that direction," agreed his sister. "I love adventure, and that looks as though it might be full of wildness. Let's go that way." And Sally pointed toward the west where loomed great crags and boulders, giving to the side of the mountain a most formidable appearance. "Above us seems to be all timber and rather even ground."

So they turned their steps westward, and soon were lost in the beauty of the landscape. But while they were still aimlessly wandering about a heavy fog gathered and they were unable to see more than a few hundred feet around them. But they were not afraid, for Paul declared he knew the way by which they had come and that they would at once retrace their steps homeward.

Sally consented, and they resumed their walk. After a few minutes they came to a broad level spot, and suddenly to the mouth of a cave. Paul entered first, for the door was low and narrow. But he soon put out his head and told Sally to come in. She did so, and was astonished to see a fine interior. Paul always carried matches in his pocket, and by the light of some of them they were able to examine their new-found shelter. Near the door—or cave's opening—there was a pile of ashes, showing that campers had inhabited the place recently. And in a corner was a pile of straw, possibly to be used as a bed, if covered with blankets. And against the wall near to the entrance stood a door shutter made of rough boards which could be fitted into the opening, while iron hooks, that were bored into the cave's sides, could be turned over the shutter's edges so as to make it secure from outside intruders.

"Say, here's a dandy fine place," declared Paul. "Suppose I gather some wood and make a blaze. We can't stay here in the dark, and my matches won't last long. So I'll make a fire."

But Sally insisted on going with him to gather the wood, for she feared he might wander away from the cave and lose his way. "It's better to be lost together," she declared. Soon they had a nice bonfire just outside the cave's entrance and the light spread to the interior of the cave. And there they sat—on the straw—waiting for the fog to disappear. But the time dragged on and on, and soon it was 4 o'clock by Paul's watch. And the fog was still as heavy as a fog could be in that part of the world. The children were becoming quite restless and uneasy, when they were made happy by a loud call: "Hello! Hello!"

Paul replied in a lusty voice: "Hel—lo! Hel—lo! We are at the cave!"

Within a few minutes Mr. Hunter and Tom appeared on foot, and you may better believe Sally and Paul were most happy to see them. Mr. Hunter explained that he had seen the fog gathering on the mountain, and feared Paul and Sally would get lost, so he decided to come in search of them. "I first found the spring—a mile down the mountain from here—and as you were not there, I supposed you had come to visit Lucky Cave. And here we found you—safe and sound. You see, my boy is a mountain climber, and insisted on accompanying me. But we wouldn't fetch your little chap along. He's too delicate."

Then the four descended the mountain and by supper time had reached the frame house, where Mrs. Hunter had a fine, hot meal on the table. And Steve was most happy to see his sister and brother again, after their wonderful adventure on the mountain in a fogsterm. And during the meal Mr. Hunter told of how the cave had been named "Lucky Cave" by some travelers who were overtaken on the mountain by a snowstorm, and who had lived for several days in the cave. They had afterwards carried straw to the cave and made a rude door, so that other travelers lost on the mountain might find a safe shelter.

After supper Mr. Hunter hitched up his horses to a buggy and took the three children home, and they all counted the day one of the most enjoyable they had ever had, even though two of them had been lost on the mountain side for a few hours.

PETER PAID.

NAUGHTY Peter Pifer
A pint of cherries ate;
And it was just at bedtime,
Which meant 'twas very late.

And in the night his stomach
Began to pain him so
That out of bed he tumbled
And quickly ran below.

He found his mother sitting
And reading by the lamp;
"Oh, Ma!" he cried so loudly,
"I've got an awful cramp!"

His mother asked him questions,
And when the truth she got,
For little Peter Pifer
She made it pretty hot.

She had told him in the evening
That no cherries should he eat;
And now she found the rascal
Was practicing deceit.

So while his stomach pained him
She used her slipper well;
And after she had finished
Pete did not feel so well.

SPRING FURNISHINGS for my LITTLE LADIES' ROOM

EVERY young girl loves to dress her own room or "den" in a new spring frock, but so few can do so without a considerable outlay of money.

Now, one may fit out one's room prettily, even artistically, at a very small expense. I give a few suggestions here which came to me from observations made in the home of a clever young girl of great ingenuity. This young girl's room was in the top of the house, so to speak, being a big, sunny, attic room directly under the roof and containing three dormer windows. When the spring came, with its warmth, she decided to remove the heavy furnishings from her apartment and dress it in a new summer frock. The couch was upholstered in green velvet, so over this she put a chintz cover with a deep, cream ground, dashed with sprays of pink roses and green vines. About the bottom of the cover's valance was a border of green sateen, and the seams were corded with the same. Pillows of green sateen and light-brown linen, all ruffled with the chintz, were piled on the couch in a "comfy" and inviting-to-nap manner. Over the dressing-table mirror were draped dainty white Swiss curtains, held in place by green ribbon bows. Of course, the green of the cushions and ribbons harmonized with the green leaves on the chintz couch cover. Window curtains were of white Swiss and tied back from the sash by green ribbons. In each window she had a fern box filled with "living green," as she called her spring flowers. A broad seat reached below each window and was covered with chintz to correspond with the couch cover. The little wooden rockers were painted green and had white linen headrests on them. A deep wicker chair was given a coat of the same fresh green and was supplied with a cushion like those on the couch. The bed was in refreshing white. The large center rug, which had almost covered the floor, was taken up and stored for the summer, and cool matting rugs were spread in front of bed, couch and dressing table. The book shelves had a curtain of soft-green silk, which protected the books from dust. A green-shaded library lamp stood on the plain little study table, which had also been painted green. The pictures on the walls were few, but choice, and over all the frames the little mistress of the "den" put a coating of gilding. Prior to her spring dressing the frames had been of various kinds, thus marring the harmony of the room.

After she had completed her room, not a more restful place in all the big house could be found. There was an absence of flags and prints of common kind about the walls, and not too many photographs graced table and top of bookshelves. Order, harmony and freshness were the three things striven for by the young mistress, and she accomplished her aim. Everyone who entered her room said, "How sweet and peaceful!" There was none of that "artistic disorder" so often displayed by young folks in their private apartments; no disquieting confusion to set one's nerves on edge. The soft coloring, the sweet simplicity, the absence of everything not essential to one's comfort, made the place a spot to be sought out and rested in. And the little mistress had achieved the effect at very small cost. I almost forgot to say that the walls of the rooms were tinted a rich cream to the picture molding, above which a border of green grasses and pink blossoms reached to the white ceiling.

OUR PUZZLE CORNER

CHARADE.

My first is that
Which is never old;
The sort of things
That at shops are sold.
My second is something
Discovered, you see;
It may be a purse,
It may be a tree.
My third is not water,
Though with water 'twill mix;
And some of it baked
Will turn into bricks;
My whole is the name
Of a country near by;
And you'll solve it, I'm sure,
If you will but try.

AN OLD-TIME SONG.

BEHEADINGS.

1. Doubly behead to drag one's speech in odd fashion and leave an implement used by a shoemaker.

2. Behead the pretty language of a little child and leave a baby's toy.

3. Behead a vapor rising from hot water and leave a pair of work-horses.

4. Behead a national banner and leave to loiter in a lazy manner.

This zigzag contains seven words of four letters each. If the words are rightly guessed and written one below another their zigzag letters, beginning with the upper left-hand letter and ending with the lower left-hand letter, will spell something used for illumination. The crosswords are: 1. A fastening. 2. To despise. 3. Part of a chain. 4 Where hay is stored. 5. Part of a foot. 6. Vases. 7. To be tidy.

HARRY AND HIS ELEPHANT.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

HARRY and his sister Mary were playing in the yard when their mamma called to them: "Come, my dears, I have something to tell you which will highly please you."

"All right, mamma," replied Harry. "We're coming, mamma dear," added Mary. Then both flew to their mamma, who was in the big, comfortable sitting-room with the sunshine all around her, for she was beside the great bay window which allowed old Sol to fill the room.

"What is it, mamma?" asked Harry anxiously.

"It's the circus," explained their mamma. "It is coming to town next week and if you and Mary are the very best children—why, papa and I will take you to it."

"Oh, won't that be great sport?" cried Harry. "We'll get to see the elephant, won't we?" And he jumped about in great glee.

"Oh, won't we have the greatest time?" said Mary. "I just love to watch the funny little monkeys. They play so many queer tricks."

Then they all fell to discussing the coming circus and menagerie. Mamma read to them all about it and they enjoyed the pleasure of anticipation as much as though they were already at the circus. "We'll go to the parade in the morning and then home for luncheon; and then we'll go to the circus and menagerie in the afternoon and have the greatest time all day long, won't we?" And Harry was all enthusiasm. And no less interested was little Mary, though she was not so loud a talker.

So the days went on and the morning of the circus parade arrived. Harry and Mary were up with the dawn and out in the yard, watching and listening. They knew the circus would not come to their door, nor would it parade before 10 o'clock. But they hoped they might hear the lion's roar or the band playing. Their home was in a Southern state, where the summer had already set in, and though it was the middle of April, the morning was glorious and warm.

After breakfast the children's mamma dressed them in their very best clothes and they all started uptown where—on the business street of the town —they would stand to see the parade. But their papa was waiting for them with good news. "Mr. Jackson has invited us to occupy a window in his office," he explained. "Won't that be splendid? We can sit on chairs beside the open window and look down on the street, and see the entire parade without the discomfort of being in the crushing crowd."

"Is Mr. Jackson's office on the second floor, papa?" asked Harry, his cheeks aglow from excitement.

"Yes, over Mr. Jones' store, you know. We'll have a fine view from there, son."

Then Harry and Mary ran ahead of their parents and were soon in Mr. Jackson's law office, which was situated a story above the pavement, and there they found Mr. and Mrs. Jackson already seated beside a window, their little five-year-old girl, Tottie, running about in great glee. So Harry, 9 years old, and Mary, 7 years old, joined Tottie in a romp up and down the hall outside the office till their papa and mamma came up the stairs. Then all went into the office and got their places beside the window, so that when the parade came along they'd be ready to enjoy it.

"We've got half an hour to wait," said Mr. Jackson, looking at his watch. "I guess it will seem hours to the youngsters. Fact is, my wife and I had to come down early to satisfy Tottie. She was in such a stew of excitement, fearing the circus might go on without her."

Here Harry's and Mary's parents laughed and Harry laughed a little, too. He felt quite a man, in his superior years. Tottie was a mere babe compared with him!

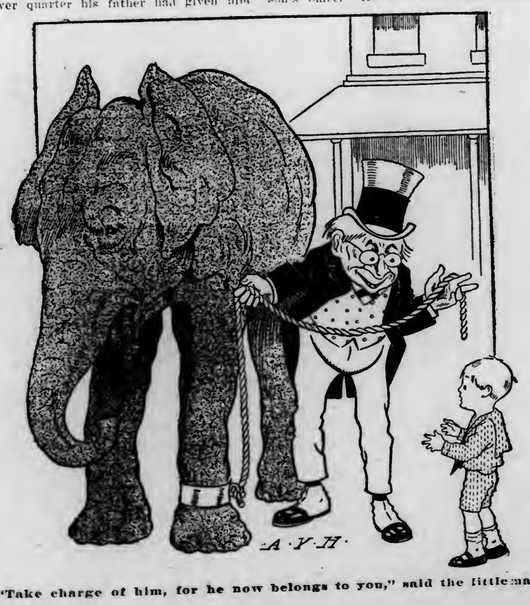
But as the four grown-ups talked, Harry and Mary and Tottie began to get restless, and Harry found his eyelids drooping, for he had gotten out of bed an hour earlier that morning than was his habit. A big deep sofa was in the corner, near to the window where he and Mary were seated with their parents, and he slipped off his chair and stretched himself on this convenient couch. If they had half an hour to wait, he might steal a bit of sleep, and that would refresh him for the day. But hardly had he closed his eyes when a strange thing occurred. He heard a commotion in the room, and opening his eyes, beheld a funny little man—evidently one of the head men of the circus—standing in the doorway, bowing to his parents and to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson. The four people in the room respectfully bowed to the stranger, and Mr. Jackson asked him to come in. The dapper little man bounced in like a rubber ball, and sat on the edge of a chair. "Now, my good people," he began in a squeeky voice, "I have an elephant for sale. And I surmise, there is some one in this room who will be glad to purchase him from me." Then the little man bowed again, all around the room, and resumed: "I will sell him dirt cheap, too."

Harry sat up, all sleep gone from his eyes. "Ah," he said, bowing low to the queer little man, "what do you want for your elephant? I should love to own one, and—and—" And Harry looked at his father hopefully—"and maybe papa will buy this one for me—if he really is dirt cheap."

"Well, my fine young fellow," smiled the dapper little man, "I will sell my elephant for $12.25."

"Oh, I have the 25 cents," cried Harry. "Papa gave it to me this morning to buy lemonade and peanuts this afternoon at your circus. And I guess papa will add the $12. Won't you papa?"

"Certainly, son," promised papa, taking his purse from his pocket. "Here are $12." And he handed Harry the amount. Harry, as supremely happy as any boy about to possess an elephant could be, went down into his pocket and got the silver quarter his father had given him that morning. Then he placed the whole amount in the hands of the little circus man, and the deal was made. He owned an elephant.



"Now, come right down stairs and get your property," said the little man, beckoning to Harry. Harry arose and followed the circus man to the street, and there, standing as high as the first story of the building, was an elephant with a huge trunk swinging menacingly about him.

"Take charge of him, for he now belongs to you," said the little man, tossing to Harry one end of a thick rope, the other end being attached to a chain about the elephant's leg. Harry grasped the rope, but as he did so, a curious feeling of uncertainty took possession of him. Where should he lead this mighty beast? And after leading him, where would he find a house big enough to hold him? And—what should he feed him? Ah, now he understood the mistake he had made. He had burdened himself with an elephant, and had no place to keep him! As he stood pondering, the elephant threw out his trunk and caught Harry about the body and lifted him high in the air. Oh, how he squeezed him, almost taking away his breath! Harry gave a loud cry for help, but as he did so, the elephant let loose of him and he fell headlong to the pavement. But just as he was about to land on his head, he was suddenly shaken by a human hand, and the next moment his sister's voice called into his ear: "Wake up, Harry! The p'rade is comin'. We can hear the band! Listen!"

Then it was that Harry found himself on the sofa in the corner of Mr. Jackson's office. He had been fast asleep, dreaming that he owned an elephant! And as he rose to run to the window he felt a load of responsibility drop from his shoulders, for he did not own the elephant! And—he thrust his hand deep into his pocket—he still had his quarter! Ah, he and Mary would have peanuts and lemonade in the afternoon and such other lots of fun! And there was no use worrying over a huge beast—since he no longer owned him. Ah, how happy he was!

And not till after the circus that evening did Harry have time to tell of his dream, and how his mamma and papa and little Mary did laugh when they heard it! "Oh, it would have been lovely, Harry, to own an elephant!" declared Mary. "We'd have ridden him all the time."

"Yes, that's the way it may seem to you," said Harry knowingly, "but once you own an elephant—well, your first thought is how can you rid yourself of him. No, I wouldn't have one as a gift." And Harry and Mary fell to discussing the troubles of a circus man who owns so many kinds of wild beasts. "It must be a great deal of trouble," said Harry, "for owning an elephant just a few minutes gave me all sorts of worry. No, thank you, my friends, I don't want an elephant—not even a toy one, for it might come to life, you know."

"Take charge of him, for he now belongs to you," said the little man.

A Zoological Puzzle.

ITALIAN zoologists have a puzzle to solve owing to the discovery on Mont Blanc of the body of a white bear, which has been taken to Aosta. It was thought at first that the bear must have died some 800 years ago and must have been preserved by the ice, since it has always been held that white bears vanished from the Alps three centuries ago. But it has since been demonstrated that death could only have taken place a few days previous to discovery. As this would seem to show that there are still white bears in the Alps, expeditions are to be sent to test the theory.

OH, LOOK! HERE ARE OUR CONGRESSIONAL SCHOLARS!

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Strange as it May Seem, There Are Some Most Scholarly Men in Both Branches of the Present Congress, and One of the Most Scholarly is a Man Who Has Been Blind for Twenty Years, Senator Gore of Oklahoma---Senator Borah of Idaho an Erudite Man Who Does Not Look the Part---Representative Boutell of Illinois Made a Scholar by His Father---Choice Libraries and Rare Editions Owned by Various Senators and Representatives---Favorite Authors and Books.

Written for the Herald by E. J. Edwards ("Holland").

(Copyright, 1910, by E. J. Edwards.)

WE AMERICANS do not, as a rule, associate politics with scholarly attainments—far from it. We are peculiarly prone to regard the politician as a person considerably below the average in human intelligence, but as a master in the art of trickery and hypocrisy. As a matter of fact, the politician who gets to the top of the ladder is very often a man not only of more than ordinary ability, but also a cultured scholar.

This fact can be easily authenticated by a study of the congress of the United States. Not every man in the house of representatives or in the senate will measure up to this high standard, but the fact remains that in no similar body, numerically speaking, in the country, can such a goodly number of real scholars be found.

There are many men in both houses who have written books which are admitted authorities in the realms of history, biography, finance and sociology. There are senators and representatives who still read their Greek and Latin texts for pleasure as well as profit. Some of the largest private libraries in the United States, consisting almost wholly of the standard classics, are owned by them. It is no exaggeration to say that many of the men in congress who are prominent in the field of national politics are equally at home in a social circle composed of men who make it their life work to study and to distribute knowledge.

The Blind Scholar of the Senate.

But if you are more or less surprised to learn that there are so many profound scholars in congress, how great will be your surprise to learn that one of the most noted of them is a man who has been stone blind for twenty years—Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma?

Senator Gore has the power of concentration to the utmost, and therein lies the secret of his scholarship. It has been said of him that when he was only 16 years of age he could repeat any ordinary speech after hearing it read twice. Since his marriage his wife has read to him volume after volume, and in this way he has mastered them all. Hardly a day passes that he does not master a good portion of some standard work, the reading of which helps to promote scholarly learning. Before he went to Washington Mr. Gore had a library of 600 volumes in his Oklahoma home, and he could find any book in it merely by touching it with his hand. A book out of place on the shelves he would detect in an instant.

What he hears and what is read to him in the day time he turns over in his mind after he goes to bed at night. It is at that time also that he practices his speeches to the senate.

During the tariff session of congress last summer Mrs. Gore was awakened one morning at 4 o'clock by hearing the sound of her husband's voice.

"Going after them again, Tom?" she inquired.

"Yes," replied her husband, quietly, resuming his speech.

Because of this night habit, the senator is known as a man who never forgets anything. During the tariff session he astounded the senate on a number of occasions by quoting facts and figures with relation to the profits of New England cotton manufacturers with such accuracy that his Republican opponents were never able to dispute a single assertion he made. On one occasion he took up seriatim a dozen firms by name, giving their capital stock, their surplus, their earnings, the par value of their stock, and much other data about them. No man with a good pair of eyes would ever have trusted his memory with such a series of facts under such circumstances.

During the sessions of congress, this blind scholar devotes practically all of his spare time to reading up on economic subjects, with especial reference to the tariff and finance. In his leisure moments, he prefers Macaulay and Tom Paine, among the prose writers, and in economics he reads much of the works of J. E. T. Rogers. His favorite poet is, of course, Shakespeare, but the senator himself admits that he reads more of Byron than of the great English bard.

Another Southern senator who for purposes of reading, is practically blind, and yet a most scholarly man, is Senator Hernando De Soto Money, minority leader of the senate. Until a few years ago, senator Money enjoyed the use of his eyes, but of recent years he has been unable to use them for reading purposes. Nevertheless, he had already become and is still recognized as one of the learned men of the senate, and his knowledge was largely attained from books.

Until within the last few years, Senator Money owned one of the largest private libraries possessed by any congressman. Part of it he kept in Mississippi, and part in Washington, the latter collection being burned up when the home of his secretary was destroyed by fire last spring. Since he has been unable to read for himself, the senator has begun the distribution of the remainder of his library among his children and grandchildren, each of whom has been made acquainted by him with their good parts.

Senator Money's own particular penchant has been for history, and it is said of him that he has read all history six or seven times over. He is particularly familiar with the history of the West and Southwest, and to a few of his intimates, has outlined offhand the original sources of much of the contents of Former President Roosevelt's "Winning of the West." Nowadays, Senator Money drafts everybody in his immediate vicinity to read to him and it is understood that he really reads more now than ever before. He is serving his last term in the senate and will retire on March 4, 1911. His election as minority leader of the senate, despite his physical incapacity, was a recognition by his Democratic colleagues of the fact that no more able leader or scholarly man could be found among them to conduct their affairs.

Champ Clark, Omnivorous Reader.

Representative Champ Clark of Missouri, the minority leader in the house, who, in all probality, will be elected speaker if the Democrats carry the next congressional election, is one of the most omnivorous readers in either house of congress. Incidentally, his wide reading has made him one of the most scholarly orators of congress, and his learning, coupled with a fund of wit and humor, has won him recognition as one of the most entertaining speakers. This fact has created a tremendous demand for him as a lecturer, and Mr. Clark usually passes the recess of congress on the lecture platform.

Mr. Clark's scholarly attainments brought him into the limelight early in life. By the time he was 23 years of age, he had graduated from Kentucky university, Bethany college and the Cincinnati Law school, and was elected president of Marshall college, West Virginia, where he served one year. For twenty-two years, Mr. Clark held the record of being the youngest college president in the United States.

Mr. Clark uses his favorite authors frequently in his speeches. In fact, he has rarely ever been known to make a speech of any considerable length on any subject which was not frequently interspersed with quotations from the classics. In the repartee of congressional debate, he has scored some of his heaviest hits by a direct quotation or a paraphrase from some noted writer of a bygone age. He is particularly prone to quote from the proverbs of King Solomon, who he names along with St. Paul, Lord Bacon and Macaulay as his favorite authors.

"I never go off on a trip," says Mr. Clark, "without packing a copy of Lord Bacon's essays in my valise. I suppose I have read his essays over and over again, and I never get tired of them. I have recently got track of an early edition of Bacon and hope to buy it soon. If I can get my hands on it, it will be among my most priceless possessions." He is one of those statesmen who does not let the weight of legislative responsibility put a stop to his reading of the classics. A great literary work is a rest always to his tired brain.

In appearance, Mr. Clark suggests the old Roman senators. His hair pure white, the dome of his head full and round, his jaw square and his face smooth. He is six feet in height and his body is built in proportion. To look at him and to hear him quote from the classics one naturally turns his mind back to the forum at Rome and thinks to himself how much better Mr. Clark would look clad in the old Roman toga, rather than in the more civilized demands of fashion of the present day.

Senators Who Read Early and Late.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts is one of the few members of congress who needs no especial introduction to the country at large as a man of cultivated, scholarly attainments. He has written a small library himself, mostly upon historical and geographical subjects, and the evidence of his wide reading is forthcoming in a compilation of the world's best classics which contains quotations from the standard literature of the world, most of which was picked out by the senator himself as a result of his studious and scholarly endeavors to find the best recorded expressions of thought of men.

Senator Lodge is an insatiable reader. The last act of his day, as well as his first act of the next day, is to read a book. He rarely retires until an hour or two after midnight, after having passed anywhere from two to five hours scanning the pages of a book. He has one of the largest private libraries owned by any member of congress, and has long made a specialty of rare books and first editions of standard French works in the original, which he reads like a native.

Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio also ranks among the finished scholars in public life. Perhaps the fact that Senator Burton is a bachelor and has no responsibilities of home life to attract his attention, has made of him a most voracious reader. He has read nearly all of the standard authors, both in prose and poetry, and is particularly fond of the works of Herbert Spencer, Macauley, Emerson and Hawthorne. Like Senator Lodge, he rarely ever retires until long after midnight, and even when he returns from a late dinner it is his practice to sit down and read several hours before he goes to bed.

Senator Burton reads much French literature in the original, and has not forgotten his Greek and Latin which, when younger, he imparted to students at Oberlin college, where he was a tutor. In fact, his knowledge of Latin led to one of the most amusing incidents of the senator's career when he was a candidate for mayor of Cleveland a few years ago.

In the course of his speech of acceptance of the Republican nomination Mr. Burton made use of the Latin sentence: "Jacta est alea," which translated means: "The die is cast." The Democratic campaign orators promptly seized upon this quotation and made the most of it. One of them complained that Senator Burton had always played fair with the people of Cleveland theretofore, but that now he was in the midst of a campaign for office in which vital issues to all the citizens were involved, he was using words to express his position which no one could understand. Finally, somebody asked Mayor Johnson, Mr. Burton's opponent, what the Latin quotation meant.

"I do not know," replied the mayor, "but presume it means something like 'let 'er go Gallagher.'"

Senator Burton has a large private library scattered between Washington and Cleveland, and many of his volumes are stored with historical societies at the latter place. He is fond of Dumas, Daudet and Balzac, and other French authors, and regards the "Numa Rumistan" of Daudet as one of the best political novels ever written. Incidentally, Senator Burton has written a life of John Sherman and various books and pamphlets which are authorities among students of finance.

A Young Scholar of the House.

Representative Swager Sherley of Kentucky, who is one of the younger members of the house, is also one of the most scholarly. From early boyhood, Mr. Sherley has been a cripple, and many years of his life were passed in bed as an invalid. By the time he was 17 years old, he had already perused most of the classics and standard works, both in prose and poetry. Since that time, he has delved into heavy works in science, law and history. Huxley, Herbert Spencer and Darwin have been read by him with growing interest as the years go by, while Scott, Thackeray, Dickens, Shakespeare, Byron, Keats, Moore, Wordsworth, Browning, Stevenson and Emerson are all close friends of his leisure hours. When tired out, Mr. Sherley turns to Kipling for light reading.

"Spencer once said that 'the remote effects of legislation are greater than the immediate effects,'" said Mr. Sherley the other day. "This suggestion has always remained in my mind since I came to congress. As an illustration of this precept, Spencer said that if a piece of metal got out of plane, an amateur would always try to straighten it out by hitting it with a hammer where it bulged most, with the result that a hundred other bumps arose all over the plate. So it is with legislation. Congress is prone to pick out the highest bump and hit it as hard as possible, instead of taking a hundred little taps here and there which, in the long run, would be far more efficacious. That is one reason why we are always legislating ourselves to death."

A Scholar Who Does Not Look the Part.

A person meeting Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, on the street would never take that mild mannered man, dressed in a common, ordinary business suit and a soft slouch hat, to be the scholarly gem that he is. Yet there is little in worth-while literature that Mr. Borah has not read, and his library is composed of practically all of the standard works in the finest bindings he can buy.

"Next to my family and my life, my library is the most valuable of my possessions," said Senator Borah. And he added: "If a man will school himself that he can walk into his library and ther find solace from the worries of the day, he will live twenty years longer."

In the senator's library will be found three sets of Shakespeare, edited by the best authorities on the great English bard; Voltaire, Bacon, Milton, Aeschylus, Euripides, the orations of Demosthenes and Cicero, all of the standard novels, all the works of American prose and poetry writers of moment, and all the authorities on history and geography. He has read Shakespeare over and over again and, until his duties as a legislator became almost overwhelming, could quote the first two or three books of Milton's "Paradise Lost" and practically all of Scott's "Lady of the Lake" verbatim.

Two books Senator Borah always keeps together within reach. They are the Bible and John Marshal's decisions on constitutional law, which he has gathered together and had bound in one volume. Mr. Borah regards the St. James translation of the Bible as without a peer in style among all works in the English language. Marshall's decisions he has read through at least once a year ever since he was admitted to the bar, and he holds them to be the finest bit of unanswerable and remorseless logic ever written. Until he got out of practice in very recent years he could read his Latin and Greek texts readily.

If the senator has any fad, it is for works on theology. No matter how abstruse, he never has to school himself to read the most powerful sermon or treatise on the didactic side of theology. Many of his best literary friends have been ministers, and his father's profound knowledge of theological subjects has had much to do with this unusual bent of mind in a man who never entertained an ambition to enter the ministry.

An Erudite Man From Texas.

As a debater in congress, Senator Borah, for the logic of his arguments, easily takes rank with Senator Baile of Texas, whose ability to quote from the masterpieces of legal literature is one of his best achievements.

Senator Bailey is most familiar with American history, although he has read with profound interest and value to himself the many histories of England and Rome. Political history, especially, is his fad, if it can be called that, and he is a firm believer in the theory that one gains more from reading the biographies of the makers of history rather than the histories themselves.

Acting on this principle, the senator has studied Rome, England and the United States by literally familiarizing himself with the lives of the great men who made each or who have played an important part in the drama of the making; he has analyzed their speeches by the environments from which they rode to eminence and by environment of their great contemporaries, and he has reached his own conclusions as to the whys and wherefores of history. There is no doubt that the great reasoning power of which the senator is possessed has been nurtured and cultivated by this self-imposed task of schooling, and it is eminently correct to say that where the senator differs from other recognized authorities on any issue of history he is as well able as they to give his reasons therefor.

Senator Bailey possesses, as befits his high scholarly attainments, a well assorted library, particularly along the line of his favorite paths of research. It is only when he finds himself in the depths of a long mental strain that he turns to lighter forms of literature, which is rare.

Representative Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, who last spring declined the presidency of Dartmouth college, his alma mater, is a devotee of the classics. His large library contains only "well seasoned" books. Practically all of the standard works of history and fiction are there. Mr. McCall is particularly fond of both, and also reads much of Burke, Milton, Shakespeare and Macaulay. Thiers' Consulate and Empire is also another favorite of his. Next to Shakespeare and Milton, he likes Wordsworth among the English speaking poets.

Perhaps no other man in congress reads as much in Latin as does Mr. McCall. His traveling companion wherever he goes is a volume of Virgil, and his volume of Horace is one of the finest editions to be found in any library, private or public. Likewise, Mr. McCall can still read his Greek, although he is not quite so proficient in it as in Latin. He regards Homer's Odyssey as one of the greatest succession of stories ever written in any language, and delights to delve in it at odd moments.

In college Mr. McCall always stood high in his classes, and he looks back on this record with a great deal of satisfaction. Incidentally, the Massachusetts statesman bemoans that trend of public sentiment which would do away with a classical education for the young of the present generation. He ascribes it to the fact that this is a money-making age, in which the old and young alike are rendered restless when they see on all sides the friends of their boyhood or girlhood making money without college education. Eventually, Mr. McCall believes, the average American will return to the classics with more vigor than ever before, and that the rejuvenation of classical learning in the United States will be one of momentous importance in the future of the republic. Mr. McCall is no theorizer on this subject. He loves the classics for the knowledge they contain and the perfection of them, and he believes they train the mind in the direction of a better citizenship.

A Scholar Who Was Trained by His Father.

Representative Henry Sherman Boutell of Illinois, who is known as an ideal statesman among his colleagues, ascribes his scholarly accomplishments to his father, who, he says, was his teacher.

"When I was a small boy," said Mr. Boutell, "my father, who was about the only Milton scholar I ever knew, took me in hand and put me through a course of sprouts in my reading. His four favorite books were the Bible and the works of Milton, Burke and Shakespeare. For a man who reads much, it is not an easy matter to pick out a favorite author, especitlly when one has need of so many of them in the course of his daily work. I suppose the choice of my father, which was inculcated into me as a boy, still remains my choice.

"However, when one is forced to get away from literature into the realm of things material, there is no doubt in my mind that the works of Alexander Hamilton are superior to those of any other writer in point of suggestiveness on political questions. I find I can make more use of Hamilton in my legislative work than of any other writer."

Mr. Boutell is a constant reader. When pressed by legislative matter, he naturally devotes his leisure time to reading books and papers relating to the subject at hand, but in his leisure moments, particularly when congress is not in session, he returns to the study of genuine literature. Occasionally, he takes a trip to Europe, where his son, until recently, was secretary in various legations. While abroad, Mr. Boutell always makes use of the great libraries of foreign capitals and delights to recount to his intimate friends the literary discoveries he has made on the trip.

Mr. Boutell is one of the shortest men in the house and it has been said of him that if he were six inches taller he would be "one of the biggest men in the country."

A senator who reads practically all of the time when not on legislative duty is Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana. For oratory of the most finished type, Senator Beveridge is, perhaps, the best exponent in congress. In this respect his tastes are for the perfect and the artistic, both in form and substance, and in the combination of compilation and delivery he owes much to his study of past masters of prose and oratory.

He possesses one of the finest libraries on the Far East in the United States. History, economics and the philosophy of government appeal most to him and his liking for these subjects is exemplified in his writings. Fiction holds his attention only when the mind is tired from the study of legislative problems and statistics. In his library the senator also has a fair smattering of standard scientific works, and, of course, being a lawyer, he has a fine legal library. Poetry, if it has spirit and true sentiment, has a warm spot in the heart of this Hoosier statesman.

TWENTIETH CENTURY TRIBUTE TO GEORGE WASHINGTON

By CHARLES JAMES T. FOX, Ph. D.

Although republics are said to be ungrateful it can never be stated that the American nation has not in many ways shown its appreciation of the character and greatness of its founder and first president. The capital of the country, one of its sovereign states, countless counties and towns, rivers, mountains, capes and institutions bears his name. Towering above the national capital rises the Washington monument, a gigantic obelisk of marble blocks, piled one upon the other, to a height of 555 feet. Every city in the land has doubtless one statue to the first president. The birthday of Washington is a national holiday, and a legal holiday in every state in the Union.

There is one wish of Washington, however, which the American people neither through their government nor through private activity have yet gratified. George Washington, on many occasions, expressed a desire to see established at the capital of the country a United States university, or some sort of an institution for the general diffusion of knowledge. For this purpose he bequeathed in his will some bonds of the Potomac company, a Virginia corporation, which failed many years after his death.

Feeling that the American people were under obligations to carry out this desire of their first president a number of patriotic men and women several years ago formed an organization known as the George Washington Memorial association, for the purpose of building such a university. The plan did not meet with public favor. In the century and more that has elapsed since George Washington advocated such a plan thriving universities have sprung up in all parts of the civilized world, and the necessity for a national institution, in the narrower sense of the word, ceased to exist. The funds that had been raised by the association were placed on deposit, and its plans for a time lay dormant. About a year ago, however, when Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, of New York city, was chosen president of the association she suggested that the present generation could possibly carry out Washington's ideas by erecting at the national capital a large auditorium for the use of scientific, educational, patriotic, and other societies or organizations; a building where they could gather in annual or other stated meetings to discuss and formulate plans for the betterment of the nation.

The educational value of such an institution was at once apparent, and prominent men and women in all parts of the country gave it their hearty indorsement and pledged large amounts to the $2,000,000 fund which the association intends to raise for the construction of the building. An additional $500,000 will be raised as an endowment fund with which to meet the running expenses of the institution so that it can be used free of charge.

The plans of the association have met with such success that it is expected to have the building near enough to completion within three years so as to use it for the next inaugural ball, on the evening of the 4th of March, 1913.

It is expected that many international congresses, such as the recent tuberculosis congress, will be held in the Memorial hall. President Taft has indorsed the plan, and in a public address in Washington said:

"Certain it is that we need such a building. We need a building of sufficient dignity and size to permit those functions that have a national character to be carried out in a proper way. We ought to have a building constructed not on narrow lines, not with a view to economy, but on the broadest lines, and with the finest architecture; and we shall call it 'Washington,' because this is the city of Washington; because everything that is of importance here ought to suggest the name of the man who founded the country, and in whose mind there developed the thought of a capital city."

The George Washington Memorial association numbers among its officers some of the most prominent women in the country. The officers who were reelected at a recent meeting held in Washington are: Mrs. Henry F. Dimock of New York city, president; Mrs. Daniel Manning Mrs. Charles D. Walcott Mrs. Charles J. Bell, Mrs. Henry R. Mallory, Miss Bessie J. Kibbey and Mrs. Frederick McGuire, vice presidents; Mrs. Leslie C. Wead, Mrs. Frederick K. Thompson and Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, trustees; Mrs. Susanna P. Gage, recording secretary; Miss Florence Guernsey, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frank Northrop, 6 East Forty-fifth street, New York city, treasurer; Charles J. Bell, president of the American Trust company of Washington, trustee of the permanent fund.

On the advisory council may be found the names of some of America's most prominent men: United States Senator Root, Gen. Horace Porter, Thomas Nelson Page, Dr. Charles D. Walcott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; Dr. S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, Dr. William Welsh of Baltimore, Dr. Edwin Alderman, president of the University of Virginia; Dr. Ira Remsen, president of Johns Hopkins university; Prof. H. Fairchild Osborn, of the American Museum of Natural History of New York; Dr. Charles W. Debney, president of the University of Cincinnati; Dr. John A. Wyeth, president of the New York Academy of Medicine; and Charles J. Bell of Washington.

The committee provided a fine program of dancing music by La Brosse's orchestra and a few out of town guests added to the pleasure. Among the dancers were:

CLUBS AND MUSICAL

"THE CHIMES OF NORMANDY" TO BE GIVEN BY LOCAL TALENT

GEORGE L. TYLER.

Under the auspsices and patronage of the Duluth Boat club, the opera, "Bells of Corneville," or "Chimes of Normandy" by Planquette, will be presented at the Lyceum theater on 26 and 27. The principal roles will be sung by the artist pupils of Mr. Tyler, the chorus numbering fifty, being chosen from the most efficient intermediate students. Rehearsals have been going on for the past ten weeks, and the most artistic and finished presentation of the "Chimes" is assured. In fact those who have heard the later rehearsals, are enthusiastic in asserting that it will be the "best production of this opera ever given in Duluth." In order to perfect every detail, Mr. Tyler has associated with Oliver Wiggins. Mr. Wiggins has directed and sung the role of Gaspard in the opera many times. In his capacity as stage director a smooth and professional rendition is assured.

Harry Howell, who has been identified with Mr. Tyler in the production of several grand operas at the Lyceum in recent year—prominent among which were "Carmen," as "Mignon," will have charge of the augmented orchestra. The cast principals have been chosen with great care, each singer being particularly adapted, both personally and vocally to the respective roles. The chorus is numerically and vocally, stronger than any that has appeared at the Lyceum; all costumes are from the Chicago Costume company—historically correct and new. The cast is as follows: Serpolette, Mrs. Harriet Nobles Webber; Germaine, Miss Rae Potter; Gertrude, Miss Clair Molly; Jeanne, Florence Furni; Manette, Adele Reynolds; Suzane, Mrs. C. W. Peters; Henri, Dr. Emil Bromand; Grenicheux, A. E. Bjorquist; Gaspard, Louis Dworshak; Baille, Ray Abbott; register, Don Cole; assessor, A. E. A. E. Oulette; notary, J. M. Flack. The chorus comprises:

Misses: Mabel Guyette, Rose Silk, Gertrude Witz, Ida Fiola, Dorothy Thompson, G. F. Roecker, Dolle A. Furni, Helen Swan, Mary Machnikowsky, Anna Tracy, Augusta Johnson, Ruby Cullen, Iva Evered, Eva McLyman, Marion Merriet, Mary E. Whitcomb, Emma Swanstrom, Essie, Sarff, T. L. LORE OF THE KITCHEN

Appetizing Fish Pie.

Take one pound of fresh fish, one egg, two tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of suet chopped fine and pepper and salt to season. Boil the fish, remove the bones and mince fine. Mix with the bread, suet and seasoning, and bind together with an egg. Put the mixture into a buttered pie dish and bake in a moderate oven.

Cooking Liver and Bacon.

Take one pound of sheep's or calf's liver, quarter of a pound of bacon, one ounce of flour, one onion, salt and pepper and a half a pint of water. Cut the bacon into thin slices and take off the rind; wash and dry the liver and cut into slices; mix the flour, pepper and salt together and dip each piece of liver into it. Put the bacon into a frying pan and fry about three or four minutes, turning it once, and put it round a hot dish; then fry the liver for about ten or twelve minutes. Arrange in the middle of the dish. Then slice and fry the onion and put with the liver and bacon. Put remainder of flour into the frying pan, stir it till brown, then add a drop of hot water, stir well till it boils and pour over liver and serve hot.

Making Gingerbread.

The secret of dark, rich gingerbread is to remember that unlike other cakes it needs no beating. The following is a tested formula: One heaping teaspoonful of ginger, one teacupful of molasses, one-half teacupful of butter, one egg, one pint of flour, sifted twice with a teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of milk. Heat the butter until really boiling and put straight from the fire into the molasses. Stir very lightly. Next put in one well beaten egg, then the milk and the flour through which the soda has been sifted dry. Be very careful not to beat the mixture, but stir it very "gingerly." This will insure a dark look. Bake in a moderate oven. It should be very dark and glossy on the top and crust very crisp.

Coffee Cream Souffle.

Make a pint of nice custard, add to it sufficient coffee essence to make a tasty mixture. Line a souffle dish with paper sufficiently deep to rise three inches above the dish; fill the mold nearly to the top of the paper with the coffee cream, freeze until quite firm; remove the paper and serve.

Good Way to Bake Potatoes.

After scrubbing potatoes to bake, grease them with lard and the outer skin will come off like burnt paper when the potatoes are served.

Selection of Poultry.

In choosing poultry select those that are nice and fat and the surest way to determine whether they are young is to try the skin under the leg or wing. If it is easily broken it is young; or turn the wing backwards, and if the joint yields readily it is tender. When pountry is young the skin is thin and tender, the legs smooth, the feet moist and limber, and the eyes full and bright. The body should be thick and the breast fat. Old turkeys have long hairs and the flesh is purplish where it shows under the skin on the legs and back. About March they deteriorate in quality. Young ducks and geese are plump with light semi-transparent fat, soft breastbone, tender flesh, leg joints which will break by the weight of the bird, fresh-colored and bristle beaks, and windpipes that break when pressed between the thumb and forefinger. They are best in fall and winter.

Steak a la Victoria.

Lay one pound of rump steak in one tablespoonful each of oil and vinegar and let it remain half an hour, turning it over occasionally. Mix two teaspoonfuls each of chopped parsley, capers, pickled gherkins and chutney with one ounce of butter on a plate. This is to be spread over the steak after it has been grilled or fried for from ten to twelve minutes and laid on a hot dish. Before spreading it the steak should be dusted with salt and pepper. Tufts of finely grated horseradish make a piquant garnish for the dish.

Dry Pea Pods for Soup.

Dried pea pods make excellent coloring for soups. Pods saved from the peas in the summer should be dried in the oven until they are of a good brown color. Then they should be hung up in muslin bags. A handful of them added to soup or stock give not only rich brown color, but also an agreeable nutty favor that is a great improvement.

the EVENING STORY

IN A MAKE-BELIEVE EDEN.

By R. V. Mutson.

It was the customary note from an editor that sent Carl Maxwell's fingers rubbing through his curly locks. On his writing table was a manuscript just returned to him by mail. In his hand was the note. It was different from others he had received from the same source. The editor wrote: "While I regret that your story, herewith returned, is not quite the style desired, it indicates that you are capable of work that would be acceptable. Other stories from your pen will receive careful consideration if your care to submit them."

There was encouragement, at least, and Maxwell determined that he would open wider the opening presented.

But while a brilliant sequence of ideas were flittering through his brain and taking shape in neatly typewritten pages of the story that was to throw wide open the door to literary success, the flow of the narrative was interrupted by the sound of a piano rising from the room beneath his own.

By Jove, she could play, little Miss Montague, of the sunny hair—little Miss Montague, the music teacher.

She had told him once that he could come down when she was practicing of an evening. He had never yet had the courage to make use of the friendly invitation, but now—

In another moment his hand was on the door knob. The next minute he stood in the presence of his divinity.

She was only a humble little worker, toiling her way up the steep ladder of fame. There was nothing very remarkable about her in any way, except her hair, and that was a golden brown, with copper lights in it, where it rippled back from her ears. And her eyes—well, her eyes were unlike any he had ever seen. For the rest, she was not above the average height, slender of build, and of an exquisite gracefulness.

"Good evening, Mr. Maxwell," she said as she swung around on her music stool and sat facing him. "So you have actually taken me at my word at last."

"Didn't you mean me to?" he asked, in some consternation.

"I am not in the habit of saying things that I don't mean," was the grave reply; but her eyes were sparkling. "Now tell me how the world has been treating you—how things are going?"

"I am stuck in the mire at present," he answered gloomily. "I have got to the 'thus far and no further' stage, so the thought would leave it alone for awhile. What was that you were playing while I was sitting on the stairs?"

"Schubert's Serenade," she answered. "But why the stairs? Are you in the habit of sitting there?"

"When you play," was the brief reply.

Turning abruptly, she let her fingers wander over the keys; then once again the haunting sweetness of the "Serenade" stole from them, and Maxwell sat in a somewhat rickety easy chair, dreamily listening.

Weeks had passed since he had made the acquaintance of the little music teacher through meeting her as they went in and out of the furnished rooming house wherein they each made as comfortable a home as could be afforded. He had applauded her ambition to attain rank in the musical world and expressed admiration for her playing which, he told her, cheered him and inspired him as it came to him in his room when he toiled over the studies that so regularly came back to him from the magazine editor, "not available."

But hitherto he had not had the courage to accept her invitation to hear her play under more favorable conditions for hearing. Now he was realizing what he had missed, for to her excellent playing there was added the charm of the romance her music inspired in his brain, with her and himself as the central figures.

His dream ended as the music suddenly ceased.

"I say," he said, "I think you are working too hard."

"Oh, I don't work so very hard when you consider the fact that I love my work," she said. "And then one must work to accomplish anything."

"That's true enough," was the somewhat rueful reply. "Life is just a bit of work, isn't it?—and a pretty tough bit, too, but it's money, or rather the want of it, that takes the grit out of a chap."

"Yes," she answered absently, "it is money that is at the bottom of everything in the world."

He looked at her quickly; then slowly the color mounted to his face.

"I say," he stammered, his fingers busy with the music, "I don't want to be too—I don't mean it for check—but if—suppose at any time you were hard up, for instance, you would let me know, wouldn't you? I—well, I fancy I have a bit more of the wherewithal than you have, and—this studying for larger work in the musical world costs more than giving young girls their early instruction in playing brings in, I imagine. I would like—oh, hang it all! I just want, if you should come to a hard place—I hope you won't—but if you should, you will let me help you over it, as one climber would help another, you know."

A brief silence followed this halting speech, and the girl's face was hidden as she bent over the keyboard.

"You aren't offended?" Maxwell pleaded, his hart beating a tatoo on his breasthone.

"No," was the low reply. "I will remember."

And so, with Miss Montague's music echoing in his brain and the pleasant influence of his day dream giving him new courage and hope for his work, he returned to his own room.

Only a few days passed after the completion of his story and the transmission to the editor, who had invited his renewed effort, when one day Maxwell received a note that sent him flying to Miss Montague's apartments.

"They've taken it!" he shouted, waving the editorial letter before him. "It's all right. I am one of the elect at last!"

"Oh, I am so glad!" the girl replied. "It is splendid, but I knew you would get there some day. I always knew you would."

"Look here," he exclaimed, "let's celebrate! Let's go to Rector's, or Mouquin's, or anywhere, and dine in honor of the event."

"Why, of course, I will," was the reply. "But—" and a shadow of hesitation passed over the girl's face—"couldn't we stay here? Couldn't we dine up in your room? I think that would be much nicer. I don't like crowded places."

"Would you really prefer it?" he asked.

"Yes, I would much rather."

"So be it then," he answered. "I shall come for you at 7, sharp."

Punctual to the minute he stood at her door, arrayed in evening dress.

Then the door opened and he caught his breath, for Miss Montague stood before him in a low-cut gown of sheeny blue, a single string of pearls clasped around her throat. She also had arrayed herself in raiment worthy of the occasion.

Offering her his arm, he conducted her to the dining room.

The litter of writing materials had been consigned to some shadowy corner, the soft light of the shaded candles shone on the flower-decked table, and by the fireplace stood a baby grand. He had hired it for the evening, thereby leaving one battered half-dollar in sole possession of the cash box.

Carl Maxwell had cast care and prudence to the four winds; he was light-hearted, happy as a boy.

"We are famous, you and I," he said gravely. "Just for tonight we are celebrities dining in—"

"The hall of song," she interposed softly, her brown eyes dancing in the light.

And so they played a glorious game of make-believe. They dined off gold plates, with knives and forks of solid silver; champagne fizzed and danced in slender wine glasses; a bowl of roses stood in the center of the table, the fragrant petals richly crimson against the cut crystal; soft-footed, swift-handed servants tended their every want. Oh, but it was an evening to be remembered, an evening of a lifetime!

"And your book," she said, looking across at him. "What a triumph for you! I have read it again and again. It is splendid—it will live!"

Carl Maxwell lowered his curly head.

"Madam," he said, with a grave courtesy, "your praise is more to me than the praise of the whole world; but the merit is not all mine, for you, and you alone, inspired me; but for you the book would never have been written.

Let me offer you one of these nectarines; they are my own growing. I have them sent up to me every day; their flavor is delicious."

Smiling, she helped herself to one of the jaded-looking pears that all day long had been reposing on the Italian's fruit stand at a nearby corner.

In the height of the festivity the landlady brought to the door a telegram. On reading it, Miss Montague turned pale.

"What is the matter?" Maxwell asked, with something of a foreboding.

"Can I help you in any way?" And, taking the filmsy paper from her nervous fingers, he ran his eye over the fatal message:

"Arrived this morning. What on earth are you doing? Shall come and see you tomorrow. Carrington."

"Who—is—Carrington?"

He got the question out with difficulty.

"The man I am engaged to be married to," was the low reply.

And the rest of the story was quickly told. Miss Montague was the niece and prospective heiress of a millionaire, who had selected as her future husband the son of a wealthy friend. She had accepted him as a matter of course, but he did not sympathize with her in her musical ambition. Finally, with a suddenly formed determination to make her own way in the world and with a little money of her own to aid her along her chosen path, she had left home, assuming her mother's maiden name under which to work out her destiny. So she had been traced and must return.

In a torrent the words rushed from her, broken, breathless, incoherent, and yet so startlingly clear to the man who stood listening, the telegram still between his fingers.

"Then—it's all been make-believe," he said slowly. "You—it is just a game you have been playing, that's all."

Then with the utmost care he folded the filmsy paper, and handed it to her. "It is yours," he said gravely.

"Goodby." She was standing now, holding out her hand. "And thank you for this evening."

In another minute she had gone.

What now to Carl Maxwell was the coming fame as an author, of which his first success made him feel assured? And yet—he must live and he must work. In the excitement of business relating to his future literary labor and in the planning of new stories he tried to forget his shattered dream of love. One evening he sat in his room, cursing the irony of fate. He was on the ladder of success at last—and the room downstairs was empty!

Was it? Sounds came to his ears that set every nerve a-quiver. Up from the room below stole the haunting melody of "Schubert's Serenade," played as only one person could play it. He was about to rush downstairs, when the thought came that perhaps Carrington was there.

And still the music stole through the keyhole; it was enough to exasperate any ordinary level-headed man, far less one of Carl Maxwell's temperament, and, covering his ears, he sat a hunched-up heap of misery.

"I wonder if you would mind being a pal, and letting me share your tea?"

Through the singing of his muffled hearing the request reached him, and, starting to his feet, he gazed round, a dull red mounting to his curls.

"Share my tea," he stammered. "And what about—what about Carrington?"

"Carrington is no more," was the low reply—"at least for me he no longer exists."

"You mean that—it's off?"

"We met and parted that day—the day I left here. I could not marry him —I never wanted to—not really; only I was expected to, and I thought he would do as well as any of the others. But I can't marry him. And he says that I have developed a horrible tendency to Bohemianism, and he abhors anything approaching it; so it's all off. And—I do want a cup of tea so badly."

"Tell me one thing before I ring for it," said Maxwell sternly. "Why have you come back here, and how dared you play that thing like you did just now?"

"I am here because I have nowhere else to go," she answered, looking at him with tears and laughter in her eyes. "I am in disgrace; my uncle refuses to have anything to do with me, so I have come back here. And I played the 'Serenade' because I wanted you to know that I had come back. I suppose—you told me once to come to you if ever I was hard up, and I am now—for a cup of tea."

It was over that cup of tea that Maxwell told her of the turn his own affairs had taken.

"I can't tell you how glad I am," she said, her eyes shining. "What will you do with it all?"

"Three things to start with," was the prompt reply. "First, I shall go and buy a baby grand; and then I shall give a dinner to celebrate your acceptance of it. May I?"

"Yes," was the tremulous reply, "you may."

"Regular, right down, out-and-out grim reality," he said sternly. "Not one ounce of make-believe."

For a moment she sat silent, her head a little bent; then raising it she looked across at him, love and laughter in the look.

"We will play a little sometimes, Carl," she said, softly. "We won't quite give up the gold plate and the nectarines and the hall of song."

"By Jove, no!" he answered, boyishly eager once more. "We will—why, we will dine there every night, dear—we will hang on to those nectarines wherever we go."

"I Don't Like the Way Her Hair is Done Up!"

Perhaps her hair is untidy, because her maid or hairdresser is careless and does not keep in touch with the new ideas.

Women who come to our establishment to have their hair arranged, go away well pleased.

WITH FORMER PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AT NAPLES

RETURN OF THE HUNTER

George Grantham Bain Writes to the Duluth Herald.

Gives Some Impressions of Roosevelt's First Stop in Europe.

(Special correspondence of The Duluth Herald, by George Grantham Bain.)

Naples, April 2.—Theodore Roosevelt set foot on European soil today on his return from his hunting trip to Africa. He arrived at Naples at 8 o'clock this morning from Alexandria on the Prinz Heinrich of the North German Lloyd line.

It was 7 o'clock when the ship reached the harbor and 8 o'clock when she reached her berth at one of the moles. Passengers from America used to land at Naples in small boats, to their great discomfort, but today they go ashore as they do in New York across a gang plank to the landing place.

A berth had been saved for the Prinz Heinrich. Just before her arrival the crowd of immigrants and venders of food and drink and the flower sellers were driven off by the police. I arrived at the mole at about this time, but though I had no ticket of admission the announcement that I was an American was enough to pass me through the portals of the "dogane," or custom house, and so to the mole.

Some Familiar Figures.

There I found some familiar American figures. First among them was J. J. Leishman, our ambassador to Italy. He had come down from Rome especially to welcome Mr. Roosevelt and he returned to Rome as soon as that ceremony was completed. Mr. Leishman's reception was not formal, for he appeared on the mole in a derby hat and a business suit. He looked small beside the prefect of Rome, a splendid specimen of Italian manhood, more than six feet tall, who stood beside him. The prefect was in frock coat and silk hat and his mustache was carefully waxed to two very fine points.

It is in matters of ceremony that we seem ignorant to foreign people. Of course, Mr. Leishman was welcoming only an American citizen without rank or office. But an Italian ambassador welcoming an Italian citizen of great distinction to New York would have received him in official dress.

There were other figures on the mole—some of them familiar. There was Consul Crowinshield of Naples, whose frock coat and silk hat and waxed mustache were not eclipsed by those of the prefect. There was Howard Thompson of the Paris bureau of the Associated Press, formerly a Washington correspondent; and with him the Rome correspondent of the association. There was George Green,—also at one time of Washington, now traveling correspondent of the Copenhagen Politiken and newspapers in Berlin, who had come over from the Tarnowski trial at Venice to see the arrival of the first citizen of the United States in Europe. There were correspondents of other European newspapers, local reporters and photographers, some officials of the port and a few of the army of good Americans who are now visiting Naples, including two tourist excursion parties.

As the Prinz Heinrich was warped into her berth I saw the familiar face of Walter Wellman of the Record-Herald looking over the rail. He was the first American correspondent to greet Mr. Roosevelt up the Nile. Other correspondents who went to Khartum to meet him and who returned with him to Naples are J. C. O'Laughlin of the Chicago Tribune and Hamilton Fyfe of the London Daily Mail, and a representative of the Associated Press.

Only Favored Ones Aboard.

When the Prinz Heinrich had docked and the gang plank had been run aboard, the only persons permitted aboard were Mr. Leishman, Mr. Crowinshield, the Neapolitan officials, the selected Press correspondents Mr. Green and myself. The captain of the ship stood at the head of the gangway to receive the ambassador and we passed from the promenade deck to the boat deck, where stood all alone a familiar figure in a rough traveling suit of gray.

I had been told by returning travelers on the Grosse Kurfurst that Mr. Roosevelt was looking thin and worn from his African experience. Thinner he certainly is. Even his face shows the effect of his year in the wilds. But he looks as hard as nails and walks with the old, springy step, and altogether is the picture of health and vigor.

It had been ten years since I shook hands with Mr. Roosevelt—more than ten years since I took luncheon with him in New York during his police commissionership and studied his face at close range. During his term as president I was seldom in Washington and I had no occasion to see him personally.

So when he held out his hand to greet me it was with some interest that I looked in his face and saw how serious it had grown. And much older too. Mr. Roosevelt's face has aged more than ten years in the ten years which have just passed. I should say it was fully twenty years older. One may have the strength to carry the weight of great responsibilities with seeming ease, but they leave their mark.

As Mr. Roosevelt took my hand I recalled myself to him. The moment he heard my name he said:

"No one need introduce me to Mr. Bain. I should have known you immediately, but you have changed the cut of your beard." An incident which has a value only as illustrating Mr. Roosevelt's remarkable memory.

Talk With Correspondents.

After the first greeting, the ambassador and other officials went to the bridge to greet Mrs. Roosevelt and her children, Kermit and Ethel, while Mr. Roosevelt talked in an animated way with the correspondents concerning an interview sent to a French paper while he was on his way to Africa, which he disowned with characteristic emphasis. "I never saw the man," said Mr. Roosevelt positively. "He may have been on some passing ship or somewhere in the neighborhood, but I never saw him."

There were a few minutes of conversation. Then Mrs. Roosevelt and her children came down from the bridge, and after shaking hands with the captain of the Prinz Meinrich, went ashore. There were two automobiles in waiting. Under the escort of Lawrence Abbott of the "Outlook," who has been of their party since they left New York, they took one of the automobiles and drove away. All customs ceremonies were waived and they went direct from the ship to the Hotel Excelsior. Mr. Roosevelt followed in a few minutes. He came down the gang plank from the ship quite alone, the familiar soft hat on his head. A battery of cameras was leveled at him as he took his seat. Hats were lifted and he bowed to the crowd as the automobile started.

The Hotel Excelsior is one of the new hotels built especially to accomodate American travelers, where they have the pleasure of paying New York prices for their comfort, in some cases a good deal more. The foreign hotelkeeper has a fine faith in the extravagance of American travelers and believes them all to be rich. In fact, the Naples' paper this morning spoke of the 3,450 tourists on the "Cincinnati" as "mostly American millionaires."

Mr. Roosevelt passed under a big American flag as he entered the hotel. Smaller American flags hung in all the windows of the lounge. For luncheon he had "Eggs a la Roosevelt." They were curried eggs, "strong eggs" as one of the foreign correspondents described them. However, they were strong in respect of their seasoning only. They have no cold storage eggs in Italy.

Between his arrival and his luncheon Mr. Roosevelt attended to business and received the European newspaper men. The reception was informal. He made a little speech in English—he speakes no Italian—repeating the warning he has given in other places that any interviews with him on political questions would be spurious as he would give no such interviews. He made this warning even stronger by saying he had formed no views on the political situation and would form none.

Mr. Roosevelt also called the attention of the foreign journalists to the freedom of religious thought in America—told them that he had spoken in a Roman-Catholic church and that he had both a Jew and a Catholic in his cabinet.

No Political Talk.

In the afternoon the whole Roosevelt party (except Kermit, who went to Pompeii drove to the Aquarium. There Mr. Dohrn, the son of the founder of the institution, showed them one of the most remarkable fish exhibits in the world. Then Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt took a carriage and started all alone for a drive through the city, while the others took the automobile drive to Posillipo.

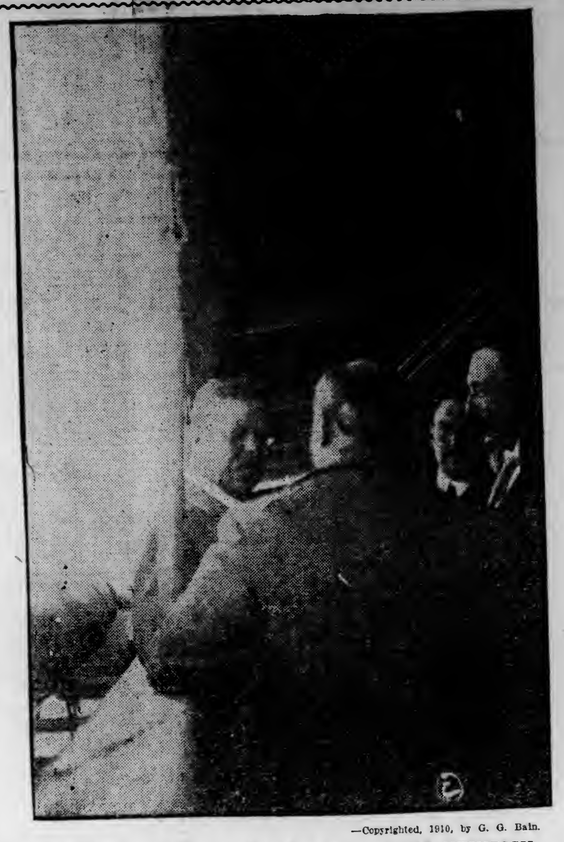
While Mr. Roosevelt is giving no interviews on politics, he does not hesitate to speak to interviewers on other matters. He sent the Copenhagen Politiken a message of appreciation of the Danes in America and this gave him an oportunity to pay another tribute to Jacob Riis as the "ideal American citizen"

Mr. Roosevelt is making a pleasant impression on American travelers he meets. In the lobby of the Excelsior an American with a white felt hat spoke to him.

"That's a ——, isn't it?" said the ex-president, naming a much advertised brand of headgear.

The wearer took it off.

"I knew it was the minute I saw it," said Mr. Roosevelt as he looked at the band



A member of the Veteran Society of the Spanish war took his hand as he passed.

"Glad to see you, comrade," said Mr. Roosevelt, his quick eye noting the button.

There is the same curiosity to see him and shake hands with him that there was when he was president. In fact one feels very much at home today in Naples despite the alien tongue one hears on every hand, the narrow streets swarming with dirty but picturesque humanity, the blue bay and the sombre height of Vesuvius looming beyond. For one hears at the hotel and at the Aquarium and at Cook's and in all the other rendezvous of Americans the old familiar phrases: "Have you seen Mr. Roosevelt?" "I shook hands with him." "He saw I was an American."

The excitement does not extend beyond the visiting Americans. The Neapolitan hotel people and shop-keepers echo it a little, the newspapers give it some space. But if it were not for the Americans in town Mr. Roosevelt could drive the streets quite unobserved.

(This is the first of a series of letters which Mr. Bain will write to The Herald while he accompanies Ex-President Roosevelt on his European tour. The second will appear at an early date.)

THE BUSY WORLD'S HEART SIDE

By THE OPTIMIST.

In the subway train a mechanic rode on his homeward way, with a fresh bandage across one eye. He had just received his injury, but the surgeon thought that he need not go to a hospital. Yet he was in great pain, as was evident, and he felt the mortification of the situation also.

His thoughts ran this way:

"I was doing my duty and seeking an honest man's bread for myself and family. I toil hard all the days, from sun to sun I am vexed with care and there are few light moments. In the midst of it all this blow fell. I must bear it. I sit here amid all these people, most of whom are more fortunate, and I do not wince. I do not work my fingers nor screw my features, though my anguish is intense. I am born to this. I plod through it without complaint. So do thousands of my fellow workmen who have been hurt this morning by fire or frost or steel or stones. We harden ourselves and heal ourselves and go back to danger again. The dangerous task must be done or the world would slip a cog and stop.

"When we enter our dwellings our wives do not scream or faint. They sometimes weep and our little ones are frightened for a moment, till we reassure them. We say it is nothing, that we do not suffer much and in a day or two will be well. Then our home folk pull out the savings bank book and smile. It is not the same, probably in our houses as it would be in the rich man's house—this sight of blood.

"You see we are soldiers in the great war of trade, and we are right on the firing line. We have no fear, we obey the orders of our Creator. We have the capacity to enjoy the greatest, the miraculous blessing of heaven. We can sleep, never so sweetly, and eat and stop to rest. We can hope, and we do mostly for our children. We love and we have faith. Good day, sir, I have yet to walk a mile."

THE DAY'S BEST STORIES

Who Paid for the Whisky?

Lord Charles Beresford, who is as popular in America as he is in England, was a candidate for parliament in the recent election, and part of his campaign ammunition was drawn from this side of the Atlantic in the following story told by Judge Rentoul, as an example of "political economy."

In Mexico the Mexican dollar is worth two-pence more than the Yankee one, whilst in America the Yankee dollar is worth two-pence more than the Mexican one.

On a certain portion of the border is a bridge from one country to the other, and on each side of the bridge is a refreshment saloon. A Mexican started from home with a Yankee dollar in his pocket and, crossing the bridge, went into the American saloon, called for a two-penny-worth of whisky and received a Mexican dollar as change.

He then crossed the bridge, went into the Mexican saloon, called for two-penny-worth of whisky, and, receiving a Yankee dollar as change, recrossed the bridge to the American saloon, called for two penny-worth of whisky, and again received a Mexican dollar as change. He kept this up until the afternoon, when he was found in a drunken condition on the Mexican side of the bridge with a Yankee dollar in his pocket (the money he set out with in the morning). Who paid for the whisky he drank?

Class Politics as a Disease.

A New Jersey farmer driving along the road overtook a pedestrian whom he invited to ride with him. The stranger was respectably dressed and his appearance interested the farmer.

"Are you a professional man?" the farmer asked.

"Yes," was the reply; "I suppose you would call me a kind of professional man."

The farmer paused and then resumed: "Well, you ain't a lawyer, or you'd be talking more'n you are; and you ain't a doctor, because you've got no bag; and you ain't no parson, by your clothes. Now I wonder what profession yours might be?"

"I'm a politician," answered the other.

The farmer took his whip, and, leaning forward, gave the horse a cut which astonished the animal. Then, leaning back again he said, with a snort of disgust: "Politics ain't no profession. Politics is a disease."

Belasco's Production of "The Girl From the Golden West" Will be Seen in Duluth for Three Nights. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

David Belasco's own company in his successful play "The Girl of the Golden West," which had a run of two consecutive years at the Belasco theater, New York, will be the offering at the Lyceum on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings.

During the engagement in New York there were many incidents that will serve to make the long engagement memorable, but none more so than the visit of the Society of Forty-Niners, whose headquarters are now in the metropolis. These hardy old gentlemen, who can talk from personal experience of the adventurous days following the discovery of gold on the Pacific coast, and who, very naturally, have come to look upon other events and epochs of American history as rather tame and colorless, did not by any means pursue each other to the box office of the Belasco theater to purchase seats for "The Girl of the Golden West." They had to be convinced of the quality of the drama as an active picture of life of those days, before they would dignify any reproduction of the characters and scenes of their young manhood, by attending their presentation. But, one by one, and in pairs, these hale old men, many of whom made their fortunes at that time and are now individuals of extensive means, while others have little to show for their exertions, singly and by twos, they journeyed to the Belasco theater to see the play and revel in the picturesque accuracy with which Belasco has reproduced the time and people of the Sierra Nevadas. And, going away, they spread the news among their friends and in their clubs. Their praise led others of their former companions to the Belasco, and then—the inevitable result—the Society of Forty-Niners gathered together and laid plans for a theater party. The function took place at the Belasco theater.

That the party was unequalled, the others among that night's audience can abundantly testify. As the realistic pictures of the impressive Belasco production were unfolded one by one, and as the incidents of the drama took form, leading up to the dramatic climax, the Forty-Niners, recognizing the truth of the settings and moved by the situations of the play, cut the leash on their enthusiasm. Mr. Belasco was there and was given such an ovation as rarely comes to a playwright and producer.

The Forty-Niners were making up in volume for applause which they felt should have been given earlier in the season, and the author was kept bowing and smiling for fully fifteen minutes after the second act. After that and until the play left New York, there was hardly a performance which did not see the return of some one of the Forty-Niners anxious to witness again the performance of "The Girl of the Golden West."

Lyceum Notes.

Klaw & Erlanger's production of Edmund Day's "The Round Up" will be the attraction at the Lyceum for the week of May 9.

It is described as one of the best Western dramas that has been presented in years.

While the play possesses that element of sensation which makes the Western story so fascinating to theater-goers, it is constructed on lines that make it attractive to play-goers who seek their amusement in first class theaters. It is not, in any sense, inconsistent in construction and built to carry one or two ultra sensational scenes.

The story is said to be logical and most effectively developed in dramatic situations which are appealing in their human interests. It is staged in four acts with scenes which represent the courtyard of the Allen hacienda, Sweetwater valley, Arizona; the living room at Sweetwater ranch, the lava beds of the great Southwest, and the plains showing a round up of cattle.

There will be an auxiliary organization of over 150 people, including soldiers, scouts, "cowpunchers," Mexican vaqueros, Arizona girls and Apache Indians. A feature is made of the Indian fight in the third act, the scene of which is the lava beds of Southern Arizona.

Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

In "A Woman's Way," which Grace George brings to the Lyceum late this season, the case of woe in wedlock is presented jocosely, although it is about the impending separation of a husband and wife by divorce. The man has taken a gay widow "joy riding" in an automobile, an accident has exposed his escapade and the wife is expected to bring a divorce suit. The gist of the play is that she doesn't take her grievance into court, but settles it in her own singular way. She loves the culprit and doesn't wish to lose him—unless he really loves the widow better than herself, in which case she will give him up. She enters into a competition to bring about his choice and invites her rival to her home, and the contest is briskly waged until the final curtain. Many well-known people are included in the supporting cast.

In a recent interview, Mort H. Singer, the proprietor of the Princess theater, Chicago, and of "The Prince of Tonight," which will appear at the Lyceum this season, says: "I attribute my success to the fact that I try to give an honest entertainment and to have my road productions just as good as the ones that remain in Chicago. In Mr. Henry Woodruff, my latest star, who plays 'The Prince of Tonight,' I think I have one of the best leading men in the country, and I have spared no expense in surrounding him with everything that goes toward making a successful piece. Mr. Howard, who wrote the music, seems to have been in one of his happiest moods, and all the musical numbers are great big hits. Taking it all in all, I consider 'The Prince of Tonight' one of my most pretentious productions."

AT THE BIJOU

Another Bill of All Feature Acts Will Open at Duluth's Popular Vaudeville Theater Monday Afternoon. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

The show that will open at the Bijou Monday should prove to be one of the strongest drawing cards of the season, as it will have more feature acts than any bill presented so far this year. It will include more people, than any previous bill and each act will be entirely different from the others. The program will have both American and European attractions.

Heading the list will be Sam J. Curtiss and his company of five people in one of the funniest acts that has figured in vaudeville this season, entitled "A Session at School." The act is on the musical comedy style, as there are numerous song and dance numbers introduced. The piece offers a feast of good clean-cut comedy, which has always made Mr. Curtis a favorite throughout the Eastern cities, where he has been in vaudeville for several years.

The act comprises three pretty young women and two gentlemen, who offer the public a bushel of laughs while they are on the stage.

New York city, the past season, has had the dancing craze in vaudeville. Each of the different circuits has been importing celebrated dancers to this country, from Paris, London and other foreign cities. Sullivan & Considine have secured Phasma, a celebrated dancer to play their circuit for a limited number of weeks. Phasma "The Goddess of Light" offers an array of gorgeousness, beauty and splendor of a kind that has seldom if ever been seen in vaudeville. The New York Telegraph says Phasma is the best yet. The dances introduced by Phasma are "The Jeweled Butterfly," "The Dance of Colones," "The Witch of the Flames," and "The Spirit of the North."

A pair of foreign entertainers and stars in their line will be William Bovis and Flo Darley, who come direct to this country from Sydney, Australia, to play a vaudeville tour over the Sullivan & Considine circuit. They are musical comedy artists and were starred at the Tivoli theater, Sydney, for over two years. Their vaudeville offering is a comedy entitled "Married," which may be said is not one of the sheif-worn matrimonial sketches that have been so prominent in vaudeville the past few seasons. This act is replete with good comedy, in which several musical numbers are offered, featuring Miss Darley's impersonations of various types of women. She is charming before the footlights.

Good step dancing is always a pleasant number on any program of vaudevile, and in the Williams Brothers the Bijou offers two of the best before the public. They are remarkable dancers both in style and execution. Besides offering a clever dancing exhibition they both have excellent voices and introduce several good song hits.

The big extra feature for the week will be the six English juggling girls. This act comes direct from the London hipodrome, and has been featured in all the best music halls of Europe. It was imported to this country to play this circuit. The act represents the most skillful novelty of its kind in vaudeville. The feats of juggling are marvelous to behold and one will see at a glance that they must have begun when mere children to attain such ability and cleverness.

Miss Deodata Rossing will sing illustrated the very latest song hit, entitled "If You'll Love Me, I Will Buy the Earth for You."

The motion pictures will conclude this star bill. The picture subjects will be all new and exclusive.

Matinees are given daily at 2:45 and night performances at 8 and 9:30. Seats may be reserved by either telephone. A special school children's matinee will be given Saturday afternoon at 2:30. All scholars under 14 years of age are admitted for 5 cents. Performances are given Sunday afternoon and night.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Another Daring Farce is "The Lady of Lobster Square"—Success of "The Skylark"—Outcome of the Play Contest is Announced. ∴ ∴ ∴

New York, April 16.—Another of those daring farces which deal so freely with the improprieties of life and have been the order since "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" began her reign at the Circle theater, a year ago, was put on at Webster's last week under the title of "The Lady of Lobster Square." The piece is about as reckless as any of its savory forerunners, and in all but the details as conventional.

This time the heroine is an actress of the varieties who has a love affair with a young man who is about to be married and who comes to her apartment for the purpose of breaking off the relationship. The plot deals with all sorts of mishaps, the sentimental burlesque queen making heroic threats of self-destruction by means of a formidable-looking revolver. In the end this revolver turns out to be a novelty fan, as unreal as Lucette's heart. But matters look serious enough for Tom Runyon when, after thinking himself rid of Lucette, he discovers that his fiance's aunt has engaged the singer to sing at his wedding, and Tom hides himself in a closet in the room to which Miss Lucette has been asigned in the house of the bride.

In the last act he escapes to his own apartment and finds himself accidentally locked out in the hall without any clothes. This act is rather amusing, judged by the whole, as it involves a laughable scene in which Tom compels a meek-mannered, shy and shrinking song-writer who haunts Lucette's person to give him his clothes and uses the novelty fan to enforce his demands. Incidental to the action is a fire-eating Spaniard of robust physique, who is infatuated with Lucette and threatens the song-writer and Tom with violence for standing in the way of his happiness.

In all this the reader will readily detect the infallible elements which go to make up one of these familiar boulevard farces. The piece was written by George Feydeau, the Frenchman from whom we derived "The Girl From Maxim's" and others of the same category. In French it was called 'La Fille de Patte,' and there was a bedroom scene in the second act that would have called out the police if it had not been eliminated.

Contrary to general expectation, these scandal pieces do not draw well on Broadway. So long as they were a novelty the public crowded the theaters at which they were presented. Now that they have taken on a conventional garb the public is apathetic. The producers go far as they dare, but dare not go far enough for fear of the police.

The present piece has the merit of being presented by an unusually fine cast. Georgia Caine, who sang the Merry Widow for awhile, is Lucette; Fritz Williams is Tom, Wilfred Clark is the melancholy song writer; Lucy Weston is the fiancee and William Fruette is the fire-eating Spaniard. Besides these there are Orlando Daly and Lillian Lee, both local favorites. They made things hum, and, if the farce has any chance of lasting out the season it will be due to their clever performance.

At the New York Theater a two-act musical comedy by William Harris, Jr., music by Frank G. Dossert, entitled "The Skylark," which has been tried out in several of the large cities during the past fortnight, met with a cordial reception. The critics are generally appreciative. The entertainment has color, richness and charm, and some very lovely pictures, in which, as one critic declares, Broadway's best crop of early peaches are set forth.

Since Neptune appears and half the divinities of Olympus are introduced, the Broadway habitues were a little puzzled. Most of them know more about the divinities that form the headliners at some of the popular temples of the muses in town than they do about mythology, but since the ancient Greek goddesses were not particular to screen their forms, the Broadwayites did not suffer their ignorance to interfere with their enjoyment of the nine who turned themselves into an impromptu orchestra with kazoos and did what they could to repeat the sextet from "Florodora."

The two acts are full of pictorial interest, the music is bright and the acting in the main is of the vivacious tempo that makes the time pass swiftly and pleasantly. In the cast are John Slavin, May De Sousa, Anna Boyd, Eddie Garvie, Clarice Vance and May Maloney, as well as Grace King, who divided honors with Miss De Sousa.

A report was published in one of the Sunday papers that William Collier had signed a contract either with Lew Fields or the Shuberts by which he was to pass from under the management of Charles Frohman at a yearly salary of $25,000 and interest in the show. The rumor created widespread interest along the Rialto, and it was very flattering to Collier. The only drawback was, as Collier declared later, the comedian had never heard of it, and as he is the most interested party, the matter is for the present dismissed as lacking confirmation.

Another interesting bit of Rialto gossip is that the famous old Wallack's theater is likely to pass out of the control of the Moss estate to that of Liebler & Co., the theatrical firm, which has for some time past filled time at the playhouse and is now producing "Alias Jimmy Valentine" on its stage. As George Tyler, the managing head of the firm is in Europe, no direct confirmation could be obtained. The house is one of the few survivors of the pre-syndicate days. It was opened by Lester Wallack Jan. 4, 1882, with "The School for Scandal," with John Gilbert as Sir Peter and Rose Coghlan as Lady Teazel, and here Kyrle Bellew made his american debut.

This is the last week of the old Academy of Music as the home of legitimate drama, and the house which once occupied the same place as the Metropolitan opera house in the musical world of New York, re-echoing with the voices of some of the greatest singers of all countries, and for many years past has served as the home of vaudeville, and in the Williams Brothers the Bijou offers two of the best before the public. They are remarkable dancers both in style and execution. Besides offering a clever dancing exhibition they both have excellent voices and introduce several good song hits.

The big extra feature for the week will be the six English juggling girls. This act comes direct from the London hipodrome, and has been featured in all the best music halls of Europe. A peculiar planetary conjunction developed during the past week, with the Shubert offices as the particular horizon for this phenomenon.

Corine had been engaged for the principal part of Juliette in "Madame Troubadour." Corine was reported ill and Christie McDonald was engaged for the part. The other day when Miss McDonald appeared for rehearsal, Corinne also appeared, quite recovered from her illness and ready and anxious to begin work. Both were entitled to the part and the stage director was in a profound dilemma. The matter was presented to Lee Shubert and he decided the problem with the wisdom of a Solomon. He confirmed the contract of both, with directions to have them alternate in the role, just as is done in the case of grand opera artists.

Pavlowa and Mordkin, the Russian dancers, have been such a success here that now there is a wholesale reaching out for Russian dancers, and the prediction is made that next season will see numerous groups of dancers from the czar's domain prominent in operas and ballets. The success which has attended the production of Delibes' "Coppelia" has generated an unprecedented demand for pantomime ballets in New York, the piece having been given oftener in the past months with the Russian dancers than any opera in the repertoire of the Metropolitan has been given throughout the season.

Louis Nethersole writes as follows: "Miss Anglin has noticed that in your weekly letter you mention that she has been engaged by Liebler & Co to take the place of another actress who has recently seceded from the stage, Eleanor Robson, to wit. I am anxious to explain to you that Miss Anglin has taken nobody's place, and if any arrangement is ultimately made between her and Messrs. Liebler & Co. it will be a special one, and I remain in my capacity of manager for her."

There is considerable talk to the effect that David Belasco and Dave Warfield are having a serious dissension, which might lead to the severance of the bonds that have bound them together for so long. Belasco wishes Warfield to play next season in "The Auctioneer" and Warfield respectfully but firmly declines to do anything of the sort. Warfield wishes Belasco to build for his use next season a modern and completely pictorial production of "The Merchant of Venice," in order that the actor may fulfill his long-cherished ambition to impersonate the role of Shylock. Belasco refuses to carry out this design of his star. Friends of both sides hope the misunderstanding will reach no more serious stage.

The recent purchase of the New York and Criterion theaters by a newspaper is to remove these two play houses from the metropolitan list. They are to be torn down to make way for a modern office building.

It has been asserted that Ibsen was not a Norwegian. But in the current Nineteenth Century Halvdan Koht adduces proof, not only that Ibsen's ancestors had lived in Norway for generations and had had their minds molded in the social and intellectual life of that country, but also that among his immediate ancestors were some of pure Norwegian descent.

Earle Browne, of the Alias Jimmy Valentine company, has completed the manusoript of an unnamed play designed for the use of Wilton Lackeye some next season. It deals with the intrigues of French court during the peace negotiations following the American revolution. The manuscript has been forwarded to George C. Tyler, head of the Liebler & Co. firm, who is in London preparing for Gertrude Elliot's production of "The Dawn of a Tomorow."

The dramatization of George Randolph Chester's "Bobby Burnett" made by Winchell Smith, was produced for the first time in Colorado City, last week, and was very favorably received.

Before sailing for Europe Henry W. Savage entered into a contract with Walter Brown for the presentation of that author's play called "Every Woman." This work possesses characteristics that are unusual. It is a story of modern times written in blank verse, with thirty speaking parts. The scene is laid in New York, and one of the principal episodes occurs in front of Rector's on New Year's Eve. Mr. Savage intends to make a most elaborate scenic production of the play, and regards it as an important and novel addition to the stage literature of this time.

Riley Hatch will be the leading man for William Gillette in the author-actor's farewell tour next season. Mr. Hatch will play the part of one of the physicians in "Clarice;" Cattermole in "The Private Secretary;" Johnson in "Too Much Johnson;" Maj. Stromberg in "Held By the Enemy," and Maj. Randolph in "Secret Service."

William Collier's next medium is likely to be a comedy written in collaboration with Edgar Selwyn. The piece is based on a sketch of Selwyn's entitled "Waiting at the Church," and produced recently at Lamb's gambol. They have agreed to expand it into a full evening's entertainment.

For the company which is to produce Gelett Burgess' "The Cave Man," Frank Keenan has engaged Jane Wheatley as leading woman. The play is to have its first performance at the Suburban Gardens, St. Louis, on May 15. If it proves successful it will be Keenan's regular offering next fall.

Blanche Ring will continue in "The Yankee Girl" next season, making a tour of the country, incidentally playing return engagements in cities in which she scored earlier in the current season.

Edmond Rostand's next play will be "Don Quixote."

"The Squawman" recently received its two housandth performance. In the original cast were William Faversham, George Fawcett, Theodore Roberts, W. S. Hart and Selene Johnson. Robert Edeson, who has been touring the Pacific coast in Anna Steese Richardson's and Leslie Fridenberg's play, "A Man's a Man," has met with tremendous success, playing to capacity business everywhere. Mr. Edeson is returning East, visiting the principal towns in Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota and Minnesota. His season will not end until the latter part of May. He will appear at the Hudson theater, New York, in September, opening Labor day in "A Man's a Man," which has been the most popular vehicle he has had since "Strongheart."

James Forbes' new play, "The Commuters," which Henry B. Harris presented for the first time on any stage at the Star theater, Buffalo, on Monday, April 11, and which will have a preliminary spring tour, playing Buffalo, Syracuse, Harrisburg, Reading, Baltimore and Atlantic City, will be the first attraction of the season at the Criterion theater, New York. The opening date has been set for Aug. 15. Mr. Forbes has, in "The Commuters," a fit successor as a laugh-provoker to "The Traveling Salesman" and "The Chorus Lady."

Margaret Anglin, who intends to revive the Sophocles tragedy, "Antigone," at the California university this summer, is studying her role in the original Greek, of which language she is mistress. After she has familiarized her mind with the original text, she will turn to a standard English translation, as it will be necessary to give the tragedy in English because of the impossibility of finding actors sufficiently conversant with Greek to follow her example.

The latest Parisian success is the comedy called "The Sacred Wood" (Le Bois Sacre), by Caillavet and De Fiers, authors of "Le Roi," "Inconstant George" and "Love Watches." Their new play is a satire on French officialdom and relates the adventures of a fascinating lady who is intriguing to get the Cross of the Legion of Honor which she finally secures by having her husband make love to the wife of the minister of fine arts. This minister is one of the most delightful satires of recent years. Although his portfolio is the "Beaux Arts," he does not even know the names of the Muses. Charles Frohman has purchased the English American rights of "The Sacred Wood," and will produce it in New York next autumn. This play should not be confused with the serious drama of the same name by Rostand, which is now on rehearsal in Paris.

T. W. Robertson's "Caste" was first produced April 6, 1867, at the Prince of Wales theater, London, just forty-three years ago. The revival of it at the Empire April 25 promises to be one of the best productions of the play ever made, containing, as it does, Marie Tempest, Elsie Ferguson, Graham Browne, Edwin Arden, Julian Royce and Maud Milton.

One of the most interesting programs for next year's theatrical season will be that which Charles Frohman has laid out for William Gillette. Within the past week it has been definitely decided that he will appear next year in a repertory of his five most famous plays, "Sherlock Holmes," "Secret service" "Held by the Enemy," "Two Much Johnson," and "Clarice."

Charles Frohman has estimated that the services of his actors and plays which he offers for the proposed East Side theater in New York will amount to $100,000 in excess of any possible returns.

Two of the most successful plays now on the road are "The Thief," with Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon and a play written about a thief. The latter is "Arsene Lupin," with William Courtenay.

The one disappointment of Otis Skinner in the route booked for him for his tour in "Your Humble Servant," was that it was found impossible to play a one-night stand in the real "Weedsport opera house," at Weedsport, N. Y. The first act of the play has its scene laid in an imaginary "Weedsport opera house," and when Mr. Skinner found out there was a real one, he became possessed with a desire to play in it.

Charles Frohman has made the same offer to London's East end which he recently made to New York's East side, namely to supply his best plays and stars to the poor who live in those districts at the most nominal prices if a group of men standing for what the New theater founders stand for in New York will provide a suitable playhouse.

CROP CONDITIONS PRIME TRADE FACTOR

New York, April 16.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade today says:

Crop conditions are becoming more a vital factor in the business situation, and it is noteworthy that the nearer one gets to the actual producing centers and the further from the speculative markets, the more cheerful are the reports. Even the poor winter wheat outlook is improved by rains, while regarding spring wheat there is a larger acreage and excellent initial conditions. If the main crops are good the year should be a prosperous one, in spite of political and monetary complications.

The unsettled condition in pig iron, where curtailment of production is talked of in the trade as a means of bringing a readjustment of conditions, still disturbs the iron and steel market. With the output during the last six months exceeding all previous records, some accumulation of stocks has resulted and prices for some time past have been in consumers' favor. New low quotations are named by the leading castiron pipe interest on its inquiries for 50,000 tons of Southern iron, while the general weakness in the market has now extended abroad. In finished lines, sheets, bars and tin plate come next in point of activity; other branches are quiet.

Dry goods markets are quiet, but price readjustments in cotton goods stimulate business on special qualities. Export trade is slow. Curtailment in cotton and worsted mills continues.

There is now a satisfactory trade in footwear, and although some buyers are still out of the market, the question of prices is becoming a less disturbing element. Material activity has developed in the Boston sole leather market. All varieties of domestic hides and calfskins continue strong.

BRAINERD

Brainerd, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Grand theater, the new vaudeville house, will open Monday evening, April 18. F. E. Low, formerly manager of the Bijou, will be manager of the house, and Judd Wright will be treasurer.

Mrs. Thomas Lyonais, the wife of one of the pioneer residents of Brainerd, died Sunday and was buried Wednesday morning. Mrs. Lyonais leaves a husband, four sons, an adopted daughter and several grandchildren, besides a large circle of friends.

The Crow Wing County Educational association met here Friday and Saturday of this week. The program was a very interesting one and included addresses by Prof. Wilson of the Minnesota Agricultural college, Supt. Cobb, of the Brainerd schools, Dr. J. A. Thabes and others. A fine musical program was also given Friday evening.

Jeremiah Compton has commenced proceedings against his wife Ruhama Compton, for divorce, alleging desertion in 1885. The increasing value of real estate in Crow Wing county and the consequent closer scrutiny of titles is raking up lots of just such cases, in order that flaws may be corrected.

Henry Spalding of this city has leased the new three-story brick hotel erected at Cresby, and expects to open it to the public about the 10th of May.

There has been a committee consisting of J. A. Wilson, chairman, Frank Klenow, Leslie Jack, Robert Maghan, A. T. Kimball, Benjamin C. Heald, Sr., Alfred Lewrence, C. W. Koering, Mrs. George Forsythe, John Britton and J. F. Smart appointed to look after the matter of a Crow Wing county exhibit at the Minnesota state fair next fall. The committee was appointed by Judge Albright, the president of the Crow Wing County Development association and every member is a hustler and a Crow Wing county booster.

George W. Pippy, for the past eleven years a molder in the Northern Pacific foundry here, has been appointed factory inspector, and left for St. Paul Friday morning to assume his duties.

Mrs. Charles Stadlbauer, who came down from Grand Forks a couple of weeks ago to have their household goods shipped to that place, left for Grand Forks Thursday morning.

Louis Rowelson, an employe of the Northern Pacific shops, died at the company hospital here Tuesday of meningitis. He was a widower and left a son and daughter and an aged mother. They left for their former home at Brandon, Minn., Thursday morning with the remains, and will make that their future place of residence.

MINNESOTA UNIVERSITY

Dean Frankforter Plans to Bottle Portion of the Comet's Tail.

Faculty Decide to Establish Four-Year Course in Music.

Minneapolis April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—To bottle a portion of the tail of Halley's comet, is the latest plan of Dean Frankforter. On May 18, at 4 a. m., the earth will pass through the most immediate wake of the comet and at that time an attempt will be made to secure some of the gas of the comet's tail. A number of aspirator bottles will be used in collecting the atmosphere and the tests for hydrogen and helium, of which the tail is composed, will be made immediately after a quantity of the air is secured.

The tests will be made by the use of spectroscopes which Dr. Frankforter has already arranged. "There is nothing certain about the experiment," said the dean yesterday, "but theoretically it ought to work out and definite results should be obtained."

At the last faculty meeting, the members unanimously voted to establish a four-year course in music. If the board of regents act favorably upon it, the course will be established next year. Prof. Carlyle Scott, who holds the position of head of the department of music, says: "You have simply got to have a four-year course put in here. A university the size of this one to be so lacking in such an essential subject is almost inconceivable."

Students from surrounding towns who wish to take a full course in music can not get what they want here, but if the prescribed course is put in nothing more can be desired. The work will be in the college of science, literature and the arts, and the degree granted will be bachelor of music. The entrance requirements will be the same as for the college of science, literature and the arts, and the number of credits required are 126, not counting military drill or physical culture, which are to be required the same as for the B. A. degree. Forty-five of these credits are to be in subjects other than music.

Piano, harmony, history of music, counter point and composition will be taught and instructors in violin and voice will be added. Mathematics and one science, English, French, German or Italian will be required.

A complete course in life saving has been added to the men's physical culture courses, according to the latest plans of Dr. Cooke. All men taking gym. work are required to swim the length of the pool, holding a person simulating unconsciousness above the water. Diving for a dummy and bringing it to the surface is also to be a requirement of the revised course. Latest methods of resuscitation are being taught and by the end of the semester, the members of the different gym. classes will doubtless be efficient life-savers and will prove valuable and useful at summer resorts.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

FINE CORNER IN NORMAL SCHOOL DISTRICT SOLD

George E. Robson Purchases Triangular Tract on Sixth Street.

Activity in Market Runs to Small Deals in Residence Lots.

The biggest realty deal reported this week was the sale by Richardson, Day & Harrison to George E. Robson of block 6, East Lawn division, lot 17 and part lot 18, block 17, Longview division. The consideration is not named in the deed.

The property purchased by Mr. Robson is a triangular tract fronting 245 feet on the north side of Sixth street and 201 feet on Colorado avenue near Twenty-fourth avenue east. It is in the heart of the exclusive normal school district, is beautifully situated for residence purposes and is one of the most desirable tracts in the entire district. Mr. Robson is said to have no plans for its immediate improvement.

There has been no pronounced activity in the real estate market during the past week. In fact, real estate men admit that the prospects are not so bright as they have been during the past few months. There is no pessimism, however, for conditions are such that the market should not suffer a slump and real estate men look for greater activity later in the summer.

Most of the inquiry at present relates to low-priced residence lots and lots in new districts, to be purchased for speculative purposes. There is pronounced activity in the latter class of property. People with a few hundred dollars, who formerly rushed into the stock market and took a gambler's chance of making a "killing" or losing their savings, are now buying low-priced lots and waiting for the modest profit that they know will come. At least they have something tangible of value and the investment cannot possibly fizzle out entirely.

The activity in residence lots is general in its scope. It reaches from Fond du Lac to Lester Park and favors no one district. None of the deals being made are large, but the lots are not high in price and there are many people in the market, so that the aggregate is great.

There is one feature of the present market. Almost every transfer means the taking of a lot out of the market, as a comparatively small number are purchased for speculative purposes. Most of the purchases are for what one might call actual consumption. People purchase lots with the intention of building homes. The building of homes is the real development of the city. Every home means an increase to the size and a boost to the prosperity of the city and every lot taken out of the market on that account means that people who come later will have to go farther to supply their wants.

In connection with the building of homes, the companies building homes to be paid for on the installment plan in installments amounting to about the same figure as rent, are doing a great work. They are more numerous and more noticeable in the Duluth field this spring than they have ever been, although several old established companies, old and new, are booming their business. They are pointing out to the wage-earner and the moderate salaried clerk that the money he would pay for rent in ten years would pay for the house in which he lives. The argument is unanswerable. Hundreds of people are being convinced and the number of homes built on that plan in the city this year will be enormous.

The plan of home building has a marked effect on the real estate market. People, who would not buy lots when they have not the means for building a house, will get into the market for a lot and allow the home-building company to do the rest. All over the city lots are being purchased with that end in view and it is primarily responsible for the present activity in the low-priced residence lots.

MANY WILL MOVE MAY 1

Rents for All Classes of Property Are Same as Last Year.

Numerous Changes to Take Place in Downtown Business District.

Rentals are demanding the attention of real estate agencies this month, for May 1 is the date from which leases are made and renewed, and the different agents have been busy all this month securing signatures.

Despite the fact that there will be no general increase in rents, there will be considerable moving on and around May 1. The chronic movers, those who secure a new location each May 1, regardless of the adequacy or convenience of former quarters, will furnish the bulk of the work for the van men. Others will move into more pretentious quarters than those they now occupy, while still more will fall back from levels on which they find they cannot maintain themselves and their families.

Those who have not attended to their leases before this time will probably find themselves in the lurch, for most of the desirable places have been secured early in the month. There are a few vacant residence, store and office locations, but most of them are those which others have passed up. Those who have not secured locations already must take the best they can get now.

The Alworth building and other new buildings is the downtown district will cause the removal of a number of stores and offices, but the agents for the buildings affected say that the locations vacated have been quickly snapped up and the new buildings will not affect the general situation.

There will be a number of changes in the downtown district this spring. Among them are:

T. A. Reinhart to move from the Banning block to the Long block on East Superior street.

W. A. Abbett to move from the Banning block to the new Bradley block.

The Suffel shoe store to move from the Banning block to a new building to be erected at 103 West Superior street.

The Duluth Music company to move from First street to 30 East Superior street.

The Maccabee hall to move from the How building to a new building to be erected by Bridgeman & Russell.

The Gibson Barber Supply company to move to the new Sherwood building.

Robinson, Cary & Sands to move from the Black building to new Sherwood building.

The Minnesota Steel company to move from the Wolvin building and Board of Trade to new Sherwood building.

McClellan Paper company to move from First street to 12-14 West Michigan street.

Oak Hall Clothing company to move from Phoenix block to new Bradley building.

Pittsburg Coal company to move into Phoenix block.

Northern National bank to move to new Alworth building.

Soo line to move from Lyceum building to Phoenix block.

United States Express company to move from Palladio building to Commercial club building.

Charles Boyle to move one door west and shoe store to occupy Boyle's place.

Clark's shoe store to move from Lonsdale building to the Bradley building.

Interstate Auto company to move from Lake avenue to MacLeod & Smith's new building.

Huntley Printing company to move from First street to Michigan street.

Keystone Investment company to move to new building erected by W. M. Prindle on lower side of Superior street.

The fifteen-story Alworth building, which will be ready for occupancy May 1, will be almost entirely rented by the time it is ready to receive the tenants. Leases are being closed as rapidly as possible and there will probably not be a vacant office in the entire building by May 1.

GREATEST ACTIVITY IS IN BUILDING OF HOMES

Predictions of Building Boom This Year Have Gone Astray.

Duluth Compares Well With Other Cities on March Permits.

With a gain of 110 per cent over March, 1909, Duluth stands sixth among the cities of the country in percentage of gain, while it stands twenty-seventh in the value of work for which permits were issued during March, this year, according to the figures of Construction News on building permits for March in the principal cities of the country.

In Duluth, the permits issued during March, this year, were for work estimated to cost $548,820, while those issued in March 1909, were for work estimated to cost $260,309, a gain of 110 per cent. Davenport led the cities of the country in percentage of gain over March, a year ago, with a gain of 1,142 per cent. San Diego showed a gain of 354 per cent and Birmingham of 156 per cent. Fort Worth is next with 154 per cent, Toledo shows 113 per cent gain and Duluth is next.

Building is quiet in Duluth and there is a large number of men out of work, though many are engaged in remodeling and renovating. Little new work is coming out and builders are now looking forward to a comparatively quiet summer. It is certain that there will not be as much building as people expected. About the first of the year, those in touch with the building situation predicted the summer would be an unusually busy one, but their predictions are not being borne out by the developments.

One or two small business blocks and the seven-story Fidelity building will be erected on Superior street during the summer, but with those exceptions, there is very little work in the way of big buildings in prospect. Residence building will be unusually extensive, but that is a situation that is naturally expected in a growing city like Duluth. People coming here to live must have homes and homes to rent are not plentiful in Duluth. People who have faith in the city and have decided to settle here are building their own homes in preference to living in rented houses or flats and paying for the building in rents without having the benefit of ownership.

Bray & Nystrom have plans out for the Fidelity building to be erected on the lower side of Superior street between Lake avenue and First avenue east, and for the new district court building to be erected by the county at Virginia. Bids are being taken and the contracts will be awarded soon.

Austin Terryberry has awarded the contract to Richard Chambers for remodeling a building at Twelfth avenue west and Superior street for H. H. Phelps. The building will be remodeled so as to provide apartments for four families.

Kelly & Lignell have been commissioned to prepare plans for a courthouse to be built by Cook county at Grand Marais. The building will be a modern structure costing about $55,000.

• • •

The contract for the new residence to be erected for E. G. Bush at Woodland will be let soon. Kelly & Lignell will also have the plans for the new flat buildings to be erected in the East end out for figures next week.

• • •

W. A. Hunt has awarded the contract to Otto Johnson for the erection of the new residence for S. J. Colfax on Fifth street between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth avenues east. Macleod & Smith have the contract for the new building to be erected at 103 West Superior street by W. M. Prindle, agent. W. A. Hunt prepared the plans.

P. M. Olsen reports the following transactions in his office during the week:

Contracts were awarded for the three-story building to be erected for Charles Schober on the upper side of Superior street between Lake avenue and First avenue east. The general contract went to Hugh Fawcett, plumbing and heating to the A. McDougall Plumbing & Heating company and the electric wiring to the Burgess Electric company. The new building will have a 32-foot frontage on Superior street, will be three stories high and of brick and stone. The first floor will be arranged for a restaurant and bakery and the upper floors will be divided into apartments. The building will cost about $35,000.

Fraser & Faulkner were awarded the general contract for the residence to be erected for S. H. Bingham at the corner of Colorado avenue and Allen avenue. The A. McDougall Plumbing & Heating company will do the plumbing and heating work and George Schuler the electric wiring. The residence will be a modern frame and stucco building costing about $7,000.

Farland & Le Vasseur were awarded the general contract for a residence to be erected by the Alliance Real Estate corporation at the northeast corner of Nineteenth avenue east and Fifth street. Stack Bros. will do the plumbing and heating work. The residence will be a modern building costing about $3,500.

Mr. Olsen is preparing plans for a garage for George Martin. It will be built on East First street and will cost about $1,500.

George Tucker was awarded the general contract for the erection of a bungalow to be built by the Lakeside Land company on McCulloch street between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth avenues east. The A. McDougall Plumbing & Heating company was awarded the plumbing and heating contract and George Scaller will do the electric wiring.

Mr. Olson is taking bids on a two-story brick and stone store and flat building to be erected for Wellberg & Swanson on Third street between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth avenues west. It will be a modern building costing about $10,000.

Plans are being prepared for a residence to be erected by the Alliance Real Estate corporation at Eighth avenue east and Sixth street. It will cost about $2,500.

Plans are being prepared for a two-story frame and stucco residence to be erected for M. Jacobs on the west side of Eighteenth avenue east between Fourth and Fifth streets. It will cost about $5,000.

Mr. Olsen is preparing plans for a building to be arranged for lodge and club purposes. It will be erected by O. J. Olson at Knife River and will cost about $3,500.

Plans are being prepared for remodeling the residence of H. Hornby at Cloquet.

Mr. Olsen is preparing plans for a bungalow to be erected at Fond du Lac by John H. Brigham. It will cost about $3,500.

MANY WILD CAT SCHEMES

"Look Before You Buy in Florida," Say Returning Duluthians.

Some Good Land But Many Propositions Are Not Meritorious.

Duluthians who have recently returned from Florida say that the land investment schemes that are being presented to the people of the Northwest are of such a nature that all prospective investors should make diligent inquiry into the particular propositions which they have under consideration.

While there are legidimate land investment enterprises in that state, concerns of this sort are said to be greatly outnumbered by those possessing much less intrinsic worth to commend them to the public. Wild-cat booms are flourishing in that region, largely as a result of the widespread advertising in magazines and newspapers that the "new industrial South" has been given.

Duluth people who are invited to buy tracts of Florida land are earnestly advised by those who have been in that state to see for themselves what they are buying before they put their money into the land. While it is not asserted by any of the travelers who have returned from the South that all of the companies and concerns engaged in the sale of these lands are unworthy of confidence, they do make the assertion that the land in Florida that really is worth while, cannot be bought. It is held by people who know what it is worth and who are getting big incomes from the land they hold. They do not want to sell, and there is every reason why they should not sell.

One resident of Duluth, who has just returned from Florida, says that when the Everglades of that state are drained, which he believes is a future certainty, it will be found necessary to resort to irrigation to make the land productive in the slightest degree.

"The land on Minnesota Point is of the same character as that one will find all over Florida, with certain tracts excepted," said a man who had been in Florida within the last month. He concluded with the remark that the land worth owning, so far as he had observed, was small in its aggregate area.

Some of the travelers say that while the foregoing statements are, in the main, accurate, there may be found comparatively small and isolated tracts upon which a settler may, if he is endowed with perseverance and ability, make a living.

WEST DULUTH'S INDUSTRIES

THE AMERICAN CARBOLITE COMPANY'S PLANT.

From its big plant in West Duluth, the American Carbolite company ships calcium carbide all over the United States. The plant is one of the new industries of West Duluth, but from it West Duluthians expect much in the future.

The plant was first put in operation about three years ago. The first two years were filled with difficulties in the shape of litigation over patents and an assignment and a reorganization. The plant is now working smothely, however, and is shipping steadily.

The buildings and grounds of the company cover nine acres. About 100 men are employed constantly and the payroll amount to about $3,500 a month.

Let Us Be the Good Samaritan

And build you a home. You will be your own landlord, instead of letting the other fellow reap the benefits of your labor. Let us build the home and you pay us the rent you are now paying the landlord, and in the course of a few years the home is yours. The way property is increasing in value every day will give you a profit on your money should you decide to sell. What does this increased valuation mean? That you have had a home all these years practically without rent, and you have a snug sum of money.

SAYS WOMAN PAID HIM TO KILL HER HUSBAND.

Chicago, April 16.—Charged with conspiring to murder the woman's husband, Ignatz Kizlorek, Mrs. Frances Kizlorek, 45 years old, John Boukowski, 18 years old, and John Grzybowski, 17 years old, have been held to the grand jury. Under examination Grzybowski said that Mrs. Kizlorek had asked him to shoot her husband, push him under a streetcar or throw him into the river. Grzybowski admitted receiving $135 from Mrs. Kizlorek as a bribe to kill Kizlorek. Although he had purchased a revolver, Grzybowski said that he did not intend to kill Kizlorek.

Fireman Is Killed.

MARINE NEWS

BIG FLEET GOT AWAY

Sixteen Boats in All Left Harbor During the Night.

Advance Guard of the Pittsburg Fleet Arrives in Port.

Even a larger fleet than was expected got under way last night.

In all, sixteen boats left the harbor for Erie ports, between midnight and early this morning. The C. O. Jenkins sneaked out a little ahead of the other boats and on the departure book is recorded as leaving yesterday instead of today, as are all of the other boats.

There are a number of boats that are expected to get under way today. The Muncy and Delaware of the Anchor line are expected to go out some time during the day. These boats, however, may not get out of the harbor before tomorrow morning, as they have had some dock delay which may tie them up all of today.

In addition to the two Anchor line boats that were left at the post, so to speak, there are the Northern Light and North Wind of the Mutual line, which are expected to go out today. These boats are loaded with flour for Erie ports. The Northern Wave of the same company got away with the big fleet last night.

The Ward Ames and George W. Peavey are two more boats expected to clear today.

The book of arrivals shows the Rogers and Buffington of the Pittsburg fleet which got in early this morning from Cleveland.

Crews of these boats state that there is a large fleet on its way to the Head of the Lakes from the lower lakes, and that a large number of Steel company's boats wil be here the first of the week.

The Frick and the Sir William Siemens are expected here tomorow or Monday at the latest.

LUMBER BOATS ARE RELEASED

Believed to Be Little Damaged As Result of Stranding.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 16.—A special to the Sentinel from Sturgeon Bay, Wis., says: The steamer Niko, Capt. J. Jennings, and tow, barges Delta, Red Fern and Tuxbury, went ashore at an early hour this morning off Clay Banks, ten miles south of the canal, the stranding being caused by a haze that hung over the water, resulting in the skipper missing his bearings. The tug Smith and life savers at the canal went to the stranded boats and after working all day, succeeded in releasing the Niko, Delta and Redfern. The Tuxbury was still on at 6 o'clock last night.

From what can be learned they were not much damaged. None of the boats have returned here. First reports give wrong names of the boats, which all belong to the Edward Hines Lumber company. They were light and bound to this and ports further north.

CAVALIERI WILL MARRY CHANLER

Singer Cables Acceptance of Millionaire Ex-Sherif as Fiance.

New York, April 16.—After waiting for his answer since March 30, Robert Winthrop Chanler, millionaire clubman and politician, has received the tidings that Mme. Lina Cavalieri will become his wife. Mme. Cavalieri, when she sailed, promised to send her answer to the proposal on March 15. It came in this cablegram from Paris, addressed to Chanler:

"I will accept your proposition on condition it happen on my return to New York next season."

"All right. 'Tis a long wait, but a wise one."

Last night Mr. Chanler gave a bachelor dinner. Henry Clews, Jr., one of his guests made the announcement and Chanler confirmed it. The prospective bridegroom is a grandson of John Jacob Astor, a brother of former Lieut. Governor Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler and was formerly sheriff of Duchess county.

COL. ROBINSON FOR GOVERNOR

Traill County Republicans Urge Him for Republican Nomination.

Mayville, N. D., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—If Col. W. H. Robinson of this city will only say the word there are hundreds of Republicans in Traill county who will boost for him for the Republican nomination for governor. A few of his friends from this side of the county met with others at Hillsboro this week and discussed the matter quietly.

They believe that the colonel will make the ideal harmony candidate for the Republicans of the state and is the "man of the hour," if he will give his consent to make the race.

Col. Robinson is one of the best known lumbermen in the state. He was national Republican committeeman during the first McKinley campaign, has attended many national conventions and was one of Mark Hanna's most trusted lieutenants. He is an enthusiastic Republican but has never been identified with either faction of the party in this state as he has been so engrossed in business affairs the last few years he had not participated strongly since he served as state senator.

ADVANCES IN COPPER MARKET

Trading Is Light, But Tone Is Buoyant and Prices Go Up.

The coper market was in a good position today. Although trading was light the buying power was well sustained and the market advanced steadily from the opening. There was no liquidation and the undertone was excellent, especially considering the fact that in the face of holidays there has been liquidation invariably in the last three or four months.

The copper metal market is fairly active, but at the expense of values which declined to levels that obtained last fall. The large increase in the surplus of the metal stocks in March seems to have taken the courage from many who had expected to see the production curtailed or held down to the consumption, which is the largest in the history of the country. The production, however, has been in excess of the consumption. It is clear that the metal can not maintain a sustained advance until the surplus is substantially reduced.

Factors in the market are mixed and there is not likely to be a heavy buying movement until the situation clears. The outlook is better than for some time.

In the local market Butte-Balaklava sold at $9.87½; Greene at $9.87½; Red Warrior at $2.18¾ to $2.25; Warrior at $12.87½ to $12.50 and then at $12.37½; Calumet & Montana at 90c to $1; Calumet & Corbin at 85 cents; Calumet & Sonora at $20.31¼ to $20.50; Keating at $1.43¾.

Amalgamated sold at $76.50 to $77.62½ and down to $77.37½; Butte Coalition at $22.75 to $23.12½; Calumet & Arizona at $66 to $67 to $66.75; Giroux at $8.87½ to $8.62½; Greene at $9.75 to $10.37½ and then at $10.25; Lake at $58.25 to $60.25; North Butte at $40 to $41; Steel common at $87.37½ to $87.87½.

Gay & Sturgis say concerning Cactus: "The upraise and its tributary workings, fifty-five feet above the 300-foot level of the Hamilton shaft at Cactus, are developing a body of 3 per cent sulphide ore, which is richer than the average ore of the district. It was in the workings tributary to this upraise that the body of 60 per cent carbonate ore was encountered a few weeks ago. The other workings in Cactus are advancing in satisfactory ground.

"The exploratory churn drill has been delivered, which will be used to test the ground north of the Cactus fault. In this ground lies an ore body isolated from the one being developed by the Hamilton and Pinto shafts, and believed to be better and more extensive. Important developments are looked for from this drill exploration within the next thirty to sixty days.

"Consulting Engineer C. W. Pritchett is expected at Cactus during the latter part of April."

The pumps at the 1,200-foot level of the Briggs shaft of Superior & Pittsburg are installed. Three drifts are extending from this level towards the Junction and Hoatson shafts. The Junction shaft has cut an ore body running as high at 35 per cent and averaging about 11 per cent copper at the 1,500-foot level, which is regarded as identical with ore bodies of the same grade at the 1,300 and 1,400-foot levels. A winz is being sunk below the 1,500 in this ore.

Live Oak is putting down its vertical shaft from the 325 to the 400-foot level. Its lateral openings are being driven much more rapidly by the use of power drills and churn drills will also soon be at work. The prospects for a large increase in tonnage are excellent. The management estimates that the property has developed 1,250,000 tons worth $1,875,000 or $37 a share on the 50,000 shares of the company's stock. As the shaft is now 156 feet in ore and if it should be continued seventy-five feet further in ore it would increase the indicated tonnage 50 per cent; consequently this development will be watched by the shareholders with considerable interest.

It is said that by June 1 the Shattuck-Arizona surplus will be at least $800,000. It is asserted that a dividend rate of 75 cents a quarter will be established about June 1. These reports, of course, cannot be confirmed at this early date. It is reliably learned, however, that developments at the property have been extremely favorable.

The Keating Gold company will be in a position to begin heavy commercial shipments in about two months. It can then begin to lay by a surplus for dividend requirements, according to Julius H. Barnes, one of the directors and heaviest stockholders. The new shaft has reached the 500-foot level and drifting has started on that level. The shaft will be sunk another 100 feet within the next sixty days.

The electric wires, twenty-two miles long, have reached the mine, all the machinery is on the ground, and the mine will be operated by electricity in six weeks. There are 102 men working at the mine, all but eighteen being engaged on the new development work and the installing of the new machinery. The Keating will be a low-cost producer, and Consulting Engineer Pritchett's friends say that his written report on the Keating is the strongest indorsement that he has ever put out on any mine.

WORK IS GOING ALONG SMOOTHLY

Census Enumerators Meeting With Courteous Treatment From Duluth People.

The taking of the census is going along smoothly in Duluth, according to Byron L. Hollister, supervisor of the census, and J. W. Allen, assistant supervisor for St. Louis county. All of the enumerators are at work and they are meeting with courteous treatment on all sides.

The enumerators were called into the central office of the supervisor either last night or this morning for an inspection of the first day's sheets. Errors were corrected and the enumerators were instructed further in their duties where such instruction seemed necessary.

"On the whole, we have a good corps of enumerators," said Mr. Hollister this morning. "The first day's work shows that they have a proper conception of their duties, and while we found some mistakes, they were mistakes in comparatively trivial details that are readily remedied.

"The enumerators have met with courteous treatment and ready response has been given to their appeals for assistance. People having roomers and boarders have shown a disposition to aid the enumerators in getting data on everybody, and I believe the census of Duluth will be taken without a hitch. I believe when the work is finished, the count will be accurate and complete and that the work will be efficiently done."

GIVES TO HARVARD.

Agassiz Wills $100,000 for Museum of Comparative Zoology.

Newport, R. I., April 16.—Harvard university is generously remembered in the will of the late famous scientist, Alexander Agassiz.

To the president and fellows of that institution, for the general uses of the museum of comparative zoology, is bequeathed $100,000, and for the publication of memoirs of Prof. Agassiz' scientific expeditions an equal sum. The American Academy of Arts and Sciences receives $50,000 and the National Academy of Sciences $50,000.

After numerous bequests to relatives and family servants, the residue of the estate is divided among three sons.

Should the family at any time become extinct, the estate is to revert to Harvard university.

WOULD GIVE PENSIONS TO CIVIL WAR NURSES.

Washington, April 16.—A pension of $12 a month for each of the nurses who served in the federal army during the Civil war, is provided in a bill reported to the senate by Senator Scott from the committee on pensions. There are fewer than 200 of these nurses now living, and the expense of the pension would be less than $20,000 a year.

WISCONSIN NOT ALLOWED TO PRESENT ITS CASE.

Washington, April 16.—After counsel for Mert H. Vought of Morse, Wis., under sentence for confinement for one year and nine months on a charge of larceny of several alleged town orders, had presented his appeal from the judgment of the Wisconsin courts yesterday, the supreme court of the United States declined to listen to the presentation of the side of the state. The counsel attacked the constitutionality of the Wisconsin statute providing for jury commissioners. The action of the court was taken as a forerunner of an early decision adverse to Vought.

AIRS SCANDAL OF FRIAR LANDS

Martin Openly Accuses the Administration of Exploiting the Islands.

Washington, April 16.—Representative Martin, Democrat, of Colorado, who for weeks has been waging a fight in the house in an effort to show that the Friar lands of the Philippine Islands are being seized by the "sugar trust" with the acquiescence of Attorney General Wickersham and the war department, last night gave to the press an interview in which he reviews his efforts, assails the government officials alleged to be involved, charges that information which would prove his contentions is being withheld by the war department, and demands a full congressional inquiry into the matter.

Mr. Martin characterizes the action of the Republicans of the house in defeating his resolution calling upon the war department for information in regard to the sale of Friar lands, as a "olanketing move."

"Discrepancies" in Reports.

He points out a number of alleged discrepancies in the reports sent by the war department to the house committees on insular affairs concerning the Friar land transaction, and accuses the government officials of duplicity.

He charges the administration with having begun a "policy of exploitation in the Philippines" and declares that "if it has been falsely accused, let it take off the lid." Mr. Martin announced that he was preparing a new resolution of inquory into the Friar land deal, which he said he would introduce in the house as soon as he had finished drafting it.

War department officials say that the statement made by Representative Martin is not worthy of serious consideration, as he "had taken the facts in the case and garbled them" to make it appear as if the government had been a party to the wrongdoings. It was said that the records furnished to the insular committee by the war department would prove that the department had acted in the matter with perfect propriety.

NO NAVY VESSELS ON GREAT LAKES

Congress Is Told That Rush-Bagot Treaty Forbids Their Presence.

Washington, April 16.—Secretary Meyer in a communication to the house has indorsed a former opinion of the navy department that the construction of naval vessels on the Great Lakes would constitute a violation of the Rush-Pagot convention of 1817.

This statement was in reply to a house resolution, asking why the appropriation for the building of a gunboat in these waters, authorized in 1898, had not been expended, and whether any steps had been taken to remove any obstacles to construction there.

Secretary Meyer says when congress authorized the construction of a gunboat in 1898, the navy asked the state department if the navy was justified in proceeding with the construction under the treaty mentioned, and the state department replied in he negative.

Considered in 1900.

The United States and Canada joint commission considered the question of the right to build a vessel on the lakes in 1900. It became evident that Great Britain was prepared to stipulate for total disarmament on the lakes but the commission adjourned without final conclusion in the matter. The navy department advised the secretary of state on Feb. 28, 1906, that "it would seem to be to the best interests of the United States if the Rush-Bagot convention could be terminated at once." There have been no subsequent steps.

LAND FRAUD CASE APPEAL ARGUED

Hyde and Schneider Have Hearing in District of Columbia.

Washington, April 16.—Arguments have been begun before the court of appeals of the District of Columbia on the appeal of Frederick A. Hyde of San Francisco and Joost H. Schneider of Tucson, Ariz., from the conviction June 22, 1908, of a conspiracy to defraud the United States out of large tracts of land in Oregon and other Western states. The sentence imposed by the lower court was a fine of $10,000 and two years in the penitentiary as to Hyde and $1,000 fine and one year and two months for Schneider.

The trial in the criminal court occupied eleven weeks. Forty-eight assignments for error formed the basis of appeal. The appellate court reserved the entire sessions of today and Monday for the hearing of the case.

SILENT SMITH'S MOTHER HAS HER HORSES KILLED.

Chicago, April 16.—Two handsome black horses, property of the late Mrs. Beatrice Smith of Chicago, mother of the late James H. ("Silent") Smith, were chloroformed here today in accordance with the dying wish of their owner, who preferred that they be killed rather than to fall into possession of some one who might mistreat them.

WHEAT HAS SHARP BREAK

The Market Slumps Near Close on Heavy Liquidation.

Bears Have Things Their Own Way---Flax Also Weak.

Duluth Board of Trade, April 16.—Wheat lost 1⅜c here today and declines were about as severe in other American markets. In the Southwest the break was especially sharp, St. Louis May declining 2⅛@2¼. May opened here at $1.09¾, declined to $1.09½, gained the opening and slumped to $1.09⅜ and then sharply to $1.07⅞, closing with bids at that price. July opened with bids at $1.10⅛, sold at $1.10, gained ¼c, declined to $1.10 and then to $1.09¾, sold up to $1.09⅞ and slumped to $1.08⅞@1.09, closing $1.08¾ bid.

Flax was lifeless and declined. May opened at $2.44 and lost 3c, closing $2.41. July opened at $2.39 and lost 1c, closing $2.38 asked. September opened $1.87 and lost 4c, gained 1c and closed $1.84 asked. October sold at $1.76 down to $1.74½ and closed with bids at $1.74.

Oats closed ⅜c off; rye unchanged; barley the same, and durum ⅜c off. Trade in course grades was fairly good.

Liquidation today was heavy. Much of the wheat offered appeared to be long stuff. The market was dominated by bearish factors from the beginning. Cables were weaker, the weather is ideal for the growing wheat in the Southwest, the cash business is lifeless and flour trade is dead. Mills have large orders booked ahead but cannot get shipping directions.

While the market was somewhat oversold at the opening, causing higher prices than yesterday's close at the beginning of today, yet the professional element was bearish and immediately began selling on the bulge. In the fore part of the day the market showed fits of strength, which were only temporary. The efforts of the bulls were feeble and they soon desisted. Long lines of wheat came into the market, which had the added pressure of short selling. Plenty of stuff was offered and it was difficult to sell. The market was extremely heavy.

The weather played an important part today. It was cloudy and cool in the Southwest. Freezing weather was reported in many places. Snow fell in some places in Kansas and Nebraska, and frost is reported for tonight. The frost, however, will not hurt the growing plant if it materializes. The weather could hardly be more favorable for the growing wheat. In the Northwest sleet and some snow fell in many parts of North Dakota, which will give the newly planted grain considerable moisture. While rains fell in North Dakota this week, yet there was far from being too much moisture in the ground.

Farmers are selling wheat. This applies to the Southwest as well as to the Northwest. They are no longer bullish. On the week's decline which carried values down 4c here the country has fed out supplies so that stocks have increased in a period which last year showed decided decreases. The members of the American Society of Equity, apparently, have given up their hope of $1.25 wheat as an idle dream, and are now willing to accept what they can get for the stuff in a top-heavy market.

The cash situation is lifeless. This week cash wheat declined 5c here. It is now on a parity with the May option. In Minneapolis cash is ¾c@½c over for choice. The demand is slow. The weakness in cash is the leading factor in the liquidation of May and July. Spring wheat millers find markets well supplied and the inquiry is slow. The output is much smaller than a year ago. The weakness in May is more pronounced as the cash situation exercises more direct on wheat for May delivery than on the July option. The desire to unload May is manifest from the difference between the prices of the two options, which today at the close was ⅞c in the favor of July.

Some durum wheat has been taken here for export and receipts are lighter. There is said to be about 4,000,000 bu wheat here for the Eastern milling demand and for export, but there is only a minimum of new business being done. Boats are offered at 1¼c to Buffalo.

Cash Sales Saturday.

Lewis, Minneapolis, wired Baker—"I hear Washburn-Crosby are offering flour for shipment in Central states for $4.85. There may be something in it as they bought little September here yesterday. If it is true then some of the flour buyers who purchased up in August are going to feel sick. Manager of Southern Minnesota mill just told me they had more flour sold for late shipment than ever before and had to close down last night for lack of shipping instructions. This is true of all mills big or little in every part of country and it is making a weak cash situation which will tell in time."

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool—"Unexpected steadiness in America yesterday in the face of bearish conditions prompted some covering with offerings lighter and values were unchanged to ⅛d lower. Following the opening the market developed selling pressure on talk of large Russian shipments this week and the weakness in Manitoba spots here with Canadian offerings liberal values declined freely. Toward the close there was speculative buying of the distant months while in May liquidation continued on a liberal scale and at the close values were ⅜d to ¼d lower. Corn continues entirely normal and unquoted. Weather in Australia is too dry for seeding and rain is wanted. Holders are becoming reserved and selling for distant delivery has stopped."

"Week's prevailing changes have been for the better of crop conditions," says the Price Current. "Some rain, but more needed. Oats seeding favorably accomplished. Good start, enlarged acreage. Early pasture lessening cattle marketing. Fruit outlook good."

An official report on wheat stocks in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta gives farm reserves March 31 at 18.9 per cent, or 26,682,000 bu out of a crop of 147,482,000 bu. Last year reserves were 18.93 per cent, or 17,391,000 bu, out of a crop of 91,853,000 bu in 1908. Reserves of oats were 45.55 per cent, against 45.93 per cent last year.

"We are looking for at least a 20,000,000-bu wheat crop this year," said the Oklahoma Grain Dealer's report. "Late general rains covered the entire wheat belt and from two to three inches of rain fell. This will place wheat in good condition and will be beneficial to oats as well as to corn not yet come up."

Special crop reports issued by Finley Barrell & Co. follow:

Argentine—Fairly liberal shipments are recorded for this week, although arrivals from the interior are small and quality poor. Argentina wheat will move very slowly for the balance of the season.

Australia—The strike is over, and men returned to work this week. Vessels already loaded aggregate about 11,000,000 bushels, which will move as rapidly as railroads bring forward the coal. The movement of Australian wheat will be exceedingly slow, as every railroad siding is filled with loaded cars, and the congestion of freight ocasioned by the strike will be slow in disappearing. Seeding of the new crop has commenced under favorable conditions.

India—Nothing further has been heard from India this week, and conditions are, therefore, satisfactory.

Europe—More favorable outlook is reported from all countries, and decided improvement is noted in France and Great Britain. Favorable weather has been experienced in all sections of the United Kingdom.

Russia—Reports, both official and private, are favorable. The Southwest has one of the best outlooks in recent years. The Southeast condition is irregular, but weather is favorable. The large shipments of Russian wheat are causing decreases in stocks at Southern ports, but interior stocks reported phenomenally heavy.

United States—Winter wheat: The past week has seen a complete breaking of the drouth which existed in the Southwest, more particularly Kansas and Nebraska. Scattered rain falls in these two states followed yesterday and today by soaking and general rains which were reported from every section of the state and ample moisture has been experienced to carry the crop forward for several weeks. The rain fall has extended east through the winter wheat belt, and advices received this morning show heavy rains in Ohio, a section which has just begun to need rain. Mr. Le Count reports conditions greatly improved in Kansas. To quote his own words: "One can scarcely believe the improvement that this country has shown since my last visit here. The soil is thoroughly soaked, and one can almost see the wheat grow. Of course, the large area winter killed is gone, and the loss was too great to overcome, but I think it possible, though not probable, that Kansas can raise 75,000,000 bushels this season. Everything is favorable for the crop in Western Kansas. Rains experienced in Illinois, Indiana and Missouri earlier in the week have allayed all apprehension, and our Mr. Kinyon, who was this week in Indiana and Ohio, reports that everywhere the wheat is beginning to show up in splendid condition. Plants healthy and large, deeply rooted, and while in some places the stand is thin, yet stooling is going on under the most favorable conditions. Summing up the winter wheat situation as a whole, all apprehension in regard to conditions of winter wheat for the next week have been removed by the general rains experienced. Improvement is noted in every section of the belt, and present outlook is favorable.

Spring wheat—During the past week the bulk of the seeding this side of the international boundary has been accomplished, and with some few exceptions in North Dakota, and Northern Minnesota, the seed is in the ground, and in much of the spring wheat country the fields are green. The seeding of this wheat under the most perfect conditions, coupled with dry weather which forced the roots deep in order to secure moisture, means that the spring wheat plant this year will be a hardy proposition, and able to stand much grief later on. Rains over the entire spring wheat states experienced during the last forty-eight hours will help the seeded plant materially. North of the border from 50 to 75 per cent of the seeding is completed over a largely increased acreage. The percentage of increase south of the boundary is estimated at 10; north of the boundary at 12 to 15 per cent.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Keep Within Narrow Limits in Early Trade.

Chicago, April 16.—Wheat prices in the early trading today kept within narrow limits. The start was generally steady with indications of strong bearish sentiment. Commission houses were active on both sides of the market with September the favorite investment. In the first hour the distant option gathered strength and advanced ½c from its low point touching $1.01⅛. July made an early advance of similar proportions and sold at $1.03¼, sagging slightly a little later to $1.02⅞. Fears of drought damage were less general although danger to the growing crop from cold which is general through the western wheat belt gave many traders concern.

July opened unchanged to ¼c higher at $1.03 to $1.03¼, while September started ¼@¼c lower ta ⅛@¼c higher at $1.00⅝ to $1.01.

Abundant offerings flooded the pit in the final half of the session. July fell off 1⅜c and September 1⅛c from the high point. The close was weak all around at nearly the bottom with July 1@⅛c off at $1.01⅞@1.02, and September ¾c off at $1.00@⅛.

In the corn pit prices started unchanged to ⅛c higher and influenced by a good demand gained firmness in the first hour. May moving from 58½c to 58¾@58⅞c and resting with the other futures at the high point. Opening prices for the May delivery were 58⅝c to 58½c.

The slump in wheat extended to the corn pit late in the session and prices dragged. May declined from 58¾@⅞c to 57⅜c. The close was weak with May off ⅝c at 57⅞c.

Trading in oats was without feature, the market following the course of corn and keeping within narrow bounds through the first hour. May moved between 42⅞ and 43c, its opening figures, and the other months showed slightly greater firmness. At the outset May was a shade lower, to a shade higher.

Liberal offerings of all classes of products sent provision prices down at the start and the demand was inadequate to cunteract the pressure. Pork fell off 20@55c; lard from 7½@25c, and ribs from 12½@40c at the start, and in the first hour hugged the bottom.

Opening prices for the May products were: Pork, $21.70; lard, $12.52½@12.47½, and ribs, $12.30.

The decline continued through the day and all products fell off, May pork closing 92½c down at $21.05.

Cotton Market.

New York, April 16.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 to 4 points on over-night buying orders, although the cables were slightly disappointing. Europe was a buyer early, but bulls gave prices no aggressive support, and the market eased off. Reports of too much rain in the central belt imparted a relatively steady tone to the new crop, however, and prices rallied on covering.

Futures closed steady; closing bids: April 14.94; May, 14.84; June, 14.55; July, 14.57; August, 13.87; September, 12.95; October, 12.45; November, 12.31; December, 12.30; January, 12.28. Spot closed quiet. Middling uplands, 15.25; Middling gulf, 15.50. Sales, 200 bales.

TRADING IS VERY DULL

Slight Activity for a While on Buying of Copper Stocks.

General List Little Affected and the Close Is Irregular.

New York, April 16.—Opening prices of stocks today showed mixed changes and the trading was quite brisk. The low range of quotations in London pulled down some of the international stocks a fraction. International Paper preferred declined 1. Federal Mining preferred rose 1, American Steel Foundries ⅜.

Dealings livened for a while on active buying of the copper stocks, but when that demand was satisfied trading again became lifeless. Amalgamated Copper advanced 1⅝, American Smelting, Anaconda, Erie and the first preferred 1. Kanawha & Michigan certificates improved 5½.

The market closed irregular. The aggressive advance in the copper stocks was of slight effect on the general list. Rumors were current of heavy sales of copper metal as a result of the weeks cut in prices. The speculation in general was inclined to await next weeks showing of the extent to which public interest in stocks has been aroused by this week's rise.

Federal Mining preferred sold at an advance of 9¾ Algamated Copper 2⅜, American Smelting 2, Anaconda 1½, Utah Copper 1¼ and Great Northern ore certificates, Southern Railway preferred, Minneapolis & St. Louis, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred, American Tobacco preferred and American Linseed 1. Profit-taking sales caused recessions in the late dealings.

New York stock quotations furnished The Herald by Piper, Johnson & Case.

COPPER STOCK BROKERS.

404 West First Street, Commercial Building.

APRIL 15, 1910.

We are having an elegant market. The exchange is getting to be a much busier place and trading is getting heavier every day. The copper share market is here to stay regardless of what many believe. The big market is steadily advancing and good times are in sight for those who own good securities. Remember, good securities mean good good securities.

Butte-Ballaklava is strong; mine is now a steady shipper. I would suggest trading such stocks as Greene-Cananea, Superior & Pittsburg and North Butte for this issue. It is a new mine and earnings will be very big for years to come.

Amazon-Montana is a development company. The property is one of great promise and there is no limit to its great possibilities. I think if you buy this one at $3.50 you are getting it on the bottom. It is going to become a real live issue again. Remember it is far from being a dead issue. Take my tip and get it as cheap as you can, but buy the stock.

St. Mary's is again real live and there seems to be an advance in sight. Everybody wants to buy it at 20 cents and therefore it is reasonable to expect a much higher price. A few cents cuts no figure in such a low priced stock.

Butte-Alex Scott has the lid on and you could not advance the price of shares with a jack screw. While this state of affairs exists do you not think it would be the proper thing to take on some of this stock when they want to sell so badly? A stock selling at $3.25 with possibilities of earning $6.00 a year on every share looks good to me. This one has already arrived and ten men stoping out of one big ore chute on the 1,400-foot level could simply pile money into the treasury of the company. I have seen the big deposit of ore.

Buying Stocks at the Beginning of a Boom

Everybody concedes that we are entering on a boom in Vermilion Iron Range Stocks.

Today it is almost impossible to purchase in companies operating on the Main Iron Formation, with railroad already on their land.

THE TIME TO BUY IRON STOCKS is at the beginning of the Iron Stock Boom, when you can purchase at Subscription Prices, and that time is NOW!

There are TEN GOOD REASONS why you should buy Duluth-Vermilion Iron. Write me and I will tell you what they are.

SPEAKERS ASSIGNED

Sunday Will Be "Round-Up Day" for Missionary Movement.

Special Services Will Be Held in All Duluth Churches.

Sunday will be general "round up day" for the laymen of all the protestant churches in Duluth, Superior and surrounding cities and towns. Every church has a strong missionary committee which will canvass the men of the churches for the banquet and convention. Every man in Duluth is invited to attend.

Dinners and mass meetings are being held in the city and country, and it is confidently expected that Duluth is about to undergo a tremendous religious revival. The Armory for the evening of April 22 will be taxed to the limit to hold the men at the opening banquet. With the most careful seating arrangement not over 1,200 men can be seated, even using the galleries.

The entertainment committee, consisting of L. A. Barnes, chairman, N. M. Young, A. C. LeDuc, Andrew Nelson, Bert Wheeler and S. S. Williamson, is bending every effort to make this one of the most interesting banquets in the history of the city. The Armory will be elaborately decorated with naval and marine flags, and banners, and mottoes from the laymen's national organization. The Normanna male chorus of Duluth will occupy a separate table and furnish the music while the familiar hymns of the church and nation will be sung by over 1,200 men en masse.

The ladies of the various churches of the city, led by the Y. W. C. A., are preparing the food and will serve. This is a tremendous undertaking in itself. There will be several great addresses on the "Significance of the Movement," "Men and Missions," and "America's World Responsibility."

Word has been received that Dr. Percy Silver, former chaplain of the United States army, who spent several years in the Philippines, and who is a most inspring speaker, will deliver one of these addresses. Dr. Isaac Headland of China, the great university worker in that field, will deliver the address on "Men and Missions." Dr. Headland has spent many years in China, and has addressed a large number of these great conventions this year. The committee is arranging for several other noted speakers, whose names will be announced in a few days.

Mass Meetings.

Arrangements for mass meetings tomorrow have been made, one being held at the Y. M. C. A. at 3:30 p. m., at which meeting George Innis of Minneapolis will speak. The women in the city and of the Y. W. C. A. will join in this meeting. Prof. R. E. Denfeld and Rev. J. A. McGaughey will speak at the Endion M. E. church at 4:30 p. m., and the executive secretary of the movement, A. V. Snell, will address a union meeting at the Lester Park M. E. church at 8 p. m.

Arrangements for the convention are being rapidly perfected, and the speakers for the convention will begin to arrive the early part of next week. Large delegations from outside the city are expected.

It is definitely announced that on Sunday afternoon, April 24, at 3:30 p. m., there will be a mass meeting of all the women of the city in the auditorium of the First Presbyterian church. Dr. Isaac T. Headland of China, George Heber Jones of Korea and others, yet to be arranged for, will address this meeting.

The assignment of speakers for tomorrow follows:

Baptist—First, George Buck, W. B. Patton.

Christian—E. A. Risden.

Congregational—Pilgrim, Phil Bevis, A. Nelson.

Episcopal—St. Paul's, A. V. Snell; St. Peters, C. A. Knippenburg; Trinity, Rev. Thurston of Minneapolis; St. John's, W. E. Magner.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep can not be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southers, Eau Claire, Wis., says:—"For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney Pills as I know they have cured me." For sale by all lruggists.

COMPARISON WAS NOT A FAIR ONE.

Frederick C. Rudd, chief engineer of the Spalding hotel, commenting on the published statement of Engineer Williams of the courthouse, who said that the smoke nuisance is absolutely unnecessary, says that it is not just to compare conditions at the courthouse with those that obtain in private buildings.

The business structures of the city are built for profit, he says, and the devices and contrivances with which the authorities are able to equip public buildings that are not built for profit, cannot be so readily available for these business buildings.

With this consideration in mind it must be admitted, he says, that it is not quite fair to accuse firemen employed in other than public buildings of incompetence. Waste of fuel is guarded against in every way possible and no effort is spared to minimize the smoke evil so far as that be done in the furnace room.

PINE CITY WINNERS.

High School Students Defeat Duluth Team in Debate.

Pine City, Minn., April 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Pine City debaters made the better showing in the discussion of the negative side of the initiative and referendum debate with a team from the Duluth high here last night according to the judges. The winning team is composed of Philip Hamlin, Noble Clark and George Wandel. The judges were John Dwan of Two Harbors, Mr. Sohlberg of Center City, Minn., and Mr. Elmquist of Rush City. O. Sobotka presided.

FAVORS VOTES FOR WOMEN

Rabbi Lefkovits Advocates Suffrage in Sermon at Temple.

Rabbi Lefkovits spoke on "Women's Suffrage" last evening in the weekly service at Temple Emanuel. Dr. Lefkovtis is in hearty sympathy with the effort to extend the franchise to women and only last week he addressed the Political Equality club of this city, speaking in most cordial approval of the movement.

"We are on the eve of complete emancipation of women, such is the fiat of progress and civilization. Woman will soon reach the promised land for which she has longed and hoped," said Dr. Lefkovits, and he outlined the place that a woman has been assigned in the nations of the world.

He referred to the recent much-talked-of hissing episode in the national convention when the delegates showed their disapproval of President Taft's speech.

"That the National Woman's Suffrage association did not receive the president's views with the toleration due to a frank confession and with the courtesy owing to his exalted position is a matter more for regret than censure," he said in part.

"It was an unfortunate incident but was not meant to imply any conscious disrespect for his person or position. It was simply a momentary outburst of intense conviction and was more of an affirmation of their own views than a protest against those of the president. That it took the form of hissing evinces nothing distinctively feminine. Men have done the same thing under similar circumstances a thousand times before and if it be true that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery men have all reason to feel proud."

Good results always follow the use of Foley's Kidney Pills. They give prompt relief in all cases of kidney and bladder disorders, are healing, strengthening and anti-septic. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

WILL SEIZE MORE BLEACHED FLOUR

Government Action Is Determined On at Cabinet Meeting.

Washington, April 16. — President Taft and his cabinet, having considered the bleached flour cases, have decided that the government shall continue to make seizures of this product in order to force the millers to test the matter in the courts.

The bleached flour millers had appealed to President Taft to change the ruling that bleached flour is a violation of the pure food laws, claiming that its purity is in no wise affected by bleaching by electricity.

Secretary Wilson does not agree with the millers and refuses to change the regulations. He and the attorney general discussed the subject with the president at length. The attorney general is prepared to defend any cases brought by the millers.

The Normanna male chorus of Duluth will occupy a separate table and furnish the music while the familiar hymns of the church and nation will be sung by over 1,000 men en masse.

The ladies of the various churches of the city led by the Y. W. C. A. are preparing the food and will serve. This is a tremendous undertaking in itself. There will be several great addresses on the "Significance of the Movement," "Men and Missions," and America's World Responsibility.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep can not be over estimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Southers, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly nights because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney Pills as I know they have cured me." For sale by all druggists.

COMPARISON WAS NOT A FAIR ONE.

Frederick C. Rudd, chief engineer of the Spalding hotel, commenting on the published statement of Engineer Williams of the courthouse, who said that the smoke nuisance is absolutely unnecessary, says that it is not just to compare conditions at the courthouse with those that obtain in private buildings.

The business structures of the city are built for profit, he says, and the devices and contrivances with which the authorities are able to equip public buildings that are not built for profit, cannot be so readily available for these business buildings.

With this consideration in mind it must be admitted, he says, that it is not quite fair to accuse firemen employed in other than public buildings of incompetence. Waste of fuel is guarded against in every way possible and no effort is spared to minimize the smoke evil so far as that be done in the furnace room.

FAVORS VOTES FOR WOMEN

Rabbi Lefkovits Advocates Suffrage in Sermon at Temple.

Rabbi Lefkovits spoke on "Women's Suffrage" last evening in the weekly service at Temple Emanuel. Dr. Lefkovits is in hearty sympathy with the effort to extend the franchise to women and only last week he addressed the Political Equality club of this city, speaking in most cordial approval of the movement.

"We are on the eve of complete emancipation of women, such is the trend of progress and civilization. Woman will soon reach the promised land for which she has longed and hoped," said Dr. Lefkovits, and he outlined the place that a woman has been assigned in the nations of the world.

He referred to the recent much-talked-of hissing episode in the national convention when the delegates showed their disapproval of President Taft's speech.

"That the National Woman's Suffrage association did not receive the president's views with the toleration due to a frank confession and with the courtesy owing to his exalted position is a matter more for regret than censure," he said in part.

"It was an unfortunate incident but was not meant to imply any conscious disrespect for his person or position. It was simply a momentary outburst of intense conviction and was more of an affirmation of their own views than a protest against those of the president. That it took the form of hissing evinces nothing distinctively feminine. Men have done the same thing under similar circumstances a thousand times before and if it be true that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery men have all reason to feel proud."

Good results always follow the use of Foley's Kidney Pills. They give prompt relief in all cases of kidney and bladder disorders, are healing, strengthening and antiseptic. Try them. For sale by all druggists.

WILL SEIZE MORE BLEACHED FLOUR

Government Action Is Determined On at Cabinet Meeting.

Washington, April 16.—President Taft and his cabinet having considered the bleached flour cases, have decided that the government shall continue to make seizures of this product in order to force the millers to test the matter in the courts.

The bleached flour millers had appealed to President Taft to change the ruling that bleached flour is a violation of the pure food laws, claiming that its purity is in no wise affected by bleaching by electricity.

Secretary Wilson does not agree with the millers and refuses to change the regulations. He and the attorney general discussed the subject with the president at length. The attorney general is prepared to defend any cases brought by the millers.

HUNGARIANS FORGET ELECTION IN GIVING ROOSEVELT WELCOME

Cheering Crowd Injures Chief of Police and Others at Budapest.

Ex-President's Reception Is Compared With Those of Louis Kossuth.

Traveler Denies Having Talked of Peace Plans With the Emperor.

Budapest, April 18.—Although Hungary is in the throes of an exciting general election, the visit of Mr. Roosevelt fairly monopolized public attention today. The polyglot newspapers of Budapest printed columns about his arrival and extended editorials of welcome, "home," appearing in English.

The character of the crush at the railway station last night when the former president arrived may be judged from the fact that the chief of police suffered a broken leg and several other persons were injured.

Today a big crowd cheered the dis-

Sixty-Six Taken Off Wreck of Minnehaha on Scilly Islands.

Steamer Goes Ashore Where Namesake Was Lost Thirty-Seven Years Ago.

Hugh Town, St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, April 18.—The steamer Minnehaha of the Atlantic Transport line struck on the submerged rocks near Bishop Rock at 2 o'clock this morning. Her passengers were removed in safety. The vessel is badly damaged.

The Minnehaha, Capt. Layland, from New York for London, was feeling her way cautiously towards the English channel through a dense fog that obscured the light on Bishop rock and led her to approach too near the dangerous coast of the Scilly Islands. When the Minnehaha hit the rocks she tore a big hole amidships, and this morning she had twenty feet of water in her fore holds.

Sent Appeal By Wireless.

The sixty-six passengers, rudely awakened, were considerably alarmed for a time, but were reassured by the officers and, so far as has been learned here, suffered no harm. Scarcely had the steamer climbed upon the rocks when urgent wireless messages were being sent to the Lloyds signal station at Lizard, from which point they were passed on to Falmouth.

Signals of distress also were picked up on the islands, and in a short time fishermen's boats had put out to the wreck. These boats took off the passengers and landed them at Brher, where they were made as comfortable as the resources of the little island permitted, pending the arrival of a steamer which has been dispatched to take them to Pensance, where they

Berger, alderman at large elect, and spokesman of the Social-Democratic party in Milwaukee, today issued a statement giving an outline of the principles that will guide the Social-Democratic administration of Milwaukee during the next two years beginning with tomorrow when the inaugural ceremonies will take place.

"The Socialist party of America is the American expression of the international movement of modern wage workers for better food, better houses, sufficient sleep, more leisure, more education and more culture," says the statement.

SAULT STE. MARIE IS BLOCKADED BY THE RUSH OF STEAMERS

More Than Two Score Steamers Forced to Wait at the Locks.

Big Fleet Reported Headed Up From the Lower Lake Points.

American Lock May Not Be Opened Before First Week in May.

Sault Ste. Marie, April 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the first rush of shipping for the season, the Sault canal is caught in a blockade that promises to be as great as that of last spring, when the ice jam at Point Iroquios held up traffic. Before noon today there were forty steamers anchored below the locks, with more coming, all the time, and dispatches received from down the lakes are to the effect that a large number of upbound boats will reach here within the next twenty-four or forty-eight hours.

This morning the Canadian government sent out a patrol boat to meet all steamers as they pass through Little Rapids cut and to tell them what position to take and what order to follow in entering the locks. By this arrangement it is hoped to avoid more than the absolutely necessary delay in handling the vessels.

It is thought now that the American locks will not be opened for the season's traffic before the first week in May, and the Canadian side will have to take care of all traffic until that time alone.

MANAGES LONDON'S BANK FOR WOMEN

MISS MAY BATEMAN.

London, April 18.—A bank exclusively for the use of females has been opened in New Bridge street, Blackfriars with Miss May Bateman as manageress. The venture started with over 400 transferred customers. The bank caters to women of limited means as well as to women of property. Before long it is hoped to have a branch in every country, as it is thought that the wives of the small farmers in the country districts and most women in the towns, however small their means, should have their own check books. Miss Bateman is a novelist who represented several London newspapers in South Africa during the Boer war. She was selected from 350 applicants.

BOSTON IS THIRD PORT IN COUNTRY

Pushes New Orleans Hard in Value of Exports and Imports.

Boston, Mass., April 18.—Boston is now the third port in the United States in amount of exports and imports, and is a close competitor of New Orleans for second, according to the annual report of the chamber of commerce, issued today. A year ago this city was in fourth place, but since then the import trade has increased 42.5 per cent.

For 1909 the total imports and exports amounted to $199,968,648, an increase of $26,493,031, or 15.2 per cent, over 1908. New York holds first place with $1,519,397,445, and New Orleans second with $200,426,077. During the year merchandise valued at $13,563,329, sent from Canada, was shipped via this port.

FOUR KILLED IN SOUTHERN WRECK

Col. Craine of the Shriners Heads Rescue Party in Mississippi.

Memphis, Tenn., April 18.—Four mail clerks are dead and a mail clerk injured as a result of the wreck of the through flyer from New Orleans to Chicago, on the Illinois Central railroad, five miles north of Jackson, Miss., early today.

The dead:

W. R. LITT, mail clerk, Memphis.

V. E. HOWHE, mail clerk, Memphis.

JONES TREALOR, mail clerk, Memphis.

A. W. WOODS, negro, mail clerk, New Orleans.

The wrecked train was No. 2, northbound. The engine left the track, and plunged down a fifteen-foot embankment with the baggage, mail and library cars and two Pullmans. The wreckage caught fire, and the bodies of the dead mail clerks were cremated.

Shrine Officer Leads Rescuers.

Col. William Craine of New Orleans, who was officer of the day during the recent Shriners' drills at New Orleans, was on the train and organized a relief crew, taking the passengers out through the windows. Procuring fire extinguishers from the mail car, Craine and his fellow passengers played streams upon the flames in an effort to rescue the mail clerks, but without any effect on the fire. None of the passengers was injured.

DELAWARE & HUDSON MAY HAVE BIG STRIKE.

YOUNG MURDERER IS ELECTROCUTED

Earl B. Hill Goes Trembling to Death---Was 21 Years Last Week.

Auburn, N. Y., April 18.—Showing fear in every movement and expressing it in a voice that tremblingly muttered "Oh, God, Oh, God!" Earl B. Hill, convicted on May 7, 1909, of the murder on Aug. 26, 1908, of Eldredge Davis, a prosperous farmer of the town of Bainbridge, Chenango county, was put to death in the electric chair in Auburn prison today.

One contact of 1,850 volts at 8 amperes and of a minute's duration was all that was required to carry the the law's mandate into effect.

Hill passed his twenty-first birthday in the prison four days ago. His crime had as its motives revenge and robbery. He and David H. Borst, now a life convict in the prison, murdered Davis in his pasture lot. Six shots were fired into the victim. Then they robbed the body of a gold watch, the only thing of value that they could find.

Borst, first arrested, laid the crime upon Hill. The latter, suspected of the murder, surrendered on Aug. 30. He was placed on trial at Norwich on May 7, was found guilty and sentenced to death in Auburn prison during the week of June 20, 1909. Notice of appeal stayed the execution. The court of appeals on March 4 last, confirmed the conviction and fixed the execution for the week of April 18.

Washington April 18.—What promises to be a most eventful convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution opened at 10:30 o'clock this morning in Continental hall, the handsome home of the organization, which has just been completed. The presence of President Taft added to the interest of the opening session, at which he extended to the delegates a warm welcome to Washington.

Nearly 1,000 delegates are in attendance and their interest in the convention, the nineteenth that has been held, is intense.

Following the address by President Taft, the convention was called to order by the president, Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, after which formal addresses were made by John Barrett, director of the bureau of American republics, and Morris B. Beardsley, president general of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Tours, France, April 18.—The arrest of Count and Countess De Gatigny at the instance of Mrs. Charles Hamilton Paine, formerly of Boston, but now of Paris, on the charge of misrepresentation, in connection with the sale of paintings, alleged to be the work of great masters, whereas they are only copies, has caused a great sensation. The De Gatignys, with their four children, lived lavishly and gave brilliant entertainments.

Seattle Man Kills Himself Because He Does Not Love His Wife.

Binghampton, N. Y., April 18.—An unusual series of tragedies was recorded here during the past twenty-four hours.

Charles Lewes, a wealthy farmer, hanged himself in his barn, despondent over inability to obtain farm laborers at any but prohibitive rates.

The dead body of an unknown man, about 50 years of age, well dressed and carrying several hundred dollars in money, was found on a railroad bridge crossing the Susquehanna river.

SUDDEN STRIKE LEADS TO RIOTING AT SCHOENVILLE

Foreigners at Pressed Steel Car Works Quit When Four Are Fired.

Chief of Police Is Beaten By Mob and One Striker Is Wounded.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 18.—Practically without warning 1,600 men, mostly foreigners, employed in the erecting department of the Pressed Steel Car company, Schoenville, quit work today. Within an hour after the inauguration of the strike a workman had been shot in the left arm and the chief of the car company's police had been severely beaten by members of the striker's body, and taken to a hospital.

The trouble is reported to have started over the discharge of four workmen laid off last Thursday. The men are said to be members of the Industrial Workers of the World. Early today a committee from the labor organization notified the car company officials that they would refuse to work unless the four discharged employes were at once reinstated. This the officials refused to accede to.

Gathered at the Gates.

When the whistles blew for the opening of the plant this morning the workmen, true to their threat, refused to go to work. They gathered at the gates of the stockade surrounding the plant, and discussed the situation noisily.

Chief of Police Smith and his officers attempted to disperse the gathering. In this effort Smith was struck down from behind with a blackjack. As he fell he fired several shots from his automatic pistol. One bullet lodged in the left arm of a striker. More trouble is expected.

Announcement!

The Oak Hall Clothing Company is keeping pace with the growth of Duluth. As the city is expanding in commercial and industrial interests, so is the Oak Hall expanding in its business.

Six years ago when the Oak Hall Clothing Company established its store on the corner of Fourth avenue west and Superior street we were told that it was a mistake, that there was no room for another men's aud boys' furnishing store the size of ours. After looking the situation over carefully we decided that there was the best sort of opening, and the splendid growth of the Oak Hall from the very start has demonstrated the soundness of our judgment.

Before the Oak Hall came to Duluth, clothing stores were being operated on a sliding scale. Suits that sold for $35 and $40 one day were sold at $10 or $12 the next. It was not a case of "one price to all," but "a price to everybody."

We decided that Duluth needed a clothing store where honest values, honest prices and honest dealing with all would prevail. This has always been the aim of the Oak Hall company and to this policy, we believe, the Oak Hall owes the success that has attended the store during the past six years.

We believe that the people of Duluth have appreciated the square dealing that has always attended their buying transactions here, for our business has increased steadily, year by year, until we have been forced to seek larger quarters and better facilities for taking care of the trade.

To say that the Oak Hall is pleased with the success attained and deeply thankful for the splendid patronage attained throughout the city and surrounding country, is putting the matter mildly. It is the sort of encouragement that causes us to continue business in our splendid new store building, with complete confidence that the people will appreciate, even more, our efforts to give them a clothing store second to none in the Northwest, a store where the same policy of the Oak Hall in the past will be pursued in the future and which will, we believe, insure the future success of the

MISS SANFORD OBJECTS.

Says That Women Are Not Ready for the Ballot.

Minneapolis Minn., April 18.—Miss Maria Sanford criticised the women's suffrage movement in her lecture before the Political Equality club of the university. She made the point that the states having equal suffrage, and in which women have votes in legislative bodies, have not as good laws affecting women as has Minnesota.

Miss Sanford, conceding that the women of the university are qualified to exercise the privilege of the ballot, declared that the great mass of of uneducated women are not thus prepared, and said that to grant them suffrage would only add to the present problem caused by ignorant men. She deplored the conduct of many of the suffragettes. She also said that those interested in the movement devoted their entire time to it, thereby neglecting their homes, which should have the first attention of women.

Women's devotion to fashion also received some attention from the speaker, who reminded the gathering that men discarded plumes, laces and bracelets many years ago.

FIFTH WEEK OF THE STRIKE

The fifth week of the strike of the United Brotherhood of Leather Workers on Horse Goods began this morning, and the men are still holding out for their demands. In Duluth about half of the men have secured work in lines other than at their trade, and they are in a position to hold out until their demands are granted.

They say that the factories will not be able to secure men to take their places as the men in the trade are well organized all over the country, and there are few breaks in the ranks. One man has broken away from the strikers in Duluth, but the men say they have lost no more.

The strike is still in effect all over the country, except where firms have signed the agreement. In the Twin Cities most of the retail shops have signed up, according to the bulletins sent to the Duluth local from the headquarters of the union at Kansas City.

MILL GIVES WORK TO 200

Alger-Smith Plant at West Duluth Begins Season's Operations.

Day and Night Shifts Will Be Employed All Summer.

Two hundred men were given employment this morning, when the Alger-Smith mill, West Duluth, started up for the season. When the mill is running in full blast, it is expected that there will be work for at least 150 more. Two crews will be put on, a day and night shift.

The officials of the company look forward to a most prosperous season. It is expected that the cut this season will exceed that of last year. During the 1909 season, the total output was 49,164,000, besides 27,000,000 feet of lath and 13,000,000 shingles.

The daily output of the mill, according to one of the officials is about 300,000 feet. At the present time there are about 7,000,000 feet of lumber to be cut in the booms and during the coming year approximately 40,000,000 will be shipped from the company's ecmps.

At the present time there are about 28,000,000 feet of lumber in the company's piles at the mill. It is planned to ship much of this lumber down the lakes. The Melvin S. Bacon is the first boat to start loading this season.

The monthly payroll of the concern amounts to about $17,000 or about $120,000 for the season.

MISSIONS DO GOOD WORK.

Effacing National Boundaries and Making Great World Family.

Rev. D. G. Cole read a paper on "World Campaigns in the Fields of Foreign Missionary Activity" before the congregation of the People's Union church last night. He said in effect:

"The spirit of God is at work in the great Christian religious bodies and is also operating among the non-Christian bodies too. The world, once considered so large, is not really being bound together by cords of sympathy that efface mere national boundary lines and make us an immense world-family as it were.

"This has all been done through foreign missions. Therefore much credit is due the laymen's missionary movement for their part in this vital program of world evangelization. Missions are affecting, to a marked degree, the social fabric of all nations. Turkey is putting on new life and her young men are bringing about a great moral, and happily bloodless revolution. China, India, Japan and Korea are showing marked changes. Representatives of their student life now literally swarm Europe and after absorbing our ideas, and we trust, Christian truths, will return to work a further marvel of enlightenment and development.

"Christianity is reaching both the highly educated and the ignorant in all these countries. The uplifting power of song is being used to reach those who need moral regeneration and our time-honored gospel songs are heard everywhere. The Philippines are producing converts. Ceylon shows up splendidly in the lists. India follows with an increase of native Christians to her credit. The world missionary conference that will convene this coming June in Edinburgh promises some splendid reports."

The following delegates have been appointed to represent the People's Union church at the coming banquet and convention of the laymen's missionary movement held this week: Edward Gale, Daniel Falconer, Grover C. Diebel, Frank Leary, Aaron Gale, J. D. Wright, George Deatherage, Rev. H. P. Long and Rev. D. G. Cole.

GIVEN VERDICT OF ONE CENT.

A verdict for 1 cent damages was awarded G. W. Gowan, plaintiff, in an action to recover $69 from Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Pattenson, now living on Park Point, by a jury in the West Duluth justice court late Saturday.

Gowan was suing the Pattensons for goods which he claimed had been stored at their home. He alleges that when he came to get his property it had been sold, or at least had disappeared. Gowan appeared in his own behalf but the defendants were represented by an attorney.

The Pattensons were ordered to pay the costs of the case.

FUNERAL HELD THREE HOURS AFTER DEATH.

Because of the sickness of three other children in their home, Mr. and Mrs. George Reindl, New Duluth, only waited three hours after the death of their 9-year-old son Melvin before they held his funeral.

The boy was stricken a few days ago with scarlet fever and died yesterday afternoon. Three other children in the same family are now victims of the dread disease, and none of them has more than an even chance to live.

Interment was made at Oneota cemetery.

MANY TOOK TRAIN TO WEST DULUTH

When nearly all of the electric lights of the city went out Saturday night and the street cars were left standing on the tracks, many West Duluth people got to their homes by means of the Northern Pacific train, bound for St. Paul, which left the union station after 1 o'clock.

Others were obliged to walk or remain downtown for the night. Cab drivers made but few trips to West Duluth for the reason that more money could be made on shorter hauls.

When on the impending suit quest it pays to remember—the suit you get at this store is not a "pick up" from uncertain sources, at a short price. Quality is always assured.

The acknowledged superiority of S. & B. Co. Suits was never more in evidence than in these new models that are—the latest innovations brought out in New York.

New Coats

Are very much in evidence in the Coat section. No sooner do special shipments of certain styles get here than waiting women hurry them out again. We never saw such a coat season.

SOME BLACK AND WHITE CHECKT MODELS at $21.50 are here again for the nonce. The fine lines and extra tailoring, together with the unusual trimmings give these new models such charming individuality, that we simply can't get enough of them. Other extra quality SERGE COATS in blues and black are $29.50.

AT $35.00 AND UP—There are other models of various materials in new styles, that are custom-tailored and each one different.

Whether you want a plain tailored coat at a modest price, or an ultra fashionable model, built along Paris lines, you are sure to find it here—and at a fair price.

New Dresses

Fresh from their express boxes that seldom need alterations—so perfect are the lines and so well tailored!

Will be worn at church, business, for afternoon parties and evening wear.

LINEN DRESSES—That show tailored art of a high order, $10.00 to $45.00.

DRESSES OF SWISS AND LAWN—From the simple lines of the work-a-day variety, to the fancy styles trimmed with cluny and real Irish Crochet—$6.75 and up as high as you care to go.

FOULARD AND TAFFETA MODELS—That show various combinations of the overdrape skirt that Paris favors so strongly this season.

LINGERIE MODELS—That show entrancing examples of embroidery—done by hand. Other individual models for Madam Long Purse, who will have an absolutely exclusive model—different from any thing else shown in Duluth shops.

Furs Stored in the S. & B. Co. Fur Vaults are first treated by expert furriers and will be returned "in good condition" when you want them next fall.

Make it a point to come every day, if you are down town—we want you to feel at liberty to come as often as you please—whether merely looking or buying, the store is yours to enjoy—come!

DULUTH MEN IN CONTROL

Local Directors of North Butte Re-elected at Annual Meeting.

Annual Report of the Company Submitted to Stockholders.

At the annual meeting of the North Butte Mining company in its offices in the Lyceum building this afternoon Joseph B. Cotton and Charles A. Duncan of Duluth and James Gayley of New York were re-elected to the directorate. The directors whose terms expire in 1911 are: James Hoatson, Calumet, Mich.; Thomas F. Cole, Duluth, and Daniel M. Clemson, Pittsburg, Pa.; terms expiring in 1912 are those of William J. Olcott, John Uno Sebenius and Chester A. Congdon, Duluth. The Duluth stockholders remain in control.

A striking feature of the report of the North Butte to stockholders is the frankness of the directors in detailing the results of exploration during the year ending Dec. 31, 1909. On the 2,000 and 2,200-foot levels of the Edith May vein the exploration "has, on the whole, been somewhat disappointing," says the report. No very large bodies of high grade ore such as were found on the 1,600 and 1,800-foot levels were opened up. "However," continues the report, "throughout the entire work of drifting on these levels our reports show that the ore bodies are continuous and that a large tonnage is now available." Although much of the ore was of second-class, yet occasional encounters of high grade ore led the management to believe that the drifts were approaching the same good ore bodies that were in sight on the upper levels.

This report, it should be borne in mind, details explorations only up to the end of last year. Investors should remember that within the last week it has been reported a diamond drill from 2,800-foot level of the Diamond mine of the Anaconda company has penetrated the Edith May vein of the North Butte for a distance of forty-five feet. This seems to indicate that the North Butte vein continues to a great depth and that the mine is to repeat the experience of other Butte mines, coming into a richer zone after passing through a lean one for a stretch of 400 or 500 feet. If further work discloses this vein to be average value at this depth it will be the most important discovery that North Butte has made since it opened up its bonanza ore five or more years ago.

At the time the report was written the development work on the 2,000 and 2,200-foot levels of the Jessie vein was not as extensive as that on the same levels of the Edith May vein. The ore was of lower grade than had been mined on the 1,800-foot level and was of the same width. However, only 300 feet of drifts had been run when the report was compiled. Reports on the ore encountered on the 2,000-foot level of the Edith May vein west of the crosscut show a minimum of 1 per cent copper and a maximum of 10 per cent. East of the crosscut the minimum was 2.7 per cent and the maximum 6.5 per cent. West of the shaft on the 2,200-foot level the minimum percentage was 1.5 and the maximum 9. When the report was written no drifting had been done on the 2,200-foot level of the Edith May east of the shaft. On the 2,000-foot level of the Jessie vein west of the crosscut the minimum percentage was 2.8 and the maximum 5. East of the crosscut the minimum was 2.7 per cent and the maximum 7 per cent. On the 2,200-foot level of the Jessie at points east of the crosscut where the vein was encountered the minimum percentage was 1.1 and the maximum 5.6. West of the crosscut the percentage averaged about 2.

Ore in Sight.

At the close of the year ore estimated to be in sight was 882,200 tons and the average copper content was placed at 4¼ per cent. The general manager, John D. Pope, and R. M. Atwater, who made a report on the property this year, believe that the faults on the 2,200-foot level, which formed a wedge section of ground above the 2,200-foot level and between which all the ore is of high grade, may result in a much better showing of good ore on the levels below. A winze is being sunk between these faults to determine the facts.

"Within the past few days," says the report, "a crosscut from the 700-foot level of our Gem shaft has cut the Jessie vein at a point 145 feet below the 500-foot level of the Jessie shaft, and ninety feet above our 1,000-foot drift on the Jessie vein. At the point of intersection, the showing is extremely satisfactory, there being fourteen to fifteen feet of ore which will average 5 per cent copper and seven ounces silver per ton. This strike is in a portion of the Jessie vein heretofore considered not promising enough to warrant further prospecting. The extent of this new ore body will be determined as soon as possible.

"During the last six months there has been opened up on the 1,800-foot level of our West Gem vein, a body of ore 300 feet in length with the drift being extended to the west still in ore. The vein on this level averages five feet in width and carries copper averaging approximately 6 per cent, and six ounces of silver to the ton. The showing on this level was very much better than anything encountered upon the upper levels.

"The 1,800-foot level is the lowest yet opened up on this property, but drifting has just been started on both the 2,000-foot level and 2,200-foot level, and it is the intention of the management to develop the ground on these levels as rapidly as possible.

"On the Adirondack claim, a vein has recently been opened up by a crosscut from the 1,800-foot level by our Edith May vein, and by drifting on this Adirondack vein, we have already developed an ore body 140 feet long, four feet wide, and carrying an average of 8 per cent copper. While this vein was heretofore known to exist on this claim, no pay ore to any extent had been shown at any point above this 1,800-foot level."

The Year's Operations.

The average number of men employed last year was 928. The mine was in operation 343 days. In the year 461,590 wet tons of ore were hoisted, and at the smelter 449,590 dry tons were treated, being 18.8 per cent first-class ore and 81.2 per cent second-class ore. The ore produced 33,102,153 pounds of fine copper, 1,048,272 ounces of silver and 1,302.46 ounces of gold. The average copper saving in all ores treated was 3.77 per cent. The average price received for the copper was 13.1133 cents a pound. The dividends last year were in excess of earnings, being $1,600,000. The company, says the report, had no need of funds for any purpose and "in times such as existed during the past year, it was thought best by the directors to put into your hands all the money possible."

The financial report shows that the company has no indebtedness, and that its surplus Dec. 31 was $1,512,861.28.

The present cost of turning out copper at the North Butte is 10½ cents a pound. It is not likely that it will increase, says R. M. Atwater in his report. On 13 cent copper the tonnage in sight will yield $1,416,750; on 14 cent copper, $1,983,450, and on 15 cent copper, $2,550,150. This tonnage, at the present rate of production, would be worked out in twenty-two months.

Although the report does not expressly mention the point, stockholders should bear in mind that North Butte's second shaft is getting well down and that an output of 50,000,000 pounds a year can be easily maintained, which would give the company earnings of from $4.50 to $5 a share on a 13-cent metal market.

The report says concerning the Tuolumne controversy:

"The Tuolumne Copper Mining company, in connection with its prospecting of the ground south of the Jessie claim has discovered a hanging wall hand or split of the Jessie vein, under the surface of what is called the Jessie Fraction. The Jessie Fraction carries the ownership of all the ore underlying the surface of the fraction itself; therefore, the owners of this fraction, who are the Tuolumne Copper Mining company, and our company jointly, are entitled to all ore underlying the surface of this fraction. A friendly arrangement has been made between the Tuolumne Copper Mining company and ourselves, whereby the Tuolumne company is permitted to mine the ore directly underlying the Jessie Fraction only, and the question of the proportion of the profit on the ore so mined, to which each company is entitled, is now under consideration for adjustment between the Tuolumne company and ourselves.

"Because of litigation the company has been unable to secure a perfect title to all of the stock of the Berlin Mining & Development company, but the suit against the company by Levi M. Strong for a one-fourth interest in the stock of the Berlin company on his payment of $50,000 is declared by counsel for the North Butte to be wholly without merit. Since the last annual report the company acquired by purchase the fractional St. Paul claim lying between the Gem claims and the Croesus claim. A two-thirds interest was bought in 1909 and the remaining one-third this year, all for $8,000.

The stockholders today ratified contracts made with the Trenton Mining & Development company, the Anaconda Copper Mining company and the Boston & Montana Consolidated Copper & Silver Mining company, whereby the North Butte acquired the remaining outstanding 25-1100 interest in the West Gem lode claim and that portion of the west part of the Sioux Chief lode claim lying east of the east end of the line of the Speculator claim projected north through the Sioux Chief claim in exchange for these properties: The Gem mill site claim, and all that portion of the East Gem claim, east of the east end line of the Jessie claim, as projected north through the said East Gem claim; and that portion of the West Gem claim, west of the easterly line of the Badger State claim; and all that portion of the Adirondack claim lying east of the east end line of the Speculator claim, as projected through said Adirondack claim; all in Silver Bow county, Mont.

WESTERN DRAMA AT THE LYCEUM

Sunday Night Audience Finds Entertainment in Belasco Production.

"The Girl of the Golden West," a story of the pioneer days in California, when gamblers, bad men and road agents were plentiful and girls a novelty, was presented at the Lyceum for the first time last night. It will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night.

"The Girl of the Golden West," is melodrama, but it is the kind of melodrama David Belasco knows how to serve. There is gun-play, but of a painless kind that isn't harrowing to the audience. There is a villain, but he isn't of the "Curse yuh!" type. The girl isn't a helpless farmer's daughter, but a young lady with a bearing and training that enables her to hold her own in the rough mining camp. The hero isn't the struggling, honest blacksmith, but is a robber with a heart.

It isn't the kind of melodrama you saw in the "opry house" in the old days back home, but it's melodrama so improved, so dressed up, so cleverly ladled out that you like it, applaud and spend a very good evening. The comedy is rich and wholesome and is not strained. The pathos does not descend to the maudlin. The dramatic does not reach to the theatrical and the mock heroic.

"The Girl of the Golden West," is a wholesome, rugged play of the early days in the West. The atmosphere is created in true Belasco style and it reaches the audience, so that the stage is not seen with a telescope, but is felt and the audience follows the characters through the play, laughs with them, sympathizes with them and feels their interest.

Miss Mary Tannehill is a likeable girl and Raymond L. Bond as the robber-hero, makes the good o'ershadow the bad in the character. Edward J. Hayes is a capable villain of the not-too-villainous sort and the other members of the company are well cast.

"The Girl of the Golden West," is worth seeing. There is no problem to it, there is no deep moral for which one must search through many acts of heavy drama; and there is no tax on the intellect to follow the plot. There is comedy and real heart-interest and if one goes to the theater for entertainment, he will find it in the Belasco production.

"Fantana" Coming.

"Fantana" a hilarious, breezy musical comedy, in which Teddy Webb and Eulalia Young are the shining lights, aided by a competent cast of principals and a beauty chorus, is coming. The curtain rises disclosing the grounds of the Hotel Del Monte, Monterey, Cal., the second act being laid in a Japanese tea garden. The third act takes place on an ocean liner homeward bound. The ship scene is particularly well arranged and reminds one of the good old days of "Pinafore." "Fantana" will be the offering at the Lyceum, April 21 to 24.

Kicked Shoeing a Horse.

Marinette, Wis., April 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Morris Lauzer, a blacksmith, employed at Pembina, is at his home in Menominee suffering from severe injuries from kicks received while shoeing a horse. Lauzer was leaning over one horse when another, standing near, kicked him in the face, splitting his lips and inflicting a deep scalp wound.

NEW SALT LAKE HOTEL DYNAMITED

Second Attempt Made to Lay Partly Finished Building in Ruins.

Salt Lake Cuty, Utah, April 18.—An explosion of dynamite under the frame work of the Utah hotel building at the corner of South Temple and Main streets shook the city at 3 o'clock this morning and shattered windows in all surrounding streets. The steel work of the hotel does not seem to have suffered great damage. No one was hurt. A similar attempt to wreck the new hotel was made a few months ago, and two men were convicted of the crime.

The steel work on the building is being done by non-union workmen, and this has caused much feeling on the part of the unionists.

FIFTY THOUSAND ACRES FOR POOR

Arkansas Man Says His Original Gift Has Been Increased By Others.

St. Louis, Mo., April 18.—George T. Jackson, a wealthy Arkansas man who has announced that he will give 4,000 acres of rich Arkansas farm land to the unemployed of St. Louis and vicinity, told 100 unemployed men last night that he has received more than 800 letters regarding the plan since its announcement, and that more than 50,000 acres have been offered for the purpose by philanthropic men from Manitoba to Texas.

Jackson made the announcement at a meeting of the St. Louis Welfare association, organized by James Eads How, the eccentric philanthropist, for the benefit of his proteges, the tramps. It is planned to divide the land into small farms to be worked on the community plan.

ARMY OFFICERS MUCH ANNOYED

Private at Fort Myer Is Millionaire and Social Favorite.

Washington, April 18.—Fort Myer, near this city, is said to be unique among army posts in the possession of an enlisted man who is a millionaire. Not only is he a millionaire, but he is also a favorite in Washington society and this adds somewhat to the consternation of the officers of the fort, who themselves, some times through duty, but more often inclination, are frequently in attendance upon the very events at which the rich enlisted man finds himself.

Corporal Albert Myer, Jr., of the signal corps, is this anomaly—a millionaire soldier. His home is in Boston and he is a grandson of Brig. Gen. Albert Myer, who served in the Civil war and after whom Fort Myer is named. Corporal Myer decided upon a military life, and determined to seek the top by way of the bottom. Therefore, he enlisted.

Has His Own Automobile.

With the day's duty done and night at hand, Corporal Myer, chrysalis-like, lays aside his enlisted man's uniform, dons evening clothes, enters his automobile, which has arrived for him from its city garage, and armed with a pass, decends upon social Washington.

Already Corporal Myer has taken his examination for a lieutenancy, and greatly, it is said, to the relief of the officers at the post, passed handsomely. Soon they may be able to recognize him socially without feeling that their dignity and all that is due their rank is compromised.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC MAIL TRAIN ROBBED

Two Masked Men Get Away With Five Pouches of Registered Mail.

Benecia, Cal., April 18.—The China-Japan mail, which left San Francisco over the Southern Pacific railway for the East at 9 o'clock Saturday night was held up by two masked men at Sprig, two miles east of here, at 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning, and robbed of nine pouches of registered mail. The train carried no express matter.

Four of the pouches have been recovered, but the robbers took along the others into the hills and canyons between Martinez and Oakland. Posses from two counties, detectives and postoffice inspectors on horses and in automobiles are engaged in the manhunt. The robbers were well-armed and a battle is expected.

The pasengers on the train were not disturbed and several of them did not learn of the robery until morning. After getting the mail sacks, the robbers cut the engine loose from the train and sent it wild, throttle open, down the main track to the East.

SPRUCE FROM DULUTH.

Will Enable Appleton Pulpwood Plant to Continue Running.

Appleton, Wis., April 18.—The prohibition of the exportation of pulpwood into this country from Quebec will have no effect on the Wisconsin pulp mills at this time, according to W. S. Taylor, manager of the pulpwood company, the corporation which furnishes all the mills in the Fox river valley with pulpwood. Mr. Taylor, who has just returned from the north, states that it has been years since they have gotten wood from Canada. He stated that when the prohibition was placed on the wood on the crown lands of Ontario it had no effect in this state and the same thing will happen regarding the Quebec prohibition as long as the wood lasts in Minnesota, practically all of the spruce used in Wisconsin coming now from the vicinity of Duluth.

BODY PROVES TO BE THAT OF MRS. BEST

Detroit Police Want Man Who Denied That His Wife Was Drowned.

Detroit, Mich., April 18.—The body of a young woman found yesterday on the shores of Grosse Isle in the lower Detroit river, was identified today as that of Mrs. Arthur Best, formerly of Comber, Ont.

The finding of the body tends to corroborate the theory that the young woman seen floating on a cake of ice off the foot of Woodward avenue soon after midnight on Sunday morning, March 12, was Mrs. Best.

Arthur Best, who had married the young woman only a month previously upon the insistence of her relatives, was taken into custody by the police at the time in the hope that he might be able to clear up the mystery of the identity of the drowned woman, but he declared that he was on a ferry boat at the time and saw the woman drown and that she was not his wife. He was released and went to Canada. Efforts will now be made to locate him again.

Bemidji Office Burglarized.

Bemidji, Minn., April 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Unknown parties forced an entrance into the office of the Belt-raml Elevator & Milling company Saturday night and ransacked the place, but obtained little of value. The company never locks its safe and it was easy for the burglars to obtain access to the money drawer. There was about $8 in loose change in the safe which was appropriated.

PROBE IS ORDERED INTO COTTON DEAL.

Hayne and William P. Brown, prominent cotton brokers of New Orleans.

Dish Cloths

Cheese cloths, unbleached cotton and heavy linen crash make most satisfactory dish cloths, and for cleaning greasy kitchen utensils, pot-rings are the easiest to use. One trouble with dish cloths is that they are hard to keep sweet, but they can be easily kept in good condition by washing occasionally in lukewarm water to which has been added a tablespoonful of Gold Dust washing powder; then scald, rinse and hang in the sunshine and fresh air to dry.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

John E. King suggested at the recent meeting of the state Democratic central committee a basis of representation in the coming convention that if adopted will make the total of delegates 947, allowing three delegates at large for each county and one delegate to each 500 votes for John A. Johnson at the last election. This gives St. Louis county thirty-nine delegates, three more than the county had at the last state convention. St. Louis, Hennepin and Ramsey counties will have combined representation of 228 members. Andrew Nelson, who has been urged to enter the race for congress as Representative Miller's Democratic opponent, has not yet decided whether he will respond to the call.

The Duluth lawyer's attitude has not changed in the slightest. His position is that he does not care to try for the honor unless there is a genuine and sincere demand that he sacrifice his personal and professional interests to the cause of representative government. It has been declared to him that the people of the Eighth district are eager to have an opportunity to select their representative, having become impatient with the practice that has obtained of having only one candidate to vote for in the congressional election. If this demand is unmistakably expressed, Mr. Nelson is expected to get into the game, not without reluctance, but determined to put up such a fight as will prove he comes of fighting stock. If any good man can be induced to make the run against Mr. Miller, Mr. Nelson will be pleased and will be quick to support him rather than make the run himself.

Mr. Nelson is hearing from friends throughout the district daily, and they are unanimous in urging him to enter the field. Many Republicans have said that they hope to be able to indicate a choice, and Democrats insist that the party should have a candidate in the field.

His legislative record is good, and so is that of Mr. Brown.

The Cass Lake Times strikes right out from the shoulder in a consideration of the political situation in Minnesota as it affects the northern part of the state, saying:

"Three times in the last decade the Democrats have quietly secured a signal victory by the election of a governor of their cult, while at each time the other candidates for state offices have been solidly Republican. It is barely possible that the voters of the state have gotten into a habit of doing such unusual things and will rally again to the support of any candidate for office of a less importance than that of the chief executive.

"It is well known that the insurgent is abroad; that the voters believe in him and his principles. In all the years since Minnesota became a member of the Federal Union there has been no such unrest, such dissatisfaction among the men who own a ballot as at present; we know personally more than a dozen old-line Republicans who boldly assert that it is time to stop being led; that the country needs and must have a change, and to secure it they are willing to lay their Republicanism on the shelf for a time and vote for men who will do their duty and give the common man a chance for continuing life.

"You need not be surprised if in the next shuffle more than one Democrat may creep into place on the state ticket. The American people are a peculiar mixture of Anglo-Saxon-Latin-Slavonic races; they are slow to conceive a wrong, especially a political imposition, but when they are informed and believe that they have been and are continually being robbed, they arise to the majesty of manhood and assert their rights in no uncertain manner. The election of the entire Republican state ticket, below the chief executive, this year is not by any means a surety.

"We of the northern counties are determined to make a change in the state auditor's office; if we fail to accomplish our desires at the convention, there is still an opportunity left at the polls, and the voters of the northern counties will surely avail themselves of it if forced to the wall by political manipulation. The northern counties have long been obliged to bear the burdens of state government without due representation, without having the rights plainly due us by law placed to our credit; we are dissatisfied and have formed a pact to fight our common enemies. If we fail in the conflict we will submit like men, but the fight is on, and all opposed may take notice."

The Northfield News in a vigorous editorial accuses St. Paul of being greedy. These are the counts contained in the indictment: The Republican state convention is to be held there; the first business to come up will be the selection of a candidate for the senate and none but St. Paul men have been mentioned for the place; St. Paul will insist upon naming one of the supreme court candidates; the state auditor, long a resident of the capital city, although he claims Fillmore county as his home, is on the St. Paul politicians' slate; St. Paul has a candidate for clerk of the supreme court.

State Senator H. F. Peterson of Moorhead, writing in the Hawley Herald, tells of the methods being followed by Republican allies of the liquor interests, saying in part:

"They are not making a brass band campaign. There is very little shouting on their part. The little talk that is indulged in on their side is by some of their allies who are availing themselves of their opportunities to belittle the county option movement and its friends and to bemoan the fact that the liquor question has been thrust into politics to cause party disturbances.

"The trained politicians of the liquor dealers are too wise to fight in the open, but behind closed doors the campaign is receiving at their hands the most careful and earnest thought and preparation, and they are busy even now in selecting candidates for the people to vote for on election day. They are quietly forming their personal liberty clubs and other organizations to boost for their candidates and to hammer their opponents.

"You may confidently expect an attack to be made on every member of the last legislature who voted for county option, and flaws will be picked in his record, and at the same time some paragon of perfection pointed out as a proper successor warranted to be in favor of all laws for the uplift of humanity, but he will be strangely silent on the liquor question."

AMERICANS ARE MISSING

vincial treasurer has taken charge of affairs, the governor of the province having been killed by the rioters.

All the foreign-owned buildings in Changsha have been destroyed by fire with the exception of the British consulate. All of the buildings rented by foreigners have been looted.

The Chinese officials on Thursday issued a proclamation that they were unable to protect the lives and property of foreigners, and thereupon all foreigners made haste to leave the city. So far as is known no foreign resident lost his life.

The governor of the province Wou Tong Sin, and his son were killed and several other government officials died.

Six thousand foreign-drilled soldiers were stationed there and a few of these protected the governor's house for a time, but soon all joined the rioters.

Started in Rice Riots.

The riots began on April 13, when the famine sufferers looted the rice shops.

The following day the disturbance became anti-foreign, this being a strong anti-foreign province. The China Inland mission and the Norwegian and Catholic missions were burned. The other missions were destroyed on April 15. The missionaries attached to the American Episcopalian missionary alliance, the United Brethren, and the Wesleyan and Methodist Episcopal church and the Yale missions, numbering forty-one in all, took refuge in boats. The destruction of all the foreign property, including the Japanese consulate and the British warehouses followed. The fate of the Standard Oil company's newly erected tanks is unknown.

The official buildings were destroyed the same day, the troops joining the rioters, who numbered not less than 24,000.

Merchant is Murdered.

Macon, Ga., April 18.—J. W. Tonney, a well-known merchant, was assassinated about 1:30 this morning at his home here. He was asleep at the time, and was shot from the street by an unknown party. He was 45 years old. Detectives and police are on the trail of the assassin. They have a clue to the murderer.

Slayer Stands Off Officers.

Many, La., April 18.—Tobie Nelson shot and instantly killed Tom Giles yesterday. Both were members of the crew of a construction train. After emptying his revolver Nelson calmly proceeded to reload it; and, standing off the officers, succeeded in making his escape. The cause of the shooting is not known.

Kills Himself for Love.

Seattle, Wash., April 18.—Jacob De Reubenstein, aged 48, president and treasurer of a large junk company, committed suicide in his office yesterday by shooting himself through the head. He leaves a widow and four children. In a letter addressed to a friend he told of his devotion to another woman, and ended the note by saying: "This is why I kill myself."

LACKAWANNA WILL TAKE CENTRAL TERMS.

Scranton, Pa., April 18.—There will be no strike on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad. This decision was reached last night when Gen. Supt. T. H. Clarke of the Lackawanna informed W. G. Lee of the trainmen that his company would abide by the award of the New York Central arbitrators.

Late in the afternoon an ultimatum was sent to Supt. Clarke notifying him that unless the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western company would abide by the rate decided upon by the New York Central a strike would be called on the entire system, beginning at 11:45 last night. At 9:30 o'clock Mr. Clarke sent word to Mr. Lee that his company would agree to the New York Central award. Word was then telegraphed to all points withdrawing the strike order, which had been issued at 8 o'clock.

BRYAN DECLINES TO TALK ABOUT POLITICS!

New York, April 18.—A brief interview with William J. Bryan, who is approaching the United States on the steamship Caracas after his South American trip, reached New York by wireless late last night:

"I approach the shores of the United States with gladness," said Mr. Bryan. "Each absence increases my appreciation of our nation's wonderful advances and progress. This is my first experience with wireless at sea, and I recognize the added safety which it gives to ocean travel.

"I have been out of touch of the newspapers so long that I am not prepared to discuss politics."

IN DULUTH CHURCHES

LAYMEN'S CONFERENCE

Approaching Convention Is Theme at Four Large Mass Meetings.

Reference Made to It in Nearly Every Church in City.

In most of the churches of Duluth yesterday addresses were made on the subject of the coming laymen's missionary conference by the pastors and distinguished men identified with the movement. There were four large mass meetings besides the regular services. Speakers and leaders at the different churches and meetings were:

Y. M. C. A. mass meeting, 3:30 o'clock, George Innis of Minneapolis; Watson S. Moore, president of the Duluth laymen's movement, chairman.

Endion M. E. church, 4:30 o'clock, Rev. J. A. Gaughey and R. E. Denfeld.

West Duluth Baptist church, 3 o'clock, A. V. Snell.

Lester Park M. E. church, 8 o'clock, A. V. Snell.

First Baptist church, morning service, George Buck and W. B. Patton.

Lester Park M. E. church, morning, L. A. Barnes and W. L. Smithies.

Merritt Memorial M. E., morning, Watson S. Moore and B. N. Wheeler.

Pilgrim Congregational, morning, Andrew Nelson and Phil Bevis.

Lakeside Presbyterian, morning, Judge William D. Edson and Frank Crassweller.

St. Paul's Episcopal, morning, A. V. Snell.

Second Presbyterian, morning, W. H. Schackles.

Asbury M. E., morning, I. G. Wollin.

Glen Avon Presbyterian, morning, Albert Baldwin.

Endion M. E., morning, E. M. Moran.

The conference will be held next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and tells that it is hoped to accomplish, Chairman Moore made a special plea for a large attendance at the banquet to be given Friday evening. Continuing, he said:

"I would suggest to you men that you interest your boys from 16 to 20 years of age. Bring them with you, and if they won't be touched by the speakers there, it is an impossibility to touch them at all. If a man who is poor will ever feel at home in this world it will be at that banquet."

In his address Mr. Innes said, in part:

"A man who is merely a moral man could not stand six months in India or any heathen land. He must have the message of Christ in his heart to withstand the savage and low instincts which are all too prevalent in those countries.

"We are dealing with big things nowadays, and the present movement is one of them. Neither you nor I can overcome the existing conditions in India, but God can overcome them, and He will, too, through this present Laymen's movement.

"There's one thing that I observed there that resembles this country, and that is that the people are absolutely wicked. And there's another thing that makes one's blood run cold over there—the absolute dethronement of God which happens daily.

"In India idolatry is rampant even now. Of any one but Christ seems to be the dogma of the Indians. Unless a person goes into a heathen land for some good purpose; if he has not a firm premonition that God is leading him there, his mission is useless. Unless you have constructed a personal channel between your Heavenly Father and yourself you could not stand it.

"I believe that when Christ told His disciples that this world should not pass away until it was evangelized, He was dead right," was one of his declarations. He said that fully 50 per cent of the Indians who are put to death are accorded that treatment because of their confession of Christ.

"When India is saved and when China is saved it will be a miracle of God's grace. We laymen will all have to get together and push almighty hard for the beginning of it."

THE STRUGGLE FOR MASTERY

It Is a Constant One Says Two Harbors Pastor.

Rev. T. Stanley Oadams of Two Harbors, preached in the First Methodist Episcopal church of this city last night. His theme was, "The Sovereign Master," and the discourse enlisted the close attention of the large audience present. Taking for his text the words, "One is your Master even Christ," Matthew xxiii, 8, the speaker said: "The struggle among men for mastery is an interesting, and at times a pathetic study. Persons are the most potent factors of progress. Mastery among men is achieved by devoted service. In every realm of life the struggle is still going on. Man is a contributor, a helper. Christ is Master.

"In Christ the term is lifted to a higher plane, where human conscience, life, duty, service, spiritual concerns are affected. On the ground of absolute knowledge of all that lies within the sphere of religious life; as a Teacher; as the Giver of spiritual power; as the perfect character; and in having served humanity as no other has done, Christ is Master. The world only worships those who have served it. Service begets mastery, the mastery of human affections, the love of human hearts. Service touches its highest level in Jesus Christ. All that Christ has done finds its culmination in the Cross of Calvary. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself. This world will never be saved until men are ready to die for it. Sacrifice, solicitude for the welfare of others, the unfoldment of a divine love through consecrated human lives will yet redeem this world from its selfish slavery and the mastery of love will yet assert itself unto redeemed conditions through redeeemed men and women."

Constipation Should not be neglected. It leads to more serious troubles. It shows that the important functions of the liver are imperfectly performed. The best medicine to take for it is the mild, gentle and purely vegetable cathartic ties, among other things, is advocated, but until this is reached, the best possible service will be exacted from these utilities. Competition is objected to on the ground that competition means corruption.

TELLS WHAT SOCIALISTS HOPE TO DO

"In brief the Social-Democracy stands for every radical change that will bring means of production into the hands of the people."

Principles Set Forth.

Mr. Berger's statement in full is as follows: "A detailed review of what the Social-Democratic administration of Milwaukee intends to accomplish during the next two years, will be contained in the mayor's inaugural message.

"I wish only to state the general principles upon which this party stands and upon which we were elected on April 5. I, of course, will not repeat the platform.

"In the first place, the Social-Democratic party of Milwaukee is an integral part of the Socialist party of America. In Wisconsin we are officially named 'The Socialist-Democratic Party,' which is the customary international name.

"The Socialist party of America is the American expression of the international movement of modern wage workers for better food, better houses, sufficient sleep, more leisure, more education and more culture.

"The founders of the republic declared for political freedom.

"But we call attention to the fact that since the birth of this nation, a revolution in industry has taken place. Formerly hand labor and individual effort produced the necessities of mankind. Today, machine labor and social or associated labor are the means of producing those necessities. And while in that former time it was the imperative duty of the government to protect the individual in the possession of the property he had produced, so today, it is equally the duty of the government to protect associated labor, that is, the whole body of working people, in the possession of the products of their toil.

Middle Class Disappearing.

"The present system of social production by individual ownership has produced two classes—the propertyless class and the capitalist class. The middle class, once the backbone of this great nation, is fast disappearing in the mill of competition and the issue is now between the first two classes. All attempts to obscure this issue or to delay the settlement, are futile, for all other issues will be speedily absorbed by it. Thus it develops that the battle for human rights has become a battle to determine which form of government we shall have in the future—plutocracy or democracy.

"Political liberty alone has become inadequate; we must have both political and economic liberty. To secure this is the aim of the Social-Democracy.

"In city affairs we stand for public ownership of municipal utilities. We are well aware, however, that Milwaukee does not enjoy self-government, and that, as a rule no steps can be taken in that direction without an appeal to the state legislature at Madison.

"In municipal affairs, the Social-Democracy stands also for radical changes that will bring means of production into the hands of the people. It believes in self-government for the city, the initiative, the referendum, and the right of recall, in a just and equitable taxation, in efficient sanitary inspection of workshops and houses, and in the control of the food supply in the interests of the public health, and in the highest development of a reasonable public service. At the proper time, the Social-Democracy will initiate these and other things.

Not Complete Cures.

"We call attention to the fact that the measures we urge are in no way a complete cure for existing evils, nor are they necessarily Socialistic measures. They are to be viewed rather as needed palliatives, capable of being carried out even under present conditions. Under no circumstances should the working people rest content with municipal improvements which are merely temporary in their nature and must be entirely inadequate. They should move onward to the conquest of all public powers, to an entire change of the present system for one which shall secure to the people, collectively, the means of production and distribution.

"The mainspring of corruption in municipal affairs is found in the fact that a few aldermen or officials have it in their power to give away or sell franchises to capitalists, who thereby make millions. The temptation thus offered our public officials to secure a share in the millions thus given away is too great for the average man to withstand. If the city should operate its public utilities, the motive and the opportunity for bribery would be gone, even if minor evils and breaches of trust might continue, owing to the corrupting influence of the capitalist system, which makes money getting the sole object of life. The Social-Democracy therefore objects to that competition in public utilities, that competition that means corruption.

"We stand for the public ownership of public utilities; but until we reach this we will enforce the utmost legislation and best possible service from these utilities as far the present laws will permit.

Contracts and Bribery.

"We look upon the contract system also as a danger. It constantly induces contractors to bribe city officials on the one hand and to exploit their workmen on the other. Moreover, it is always in the interest of the city that citizens earn decent wages; therefore, instead of contractors, the labor unions ought to be encouraged. The city should stand pledged, as far as the charter permits, to employ only union labor at eight hours a day, and should require the same of all contractors doing contract city work.

"The money made out of the city by contractors will better go toward the relief of the unemployed; first, by the improvement of the streets; second, by the establishment of the public coal and wood yards and a public icehouse. In this climate ice is as necessary in summer as coal is in winter. These necessities should be sold at cost.

"The city could easily harvest an abundant crop of ice during the winter months, thus employing many citizens who would otherwise have to receive public aid. We realize that giving work to the unemployed can solve no industrial problem, but it is the least that can be done as a human duty towards those in distress.

"Free education is essential to a high civilization. Free books are as much a part of free education as free teachers and free schoolhouses. The Social-Democracy demands that books and school utensils be furnished free to all pupils attending the public schools.

Question of Taxes.

"This naturally leads us to the question of taxes. If corporations bore their share of taxes—figured even at the present valuation—the taxes of all citizens could be reduced 20 per cent and there would still be enough money left in the city treasury which could be used for public improvements of all kinds.

"Public health requires that attention to factories and workshops, better plumbing, more public baths, and a system of public street closets, such as is found in European cities.

"Public health also demands an extension of the free medical service. At the present time, many a disease, and even epidemics, get their origin from the fact that poor people shrink from consulting a physician because of the expense, until it is too late.

"While we realize that pauperism and prostitution are the legitimate outgrowth of the present system, which submerges the lower stratum of the proletariat, it is well known that certain wealthy citizens derive profit from degradation through the rent of old rookeries which are a menace both to public morals and the public health. We will see to it that all slum property shall be condemned and that steps shall be taken to protect our boys and girls.

"The city ought to afford the protection of the law to such of its citizens as are unable to afford it themselves. At present the poor know of the law only when they feel its crushing effect. A poor person with a just cause has no standing in the courts unless some lawyer is promised a big share of the proceeds of the case; if there are no proceeds, the poor person has no means of defense at all.

"This is a general outline of the principles that will guide the Social-Democratic administration. As to working details, we shall have to refer to our platform and the message of our mayor, Emil Seidel.

"We are hampered by an obsolete charter and laws made in favor of the capitalist class and the capitalist class only, but we again promise the best administration this city has ever had, and as far as human effort can secure it, we will make good our promise."

ENTER PLEAS OF GUILTY

Seven Admit Guilt of Charges Made By Grand Jury.

Trial of George Booker Will Be Held Later in Term.

The criminal term of the district court was considerably shortened this morning when seven prisoners at the county jail changed their pleas from not guilty to guilty.

This leaves but about a dozen cases to be tried. Nine of these against whom indictments were returned are ready for trial but there are several who have not yet been taken into custody.

Alfred Wicklund pleaded guilty to forgery in the second degree. Wicklund forged a check for $60.18 on P. H. Martin signing the name Louis Wicen the foreman, to the check. Albert W. Munson, who forged a check for $68.34 on the same parties, pleaded guilty.

Arwilda Underwood pleaded guilty to bigamy. John V. Niemi pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree. Niemi was the agent for the Finnish-American Publishing company. It was charged that he appropriated to his own use some $220.64.

Mike Maki pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree. He stole $36 from Wilho Lauren.

Harold H. Nordlie pleaded guilty to forgery in the second degree. He admitted that he forged a check on Gust Johnson for $65.

James Stanley pleaded guilty to the charge of adultery. Arwilda Underwood, the woman who pleaded guilty to the charge of bigamy, was the woman in the case.

Among the cases to be tried is that of Hans Morsen, who is accused of abusing Lillian Watts, a child, 13 years of age.

Nels Olson will be tried for assault in the second degree. He is accused of having made an assault on John Miller.

John Williams will be tried for grand larceny. On Jan. 27, it is charged that he stole from Martin McVean, $20 and a watch.

Frank Colombo and Vite Roccavecchie, will be tried for assault in the second degree. They are accused of assaulting Frank Daugherty with a knife, March 16.

John Kelly is accused of having enticed a woman into the state of Minnesota, for immoral purposes. The person mentioned in the indictment is Mazie Davis.

Chester O'Neil, Bedie Groztanich and Joe Vukelich, will try to show that they did not keep unlicensed drinking places in the city.

Isadore Burlack is accused of perjury. In the case of Sam Rakic and Milan Sagatovic, who were found guilty of swindling Wassil Stocki out of nearly $500, Burlack was one of the witnesses for the defense. He claimed that the men were with him all the day in Superior.

The trial of George Booker, for the alleged murder of his stepfather, will begin near the end of the term and the case for the state will be presented by Assistant County Attorney Warren E. Greene.

Nick Papkovich, who is accused of misrepresenting himself to C. G. Johnson, a West Duluth groceryman, and getting a bill of goods on another men's credit, is on trial this morning. The merchandise amounted to $52.26. Attorney Chauncey Colton is defending and County Attorney John H. Norton is conducting the case for the state. It is expected that the trial will be very short.

PEOPLE ARE OBLIGING

Census Enumerators Meeting With Consideration on All Sides.

Demand for Interpreters Is Readily Supplied By Supervisor.

The taking of the census is going along smoothly, according to J. W. Allen, assistant supervisor for St. Louis county. The enumerators are meeting with few obstacles in their work. People have been well instructed in the purposes and workings of the census and the campaign of education, which has been conducted for weeks past, is bearing fruit in a disposition on the part of everybody concerned to aid the census enumerators in every way possible.

One enumerator called up the main office this morning and asked for five interpreters for people speaking Chinese, Finnish, Polish, Servian and Bavarian. Mr. Allen keeps in touch with interpreters of every language and he has yet to be called upon for one that he cannot furnish.

People moving out of the city and people who are out of the city with their families at present furnish a problem that is taking time and care in its solution. The enumerators are supposed to take everyone who had his usual place of abode in Duluth April 15. There are people who have spent the winter in California and at numerous winter resorts, who have not yet returned to their homes. They will be reached by mail. People who are moving out of the city will be furnished with blanks to fill out before they leave. As an example of the consideration people are showing the enumerators, four men called at the central office this morning and filled out blanks. They are moving away with their families and thought of the census in the rush of moving.

On the whole, the predictions that the census would be complete and accurate in Duluth are being borne out by the results of the first few days' work. The enumerators are showing themselves to be efficient and painstaking, people are considerate and obliging and everybody is working to the end that the result of the census in Duluth may be an accurate count of the city's population.

If you are an employe (worker), answer the two following questions (if an employer or working on your own account, omit these questions):

21. Were you out of work April 15, 1910?
22. How many weeks were you out of work during the year 1909? (The expression "out of work" means not able to find work or employment. Persons who are on a strike, or are voluntarily idle, or on a vacation, or are incapacitated for work because of sickness or physical disability are not to be considered "out of work" in the sense in which the words are here used.)
23. Are you able to read (either English or some other language)?
24. Are you able to write (either English or some other language)?
25. Have you attended school or any educational institution any time since Sept. 1, 1909?

If you are the head of the family living in this home, state:

26. Whether the home is owned by you or rented.
27. If owned by you, is it mortgaged?
28. Were you in either the Union or Confederate army or navy at the time of the Civil war? (If answer is "Yes," write "U. A." for Union army, "U. N." for Union navy, "C. A." for Confederate army, or "C. N." for Confederate navy.)
29. Are you blind (both eyes)? (Answer should be "Yes" if the person can not see to read with the aid of glasses; otherwise, answer "No.")
30. Are you deaf and dumb?

BEGIN ACTIVE GRADING.

Construction of Soo Line Across St. Croix Has Commenced.

New Richmond, Wis., April 18.—Active grading operations on the new Soo line cut-off between this city and the St. Croix river have begun. Difficulties with the farmers, which for a time threatened to delay the work and perhaps make necessary the selection of a different route, have practically all been adjusted, and there remains not to exceed a half dozen cases in which it will be necessary to institute condemnation proceedings. The estimates for the new Soo line bridge over the St. Croix call for 5,000 tons of structural steel, and will involve an expenditure of about $600,000. Traiser & Barrett have begun the erection of a large dry kiln for the Willow River Lumber company. The steam supply will be taken from the planing mill. The company is also erecting another large shed for its oak lumber exclusively.

MARINE NEWS

DAMAGE WAS NOT SERIOUS

Tomlinson Officials Say Hoover and Mason Was Only Slightly Damaged.

It was denied at the Tomlinson office this morning that there was any serious damage to the steamer Hoover and Mason of the Tomlinson line. It was stated that a flue was blown out and that the vessel was able to proceed on its way by its own steam in less than two hours after the accident.

The mishap to the vessel occurred off Outer Island. The Chili was near, but if the reports given out in the Tomlinson office are correct, the Chili had little need to give the Hoover and Mason relief.

No news of the fireman reported to have been scalded, was given out.

The officials of the United Wireless office would give me no news about the affair. It was stated at the Tomlinson office that the story of the accident had been exaggerated.

The Hoover & Mason was the first boat to load ore here the present season.

TOT CRYING BESIDE ITS MANGLED MOTHER

Negaunee, Mich., April 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Three bodies were buried side by side in the local cemetery Sunday, as the result of the suicide and double murder enacted by Frank Saarinen Friday morning. Saarinen is the man who dynamited his home, killing himself, wife and 5-year-old son.

An infant daughter, aged 3, the only survivor of the tragedy, is being cared for by neighbors. The little one was found after the explosion sitting near the mangled form of her mother, crying, and with outstretched hands begged them to take her. The only marks on the girl were a scratch on one of her arms and another on her forehead.

Morbid crowds are visiting the scene of the tragedy.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

Duluthians will be interested in the following notice from the Musical Leader and Concert Goer:

"Miss Rena Vivienne, formerly a member of Henry Savage's 'Madam Butterfly' company, assisted Leo Tecktonius, pianist, in a concert at the Hotel Astor on Tuesday night. Miss Vivienne has just returned from Berlin, where she has been studying for several years, and her achievements prove that she is to be reckoned among the capable young singers who should have assured success. She sang an aria from 'Madam Butterfly' and one from 'Pagliacci,' with a voice of great beauty and a clear Italian diction that carried through every part of the hall. She was equally charming and intelligent in a group of songs which included 'Cecilie,' by Richard Strauss, 'Mattinata,' by Leoncavallo; 'Mai,' by Reynaldo Hahn, and 'A Birthday,' by Woodman.

"Miss Vivienne is a fine example of the American girl who is not satisfied to conquer the roles of one language, but is equipped equally well in others. She has great personal charm.

"Mr. Tecktonius played a varied program, including compositions by Beethoven, Brahms, Mendelssohn Liszt, Liadow, Rachmaninoff, Moszkowski, Korestchenko and two of his own compositions."

ILL IN WEST.

Miss Maude Leone Writes Poetry in Hospital.

Miss Maude Leone, well known to Duluth play goers, has been playing in stock at Salt Lake City, Utah, but became ill and has been at a hospital in that city. The Herald-Reupblic prints the following concerning the young actress, and it will be read with interest here:

Miss Maude Leone, in private life Mrs. Willard Mack, is ill at the Holy Cross hospital, but is progressing so well that she will be able to leave there in a few days. Yesterday Miss Leone sent for a district messenger boy. The boy was admitted to her room in the hospital. As he entered the room his face lighted up.

"'I know you,' he said, 'you're Miss Leone at the Bungalow. Us kids think you're great. We wants you to git well and come back.'

"It was a real touch of sympathy, and the artistic temperament of the clever actress was moved by the boy's well wishes. Her feelings found vent in the following verses, which came to the Herald-Republican last night:

"From what strange sources comfort comes
When with trouble waves our hearts are stirred,
When we lay stricken, dazed and dumb,
Afraid our prayers have not been heard.

"There's always something sent to prove
That we are never forgotten quite;
That God still guides us with His love
To help us onward through the night.

"A kindly word a tender thought—
Just something to show that 'some-cares,' Full many a darkened soul has brought out of the depths of a deep despair.

"One day I lay in a darkened room
Where illness claimed me for its own;
Then a few kind words from boyish lips
Lightened the burden my heart had known.

"'I'm the messenger boy—you sent for me;
You looked so young and happy, Gee!
I'm sorry you're sick; I think you're fine.'

'Just boyish praise in a boyish way,
The kind that is on the square,
But it lightened the rest of the days for me.
And it lay on my heart like a prayer."

FINNISH TENOR

To Appear in Recital in Y. W. C. A.

Tomorrow evening at the Y. W. C. A. the musical public of Duluth will have the first opportunity of hearing John Koskelo, the great Finnish tenor in a magnificent program of songs from Wagner's operas, "Lohengrin" and "Die Walkure," Beethoven's beautiful song cycle "An die Ferne Geliebte," and songs by Schubert, Schumann, Sibelius, Merikanto, with some of the oddly fascinating Finnish folk songs, which Mr. Koskelo sings so wonderfully, and with which he made such a hit at the last meeting of the Matinee Musicale.

Mr. Koskelo will only remain in this country for a short time, until he has mastered the English language, Finnish, Norwegian and German being the languages he speaks at present. In September he will sing at the first concert of the Minneapolis Smphony Orchestra and will then return to Berlin and Dresden for the winter.

Mr. Koskelo will be assisted at the concert by Faith Helen Rogers, pianiste. Mrs. D. H. Day will accompany the songs at the piano.

The program follows:

Lohengrin's "Herkunft" ...... Wagner
Mr. Koskelo.
"Nocturne" .... Sgambati
"Capriccio" .... Brahms
Faith Helen Rogers.
"An die Ferne Geliebte" .... Beethoven
"Die Nibensonnen" .... Schubert
"Der Leiermann" .... Schubert
"Aufamthalt" .... Schubert
Mr. Koskelo.
Three etudes, 3, 1 and 7 .... Chopin
Faith Helen Rogers.
"Illale" (Evening) .... Sibelius
Group of five Finnish songs........
"Sigmund's Liebeslied" from "Die Waukure" .... Wagner
Mr. Koskelo.

Mr. Koskelo has sung much abroad. Of his appearance in Berlin the Berliner Tageblat wrote: "The singer owns a beautiful and tender tenor voice. His technique is also good and solid. Where the soloists formed a duet the result was truly wonderful."

Of his appearance in "Tammerfors of Finland" the critic wrote: "The numbers by Schubert seemed to best suit the artist. The presentation of "Der Leiermann" was very appealing and fascinating. In "Die Nebensonnen" we could admire the singer's voice in its full brilliancy. An artist who can interpret Schubert as masterfully as Herr Koskelo is truly consummate in his self reliance."

THE EVENING STORY

THE WOOING OF DOROTHY

By Mollie E. Jameson.

When Dorothy Leverell learned that her one-time lover, Luke Deverill, had been invited to Hannah Elstree's brithday party, her first impulse was to decline the invitation she had received.

But Hannah Elstree and Dorothy always had been bosom friends. And Hannah would not listen to Dorothy's intimation that she would stay away.

"Why, I couldn't enjoy myself," she said, "if you were not there to help the fun along. Besides, we don't know that Luke will come. Perhaps he is as scared to meet you as you are to meet him."

Dorothy did not relish the idea that Luke would be afraid to meet her—Luke, who for two years had been her sweetheart. How many pleasant occasions they had participated in!

And then had come the rupture. A few hot words on Luke's part and Dorothy's angry retort had changed all.

Perhaps Dorothy would not have decided to go to the party after all had not her little brother, Barnabas, spoken up when she said at home for the twentieth time that she would not go to any party where Luke Deverill was to be present.

Barnabas was an obesrvant lad and had his own ideas of how the trouble between his sister and Luke, whom he greatly admired, would end. He was a little strategist, too.

"What's the odds if Luke Deverill's there or not?" he said. "Folks say he's sweet on Hannah Elstree now, and, of course, he ought to be at the party. But what do you care?"

That shot settled it.

"Luke Deverill's affairs are nothing to me anyway," she exclaimed, "and I guess I'll just let Hannah see I am not at all jealous of her!"

And so she went to the party. Barnabas, who was a favorite with everybody, had been invited to attend as her escort.

Luke Deverill sat at Hannah's elbow at the table where they drank tea. Dorothy tried to carry herself with unconcern, but she wondered why she had ever come to Hannah Elstree's party. She condemned Hannah in her heart for asking her there only to endure torture.

As for Luke Deverill, if from time to time he did look her way, she never noticed him. Her eyes were bent upon her teacup.

Her heart sank within her when she found herself vis-a-vis to him when the party assembled later in the evening for the important feature of the whole festivity, namely, the drawing of their individual "fortunes" from Hannah's birthday cake.

When Dorothy presently discovered herself to be the possessor of the thimble she flushed redly, and thrust it hurriedly and secretly into the pocket of her gown.

But when Luke Deverill announced himself to be the proud possessor of the ring, she turned as lily-pale as she had been rose-red before, and whispered aside to Barny that it was time for them to be going home.

It was not until their return journey across the meadows was all but completed that Dorothy herself became conscious of a loss.

Barny, still chewing the cud of pleasant reflection, for he had feasted not wisely but too well upon other good things beside the plum cake, was marching stolidly ahead, when an exclamation from his sister recalled him.

"My ring! Oh, Barny, mother's ring! I put it on tonight because I had no other." She flushed redly again, remembering that the "other" which she had once worn, and now might wear no more, was Luke Deverill's.

"It was slack on my finger. I remember, just before we began drawing from the cake, thinking how slack it was, and that it might be better to take it off. And now I have lost it—mother's ring, the only thing I have of hers. Oh, whatever shall I do?"

Barny whistled reflectively. To him the loss of a ring was not such a great thing after all. Had he not a couple of rosy apples, not to speak of sweets and crackers, stowed away in his pockets from Hannah's party against the morrow? But he was willing, notwithstanding, to offer his sister such help as lay in his power.

"Don't worry," he said consolingly. "I reckon you won't have to look farther than Luke Deverill for your lost finery. I wondered, when he called out that he'd got the ring, how there could be two rings in the batch, seein' I'd found one already.

"But I didn't say anythin,' in case they would want to take the ring from me an' let one of the girls have it. Will we turn back now an' ask him if he has it? He'll most likely be at the Elstrees yet."

Dorothy declined to turn back. But the next day the loss of her mother's ring preyed upon her mind. Barny obdurately refused to "go fussing around Luke Deverill at his farm asking for a ring."

And Dorothy could not nerve herself to go to Luke Deverill on such an errand—or on any errand.

But later in the day she could no longer stand the strain of having lost her mother's ring. She was pale and felt nervous as she walked toward the Deverill farm.

Luke Deverill saw her coming and rubbed his eyes, hardly believing them. He opened the gate leading to the little garden, gay with old-fashioned gilly flowers and pinks, and stood aside, silently waiting for her to pass in.

It was the girl, after all, who found her voice first. She dropepd her eyes beneath the pale, stern face above her.

"I have come—for my ring."

The words came in a choking whisper; Dorothy's fair cheeks flushed redly. The man darted hor a keen, questioning, hardly-believing glance.

"And you shall have your ring." He stretched out both his hands, taking Dorothy's in his in the dear old way she remembered so well.

It was a moment or two ere he turned to fumble in his pocket for the ring. Such search entailed the letting go of at least one of her hands, and as one who has regained a long-lost but very precious treasure, Deverill shrunk from even such temporary relinquishment.

Still holding the left hand gently in his own, he produced the little golden circlet.

"May I?" his eyes questioned, though his voice spoke not at all. Dorothy nodded. He had come back to her, the dear old friend of her childish days, and she could deny him nothing.

It was not until the ring had been slipped upon her finger that she glanced down.

The next moment Dorothy's cheeks were flaming rosy red. She glanced up quickly, a shy defiance flashing out of her blue eyes.

"The ring—it is not my mother's! It is——" she was going to say "my own," but some sudden memory checked her. She had remembered that, by rights, that same ring would possibly shortly belong to Hannah Elstree.

"It is?" He held her hands imprisoned still, gently questioning her with his eyes.

Dorothy flashed back defiance at him. It was a very half-hearted sort of defiance, but vastly becoming all the same, or so, at least, thought the young man to whom she vouchsafed it.

"It is not the ring I asked for. That was—another," stammered she. He smiled down reassurance.

"And you shall have another—another, presently, sweetheart, just as soon as you will let me put it on your finger. You know that if I had my will, dear, you should have worn that wedding ring long ago."

It took some time to explain, after all. Such explanation was rather pleasant than otherwise. Deverill—he had his arm about Dorothy now—laughed.

"I fancy that Barny has either been romancing, or will be found to have your lost ring in his own possession, little one. Not but that I owe the young scamp a debt of gratitude."

ON SPARING THE ROD

By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD

If we look with condemnation on the whipping post for grown people in the full possession of all the faculties they ever had, how can we approve of the slipper used on children with faculties but half developed? The general sense of all civilization now seems to be that we shall not revenge ourselves for crime, but shall simply prevent its further commission; how, then, can we treat tender little beings without the power to help themselves, with any less consideration?

Assuredly the time is not distant when duty in this regard will be seen at a different point of view from that of the past. The half-opened blossom will not be made to suffer unnecessary pain for the worm at its heart, nor shut up away from the sunshine that the worm may be left to eat in peace, but gentle forces will find the blight and remove it, and let the bud bloom to what perfection it may in all the sunshine it can have. That it may take almost infinite patience to bring up children as children, and not as criminals, is not to weigh in the least against the necessity. Infinite patience is the first fruit of all true love, and no mother, no aunt, no guardian of children, has a right to be without a goodly supply of it, and while attending to the good of the children otherwise, to be busy besides in the active cultivation of this heavenly plant in themselves.

There are numberless ways in repressing evil without exciting it, and of cutting off sin, not by lopping the little branches, but by gently digging around the root and exterminating as much as can be reached at once in the yet imperfect system, which is to grow more perfect as each generation regards its successors as something, if not already superior to itself, at any rate to be made so, and not to be kept inferior by the lash of tongue and rod.

But it requires love to repress evil gently and firmly, to rear children with the tenderness that condemnation of rude methods requires, and every one does not naturally possess this love. That is a bold person that confesses so flagrant a fault as an absence from the composition of the love of children, not one's own merely, but all people's children.

For that love has become universally recognized as a necessary feature of a worthy nature, as something by the absence of which one is indeed unnatural, not to say monstrous.

Owing to this fact, it is very seldom that one admits, even when feeling it, that children are a nuisance, and more generally people consider it wise to pretend interest and affection whether it is genuine or not. Of course, as everybody knows, the politic person, the electioneering man, the woman with an object to gain, always begins by kissing the children; and the behavior of many young ladies in regard to the matter was long since caricatured by Dickens in one of his sketches, where he represents them crowding around the nurse who brings in the baby to the christening, and asking, as if with innocent ignorance and a reminiscence of kittens and puppies, if the dear little thing can open its eyes yet.

But there are many people who honestly think they do love children, and would be mightily indignant if told that they deceived themselves, that children annoyed them, and were on the whole rather disagreeable than otherwise to them. These individuals do love children for a little while, as an amusement when they have nothing else to do, and to caress when the child is sunny and pretty and sweet and clean.

But let the child be ugly, and it does not attract them; let it be neglected, and of a dirty face, and it repels them; let it scream, and they can't for the life of them see why people bring their children on journeys, or to church, or into the drawing room, or at the table—according to the situation of the particular annoyance at the moment.

But they who surely and absolutely love children do not stay to see whether their faces and frocks are clean and pretty or not—the child is a lovely thing to them under all the mask of the dust of which we are made, the soil, the wear and tear; they do not much care whether the child screams or not; often indeed, to them, as to the old miner in the California theater, who, when a baby set up its pipes, called out to the orchestra to stop their strumming and let him hear the baby yell, the sound is a sort of music; and like the man who considered being beaten at whist; the next pleasure to beating, they had rather hear a baby yell than not have one around at all.

BASIS OF GOOD FORM

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Underlying politeness is consideration for others. Conventional rules are not arbitrary. They have grown up, imperceptibly, little by little, during hundreds of years, just as the common law which obtains in our courts has grown. Reasons of convenience and comfort are under good form, and it is that the wheels of family and social machinery may run without friction that we have rules for the daily life.

Mere deportment may be of little worth. It may be a veneer, easily cracked, soon broken. What we need is that gentleness which refuses to wound another's feelings, that thoughtful love which can take another's place; in short, we need considerateness as the basis of politeness. Thus, at the table, good manners require that people should be pleasant, not glum and morose. A meal taken in silence and hurry, when the first effort of every one is to get fed and get away, is not a meal where table manners are correct.

Equally, wherever people interrupt each other rudely, each trying to take and hold the floor, where there is fault-finding or criticism of the food, table manners are violated. Any fault-finding by anybody, anywhere in the home, for any reason, is a distinct attack on the home's tranquility, and a fracture of good manners.

A lady was much disturbed by the tendency of her husband and children to find fault. So she set up a complaint box. The box, labelled duly, was installed in a convenient place, and there everyone who had a complaint to make of the food, the housekeeping, or anything at all, was told to drop in a slip of folded paper. The complaint must be made in writing.

If somebody thought that baked beans appeared too often, or that there might be pies and puddings more frequently, he or she could say so. The bread or butter, if not quite up to the mark, could be mentioned in the little note of the aggrieved one.

On Sundays, after the midday dinner, the complaint box was opened. All complaints were read by the father of the family and were discussed freely. If they were held to be justified they were passed to the mother, who promised to set them right in the future. If they were not justified the person who made them paid a fine. Fines in the aggregate went to a fresh air fund, to send sick children from town with their mothers into the country.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

To Stop Bleeding.

To stop bleeding of the fingers, hand, arm or foot raise the part as high as possible. The best plan in the case of, say the hand, is to put it under the cold water tap for a minute or half a minute, and then raise it above the head.

For a Run Down System.

When a person feels jumpiness, weariness and listlessness, accompanied by headache, there is indicated a general run down state of the nerves and the system. Plenty of plain, nourishing food should be eaten. There should be daily outdoor exercise and a good internal nerve tonic should be taken.

Redness of the Nose.

There are various causes for redness of the nose, not to suggest the use of alcoholic beverages as being one of them. If cause exists the remedy suggests itself. But another cause is defective circulation. In such a case outdoor exercise is necessary and much good will result from a cold bath every morning, followed by a brisk rub-down. A good tonic should be taken.

Cure for Slight Headache.

A good cure for slight headaches is to take a facial bath of cold water into which a few drops of sweet spirits of ammonia have been dropped. This has a most refreshing and invigorating effect.

Cake for an Invalid.

To make a good cake for an invalid beat two ounces of butter and two ounces of sugar to a cream, add two eggs, well beaten, and three ounces of flour, mixing well between each addition. Add the grated rind of half a lemon, and lastly one-quarter of a teaspoonful of baking powder. Have ready a greased and papered tin, pour in the cake mixture. Bake immediately about one hour.

Butter an egg shirrer; place a round of thin toast in it. Cover the toast with mushrooms and placo one egg on top of each, dust with salt and pepper, dot with butter and add two tablespoonfuls of cream. Place in a hot oven until the egg is set. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Banana Salad.

Mix finely cut celery with sliced bananas and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise made without mustard and whitened with whipped cream. Add chopped nuts, if desired.

Dessert—Macaroon Ice Cream.

Whip two pints of double cream until stiff; sweeten with one cupful of powdered sugar and freeze; cover fifteen macaroons with the juice of four oranges and one-half cupful of sugar for thirty minutes, then add to the cream when partly frozen; freeze and serve in macaroon cases.

THE BUSY WORLD'S HEART SIDE

By THE OPTIMIST.

Who has not noted the difference between the courage of evening and that of morning?

Now, whence came the courage of the morning? You say from rest. But that does not answer the question. Where did rest get it? Where did sleep pick it up? Of course, the sense of power was within us all the while. Sleep opened some door that had become shut, and courage stepped forth again.

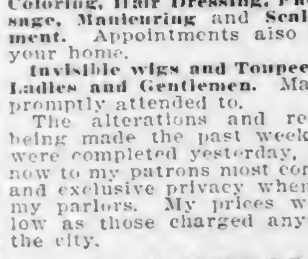
We all "have it in us." No one knows what he can do till he tries.

The plans of weary night are not to be relied on. Make your plans in the morning. Take your bearings in the morning. See things in the glow of the morning. Give up the evening to repose. It is not the nervous visions of the sleepless night, not the distorted desperations of a feverish pacing of the midnight chamber, that give the true proportions of the situation. Light is the joy of life. Darkness is a depression. Let trouble go and take a rest. Shut out the ghosts with an iron door of resolution. Leave it till another day. We can only live one day at a time, thank God! For "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

AS WEAK AS YOUR BROTHER

By CARA REESE

All the same there are some folks who could not put the cheating past you very far. Hence, be not self-righteous overmuch.



There are some folks who would not put the bribe, the graft, the double-dealing, the deceit and spitework past you very far; you know what that means. It means that you are as unable to withstand petty meanness and despicable deeds as the acquaintance whose downfall you are bewailing. It would never do to set the wine glass before you, or provide an excellent opportunity for sleight of hand at cards or leave the doors of the safety vaults unguarded; the sequel would never get past you, sure enough.

And in many other ways the grants and gifts, good, bad or indifferent, never get past you. Even in an honest sense, the small commission on a side line, which might, with propriety, have been permitted to slip through your fingers as a Godsend to some capable and needy toiler, the overtime pressures which might, in some instances, be unnecessary, but a full day's reprieve from anxiety and starvation to another, the reward or regard supposedly to be distributed or shared where fair co-operation has secured the order or won praiseworthy mention, never get past you and your greedy appropriation for self-interest or gratification. The "finders keeps" spirit prevails whether in material treasure against which your foot unexpectedly trips, or in outpouring of compliments, praise for the crowd or the bon bons or cigars.

Nothing ever gets past you, the tentacles of greed reach out far and near, not even a penny, nor a cheap toy, nor a fragment escapes. The wage-earning job which you do not need and if you had merely said so would have gone over your head to a worthy "next in line," is nabbed and grabbed to be jugled, perhaps to pay some obligation, or to win favor or to bear money value. The contests from which you might have withdrawn gracefully, the offices held in number, the committees' duties are eagerly sought and filed in name rather than see a fellow creature favored. And the habit is growing through your indulgence and encouragement; nothing gets past you any more.

All that some people need is opportunity. And that some people need is a favorable chance, and lo! results are precisely the same as certain present results in evidence which relentlessly lead up to the fate of an outlaw. And the same holds true concerning vice in its varied forms. To be assailed by a thirst for the intoxicant, to be dazzled by spurious gems and false glitter, to meet temptation in alluring guise have been experiences of the self-righteous in many instances, or alas! the self-righteous, too, might have succumbed and been drawn under. All this is sad enough, but when the good things of life come as far as you and no further, when the civic impulse for betterment is checked at your door, when the philanthropic appeal stops short at your gesture, when the bars are up in the thoroughfare at your command to prevent progress, then indeed the very angels weep and would not put a broken decalogue past you very far.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY.

If eyes were made for seeing,
Then Beauty is its own excuse for being.
—Emerson.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY'S JEWEL.

The Republican party has a precious jewel which is its most highly prized possession. Mr. Bryan, in a letter from South America intended to be read at a Jefferson day banquet, exposed this jewel to the admiration of his Democratic followers, and seems to treat it as a new discovery.

The name of this jewel is inconsistency—not consistency, but inconsistency. What the Republican party would have done without it, and without the extraordinary popular credulity and blind faith that have made it effective, it is hard to imagine.

Mr. Bryan points out that in 1896, when he was advocating the free coinage of silver at the sacred ratio of 16 to 1, he said that more money would mean higher prices. He argued that all the money in the country is in one balance, and all the commodities in the country are in the other balance. When you add more money, the money balance goes down and the commodity balance goes up; it takes more money to balance an unchanged amount of commodities, so prices are higher. That idea is called the quantitative theory, and Mr. Bryan urged it upon the people.

The Republican party said it was perfectly absurd; that it was a hollow theory without any shell; that it was the hole in the doughnut without any doughnut; that, in short, there was nothing to it.

And now, after high prices have come to such an extent that people wonder how anybody ever looked upon them as things to be sought and fought for, the Republican party is engaged in showing that it isn't the tariff or the trusts or stock-watering or monopoly that makes high prices, but more money. Much gold has been dug, and the store of money is greatly increased; so prices necessarily go up. Mr. Taft has explained it that way in a speech in which he declared that the "best tariff law that ever was" had nothing to do with the high cost of living.

But that is the quantitative theory of money; the very thing Mr. Bryan was preaching in 1896, and the very thing the Republican party said was false. No wonder Mr. Bryan exults at this wholesale conversion of the Republican party to his way of thinking.

Mr. Bryan isn't trying to revive the issue of free silver. Nobody wants free silver now, because nobody wants higher prices. Lower prices are what everybody is looking for now—everybody, that is, except Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Cannon and Mr. Morgan and a few others.

But this abrupt switching about of the Republican party is a new use of its precious jewel of inconsistency, and Mr. Bryan most assuredly has a right to chuckle over it.

The jewel is nothing new, however. The Republican party has declared, in its heart-to-heart talks with the people about the tariff, that the foreigner pays the tariff tax, and that there is no tariff tax to be paid. It has proclaimed the policy of protection as a noble instrument for the good of the American workingman, and then it has imported hordes of European workingmen to underbid the American workingman in his own home. It has asserted that the tariff was in the interests of the farmer because it protected his wheat against the competition of foreign wheat, thereby giving him high prices; and it has declared that the tariff has nothing whatever to do with the high prices of farm products, because this country exports so many farm products that the tariff couldn't affect their home prices. It has taken credit for periods of prosperity created by the sun and the rain and the people's need to buy food, raiment and shelter; and when its own bounties to Special Privilege have drained so much of the people's wealth away from the people that they no longer could buy, and hard times came, it has blamed the result to its opponents.

Consistency is a jewel; but inconsistency, as used by the Republican party, is a jewel that is far more precious and vastly more interesting.

THE BAKERS AND THEIR BREAD.

It isn't astonishing that the bakers are up in arms over the proposed ordinance governing their business in the interest of cleanliness and public health. Probably the public never yet attempted to regulate a private business in the interest of the common good that the men engaged in that business did not become indignant and protest with might and main.

In the present case, the bakers seem willing to accept every proposed regulation except that requiring each separate loaf of bread to be wrapped and sealed. This, they say, will so greatly increase the cost of production that they will have to raise the price from 5 cents to 6 cents a loaf. Turned over on its other side, this sounds very much like a threat of punishment if the city takes the step it proposes; and threats are not good arguments in a case of this sort.

The health commissioner declares that this plan of requiring each loaf of bread to be wrapped and sealed is the most important provision in the ordinance; and nobody who has seen bread handled out of baker's delivery wagons will fail to agree with him. It isn't pleasant to go into the details which the requirement that loaves shall be wrapped is intended to cure; let it suffice to say that the provision is needed very much, and that the slight increase in cost it entails is by no means large enough to excuse an increase in the price of bread.

RICH MINES OF WEALTH.

Isn't there an old story about a man who fancied there was treasure buried in his property, and who spaded it all up and, finding no Spanish gold, planted the spaded ground and found, after all, that his land was rich in treasure because its soil yielded fruitfully? If there isn't such a story there ought to be, and in a way it is applicable to Northeastern Minnesota.

If land near Duluth could be capitalized and stock sold to investors, and if exploration resulted in clearing and spading up the ground without discovering mineral wealth, the stockholders could do as well out of farm products as they will out of the average mining exploitation.

Saturday evening The Herald published some vivid sentences from reports made on Northern Minnesota's soil by Prof. Thomas Shaw which are being published and circulated by the Northern Pacific railroad. Prof. Shaw is an acknowledged expert, and his enthusiasms are the products of keen observation and ripe experience. When he says that St. Louis county has room for 300,000 more farmers, that the adaptation of the county for growing vegetables is unexcelled, that the most productive herd of dairy cattle in the state is in St. Louis county, and that Northern Minnesota is fitted to beat Holland for dairy production, Aberdeenshire for beef and Denmark for pork, it means something. It means that rich mines of wealth are being overlooked by men in search of livelihood and fortune.

RETARDING SETTLEMENT.

The sympathy of every community in Northern Minnesota which has had its development retarded by the niggardliness or neglect of nation or state will go out to the communities whose hopes have been centered in the opening of the Cass Lake and Deer River Indian lands which congress ordered placed at the disposal of settlers two years ago.

Last week the Cass Lake Commercial club passed strong resolutions on the subject, and the attention of the senators and congressmen from Minnesota should be directed toward the subject matter of these resolutions.

The act of congress declaring these lands open as soon as the timber was removed was passed in May, 1908. There are now, it is said, between 30,000 and 40,000 acres of these lands from which the timber has been removed. The greater part of these idle acres are suitable for agriculture, and there are settlers anxious to go upon them and till their soil. Indeed, counting upon the prompt opening of the lands in accordance with the will of congress expressed in law, many settlers have in good faith gone upon the lands and now await the opportunity to perfect their titles, so that they may build farm homes in what was lately a wilderness.

They reckoned without the department of the interior, however. That department, on one excuse or another, has postponed the opening of these lands until patience is worn to the breaking point.

It is proposed, therefore, that the representatives of Minnesota in congress shall look into the causes of the repeated delays, and see if there isn't some way to cut the red tape that is holding back these needed acres.

The demand is reasonable, and if the department doesn't act promptly, congress should inquire why its orders have not been obeyed.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

The country has had a pleasant winter and spring discussing the high cost of living, the iniquities of Joe Cannon, the reckless and arrogant greed of the trusts, the perfidy of the Republican party, the treachery of Ballinger, the supine spinelessness of the president, the wicked robbery of the new tariff law, and other choice topics.

The time has come, however, when the country is going to be rather too busy to give so much attention to these subjects as it has during the winter. They will not be forgotten, of course; they will be with us just the same, and will come in handy on the days when rain checks are given out.

But the baseball season is on, and the American people are going to occupy themselves with matters that, though old, are ever new.

The National and American leagues have begun business already. The American association starts this week. The minor leagues will trail along. Our own Minnesota-Wisconsin league will play ball May 11. Vacant lot leagues have already begun work, and hordes of leagueless clubs are arranging dates.

So the American people are about to become very busily engaged in important matters. There are percentages to be made and kept track of, and there are batting and fielding records to be made and kept track of. There are umpires to be hooted at when they fail to see things as we see them. There are batters to be upbraided when they fail to connect with the ball, and there are fielders to be reproached bitterly when the ball slips through their eager fingers.

There is, indeed, much business in hand to be done. There are new excuses to be invented for getting an afternoon off to attend the game, or new eloquence must be acquired for making the old excuses go once more. The loud-voiced fans must invent new patter to hurl at the players for the regalement of the bleachers, or give new twists to the old cries. The baseball reporters must devise new and more cryptic phrases to describe the infinite variety of evolutions in a ball game. The captains must create new excuses for losing, and new ways to fasten the blame on the umpire.

There is much to do, and it will be done with a will. The fan, the baseball reporter, the captain, the umpire and the player approach their momentous tasks with new energy and new enthusiasm. There is a work to be done, and they are the boys to do it. The tariff, the trusts, perfidious public servants and the tyranny of large interests were well enough to discuss in the drab days when the diamond was covered with snow, and they will be good enough now for rainy days. More timely, now, and more appealing, will be stories of how Casey swatted the ball for a three-bagger, and how Niemeyer fanned nine men in succession.

THE PLAYGROUND MOVEMENT.

The movement to provide public playgrounds for city children is a crusade that speaks for itself. Nobody who has witnessed the difference between children playing in streets or alleys and children playing in well-equipped public playgrounds needs to be told that the movement is a splendid thing. The Duluth Playground association, at Saturday's meeting, was able to show that its work thus far in this city has justified itself; and its request for subscriptions to a fund of $1,000 for new work should bring a prompt and generous response.

SHOULD TEST OFTENER.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In your paper of the 6th inst. is a notice to the dairymen from Health Commissioner H. E. Webster, wherein he says that milk from cows that have not been tested for tuberculosis will be condemned. That is a good idea, but so far the tuberculin testing of cows in our city has been somewhat lax. The health department seems to think it enough to test the cows when they arrive from the country, while they sometimes miss the cows that are bought or exchanged within the city, whose milk is sold with other milk.

Tuberculin test, says the government report, should be done once or even twice a year. The dairymen would favor that, I think. It is just as much in their favor to have all their cows tested regularly, as to the consumers of milk. A healthy herd is a good recommendation. We are glad to have the test. S. MAGNUSSON.

HACK DRIVERS' CHARGES.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In the history of all great disasters, the ghouls and buzzards, who preyed on the misfortunes of others, have stood out in sad contrast to the heroes who have worked tirelessly to alleviate the sufferings of those whom disaster laid low.

No one who has had experience in a situation like that in Duluth on Saturday night or during the big storm last July need ask on which side the hack drivers of the city enroll themselves when the opportunity comes, even though it is on a smaller scale than in big disasters. When there is no incentive, the hack drivers observe the ordinance regulating their charges, if one watches them closely enough, but in times of distress, when people cannot say anything if they are held up, the hack drivers do not hesitate to put up their charges to the highest point they think the people will stand. Saturday night some hack drivers were charging $5 for any kind of a trip within ten blocks. Others were a little easier, charging $3 for similar service, while some went as low as $2. On the whole, however, their charges were exorbitant. Those who needed the service the most, the people living far out in the East end and the West end, Lakeside and West Duluth, were scorned, and the drivers took the passengers going the shortest distance, so that they might reap the greater harvest by many trips.

What good is an ordinance if it is to be flagrantly violated at the times when it should be most effective. Hack drivers are glad to take passengers at any price ordinarily, and they don't object to the regulations imposed on them by the ordinance, but in times of distress, when service to the public is needed, they do as they please and forget there is an ordinance.

SUGGESTION FOR DULUTH SPORTSMEN.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The Eau Claire Rod and Gun club was organized three years ago last March for the purpose of protection of the game and to make fishing and shooting a more popular sport.

This club when first organized had a membership of twenty-six and now has a membership of 219. No liquor or gambling is allowed on the club grounds. Trout fry is bought from the state each year. Also pike and bass. The club is stocking forty-two streams in Eau Claire county alone. Forty-two dollars worth of wild rice was planted in the sloughs in the vicinity of Eau Claire to make duck shooting more popular. Trout less than six inches long are not allowed to be kept. Shooting and casting squads headed by a captain have been formed. The club owns one of the finest blue rock traps in the state of Wisconsin. A yearly banquet, shingle suppers, etc, are given for the members and friends. They own their own home and are improving it all the time. Why can't Duluth have a club of this kind.

And eloquence of beauty; and she glides
Into his darker musings with a mild
And gentle sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness, ere he is aware. When thoughts
Of the last bitter hour comes like a blight
Over thy spirit, and sad images
Of the stern agony, and shroud and pall
And breathless darkness, and the narrow house,
Make thee to shudder and grow sick at heart,
Go forth under the open sky, and list
To nature's teaching, while around—
Earth and her waters and the depths of air—
Comes a still voice—Yet a few days, and thee
The all-beholding sun shall see no more
In all his course; nor yet in the cold ground,
Where thy pale form was laid, with many tears,
Nor in the embrace of ocean, shall exist
Thy image. Earth, that nourished thee, shall claim
Thy growth, to be resolved to earth again;
And, lost each human trace, surrendering up
Thine individual being, shalt thou go
To mix forever with the elements;
To be a brother to the insensible rock
And to the sluggish clod, which the rude swain
Turns with his share, and treads upon. The oak
Shall send his roots abroad, and pierce thy mould.
Yet not to thine eternal resting place
Shalt thou retire alone—nor couldst thou wish
Couch more magnificent. Thou shalt lie down
With patriachs of the infant world—with kings,
The powerful of the earth—the wise, the good,
Fair forms, and hoary seers of ages past,
All in one mighty sepulcher. The hills,
Rock-ribbed and ancient as the sun; the vales
Stretching in pensive quietness between;
The venerable woods; rivers that move
In majesty, and the complaining brooks,
That make the meadows green; and, poured round all,
Old ocean's gray and melancholy waste—
Are but the solemn decorations all
Of the great tomb of man.

—William Cullan Bryant.

Slandered.

Life: Stock brokers are a slandered set?

Yes, to be sure they are; grossly slandered.

Is it wrong to buy and sell stocks?

Not a bit. That's all the brokers do, and it isn't wrong. The whole trouble and disrepute of the business comes along of the nasty lambs who will butt into the brokers' offices and play there, and leave tufts of their miserable little wool all over everything.

THE WEATHER

Duluth was given a taste of its old time brand of spring weather Saturday night, just as a sort of reminder that 'tis well not to let the spirits mount too high. Yesterday was fair enough, though a little chilly, and the snow has all disappeared this morning. Fair weather is promised for tonight, with freezing temperatures.

Fine spring weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:14 and it will set at 7, giving thirteen hours and forty-six minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The disturbance that has been affecting this section since April 15 is now central over Indiana. During the past twenty-four hours it caused further rain or snow in the lake region, Upper Mississippi, Lower Missouri and Ohio valleys and Atlantic states. Freezing temperatures still prevail throughout the Northwest and Rocky mountains in connection with a rather strong high pressure area central this morning over Eastern Montana and Western North Dakota. Freezing weather may be expected to continue at the Head of the Lakes tonight, but temperatures may be expected to rise somewhat during Tuesday as a result of a depression developing over North Pacific districts."

Following were the maximum temperatures for twenty-four hours and the minimum for twelve, ending at 7 a. m. today:

The Fast Cure.

(Dr. Forbes Ross in the London Express.) Only in cases of people between the ages of thirty and fifty-five should starvation for one moment be thought of, even then the patient should be one of those beetroot-faced persons known in the medical world as "gastronomical hogs," whose overindulgence makes such treatment necessary. Up to the age of thirty the fast cure would be suicide, for up to the age of twenty-five the bones are still growing, and the brain power of an individual is being strengthened up to the age of thirty, its capacity being greater then than at twenty.

In the young the inevitable result of frequent resource to this cure will be consumption, for the patient is only starving in a literal sense. The feeling of the pangs of hunger which are experienced for the first two or three days means that the digestive organs are working fruitlessly. After that they find work in consuming one another. This is proof that the patient is living on himself. After the age of thirty the danger of consumption is very small, and the body requires less nourishment. Those who think that the "fast cure" will do any good may attempt it at this age with little fear of any serious consequence.

After the age of fifty-five such a course is equally suicidal. This is one of the most critical periods in a person's life. Between this and the age of sixty-five the heart always makes an attempt to fail. And the only means of preventing this is to partake of a rich diet. When this later period is safely past the patient can look forward to attaining the age of 100.

The Arguments of the Stomach.

Puck: There is nothing academic about arguments made by the stomach. They are practical and direct. They go right to the center of things. Similar arguments are advanced by the back which wears a coat, and by the legs which wear pants. To return to the stomach, which is the best spokesman of the three, its way of brushing aside time honored statistics and hitherto impressive warnings is positively inspiring. When arguments against high tariffs were carried on by the brain and tongue alone, the Republican party could afford to stand pat on the tariff issue. The old terms—pauper labor, surplus products, infant industries, the full dinner pail, etc., did great service before the American stomach got busy in the game. That aggressive organ talks like this: "I don't care whether the tariff alone is responsible for the increasing difficulty of keeping me filled and satisfied, but I do know that it is partly responsible. What do you Republican fellows mean by keeping a high tariff on meat when you admit in the same breath that the country has outgrown its food supply? If the country has outgrown its food supply, are you going to keep that tariff in force so as to benefit the beef trust, or are you going to remove it so as to benefit me?" And the back and the legs give vent to "Hear! hear!" and begin to wax wroth about the wool schedule. The obvious fact in all this is that the tariff no longer is an academic issue. Folks see the relation between the tariff and their monthly bills, and while they recognize that there are many causes for the mounting cost of living, they see no reason for maintaining as a sacred thing a tariff which is one of the causes undeniably. We frequently hear the standpatter argue that England must have free trade because it doesn't raise food enough to feed its population. Now he is beginning to say that the United States doesn't raise food enough for its own use, but he offers no audible suggestion of free trade in foodstuffs as a remedy. That suggestion will come, has come, from the American stomach; the vital organ will make a vital issue.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1890.

•••The Bay View Land company has closed contracts with five people to build as many houses at once in its addition to West Duluth. They will cost from $1,000 to $1,400 each. Plans are also being prepared for six more houses to be erected this spring.

•••Ever since last fall H. Grill, a miller of Hillsboro, N. D., has been figuring on buying the old Duluth roller mill and has been negotiating through A. C. Batchelor for its purchase. All legal difficulties have at last been removed, and the deal is closed. Mr. Gill will put in machinery for an output of 400 barrels of flour daily. The mill and improvements will cost, over and above all salvage, about $60,000. The dock adjoining the mill will be repaired, and a large elevator and warehouse will be erected.

•••K. D. Chase of Faribault, R. W. Newport of St. Paul, Lon Merritt and C. N. Merritt of Oneota were in Tower on Sunday taking notes for the new line of railroad, known as the Lake Superior & Northwestern, which is expected to materialize during the coming season. The proposed route is from Duluth tarough the Mesaba range and on through the Vermilion to the Canadian boundary line, past the Lake of the Woods, with a branch to touch Tower.

•••The special committee of the chamber of commerce appointed to formulate some plan for inducing manufacturing enterprises to locate in Duluth reported at today's session that it had decided upon a co-operative organization to be known as the Duluth Development company. It will either loan money or give bonuses to such enterprises. The capital stock will be $500,000, and the company will begin business as soon as $50,000 has been subscribed. President Baldwin was authorized to appoint a committee to solicit names for members of the chamber. It is expected that the membership can easily be increased to 250.

•••The sudden death of Stanley Proudit, assistant general freigat agent of the Omaha road, has cused both surprise and sorrow in Duluth, where he had a large number of friends.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Better Campaign Tactics.

Greenbush Tribune: It is announced that the Taft administration is going to send out a lot of brilliant orators to defend itself. We would recommend instead that Taft fire Ballinger, and cease upholding Cannon and Aldrich and the infamous tariff law that bears their name. Possibly if Taft did this the people would have some confidence in his administration.

The People Will Rule.

Ogilvie Sentinel: The old parties will either be ruled by loyal, patriotic, high-minded men tomorrow who are in line for progress and humanity, or when tomorrow comes there won't be any Democratic or Republican party. The political party that wants to live must base its right to life upon its ability, its power and its willingness to serve the masses of the people, instead of the trusts, railroad and combinations that desire to rob the masses.

The Right to Contest.

Biwabik Times: The opposition, having failed to bring forth another man who would make a better congressman that Clarence B. Miller, and the latter having shown that he possesses all the elements that go to make a good representative in congress, we would suggest that all talk of opposition at the primaries is out of order. As to the Democrats putting up a man against him, that is another question, and the party certainly has the right to contest for the seat if it so chooses.

And Devilie Smile.

Cannon Falls Beacon: Aldrich posing as the champion of a reform president is a sight to make angels weep.

Considerate.

Ortonville Herald Star: The Republican state convention, to be held in June, will "nominate" a candidate for United States senator. The gentlemen of the state committee have kindly concluded to allow the legislature to elect, however.

An Invasion of Personal Liberty?

Albert Lea Tribune: The government is pursuing a campaign against bucket shops. It fails to respect the sacred right of the citizen to play the game of heads I lose tails you win.

Or Who Vote the Tickets.

Hallock Eenterprise: Cannon admits that his overthrow was 85 per cent Democratic and 15 per cent Republican. In the next campaign we will be told that it was the Republicans who purged themselves of Cannonism, but we will remember and know better. As a matter of fact, the Republican party has never purged itself of any evil. Every reform has invariably been brought about by Democrats, whether Democrats in name, principle or both. It must be remembered there are more Democrats in the country than those who wear the title.

Neighborly Advice.

Zumbrota News: The editor of the Appleton Press busted his office chair over the head of a belligerent citizen who tried to dictate the policies of the paper. We sympathize with the editor in the loss of his chair. Next time use a side stick, brother; they don't break so easily.

Socialism's Unterrifying Policies.

Springfield Republican: Socialism in theory and for propagandist purposes is one thing; socialism in practice under official responsibility is and always will prove to be something a little different. It will talk more or less wildly in theory, and in practice it will talk in moderation and with eyes wide open to actual conditions. This appears rather strikingly in the pronouncement made by Victor Berger, a leader of the Milwaukee Socialist party, on behalf of the Socialist administration of city affairs which is about to be inaugurated. What the Milwaukee Socialists propose to do under official responsibility is thus stated:

Build and operate a municipal electric light and power plant.

Drive out grafters and contractors' rings; thorough investigation to be first step.

Push public works, especially in winter, to give employment to as many as possible.

Pay union wages, although the law prohibits discrimination between union and non-union labor.

Readjust taxes so that their burden will fall in a less degree upon the poor.

Require street railway and other public utility corporations to give better service.

Drop several hundred superfluous city employes from the pay rolls.

Fill positions requiring technical or scientific skill with men of that knowledge, even if it be necessary to go outside Milwaukee.

Name Socialists to fill places where questions of policy are determined.

There is nothing very terrifying in this program. It is little more than what either one of the regular political parties would promise to do in seeking the suffrages of the people of a city. Practically all of the propositions are admirable, and the declaration in favor of putting men of technical skill in positions requiring technical knowledge, "even if it be necessary to go outside Milwaukee" to get them, shows an enlightened and aggressive spirit on behalf of honest and efficient public administration.

Even more reassuring than what the Milwaukee Socialist administration proposes to do is what it does not intend to do as stated by Mr. Berger:

Abolish capitalism in Milwaukee; create a state of business uncertainty.

Employ every man or woman out of work.

Fill offices with political henchmen.

Allow loafers to retain office.

Attempt more than the state law authorizes; for instance, institute the initiative and refereudum, which must wait on state legislation.

Dignitaries and leaders in the Roman Catholic church around Boston have been holding a conference on the social conditions of the day, with particular reference to a concerted attack by the church on socialism. Assuredly the church cannot have any objection to socialism in so far as it aims to find practical expression in the one city of the country which it now controls in a legislative and administrative way. And it will doubtless become clearer and clearer, as Socialist parties may now and then, and here and there, succeed at the polls, that "socialism" is to reach its ultimate ends through slow and evolutionary processes and not through revolution or violent disturbance. And this attainment of its ultimate ends through evolution—and they must be so attained if they are to have any abiding force—is so far away in the remote future as to fall outside of present consideration.

He Knew Who's Who.

Detroit News: Apropos of Lent, the rector of a suburban Boston church was questioning one of his young charges the other day, and was impressed with the intelligence of the boy's answers. Finally he asked:

"Well, Charlie, you seem to know your catechism very well. Now, tell me the difference between the quick and the dead."

Charlie was thoughtful for a moment and then his face brightened.

"I've really never been told the difference," he said, "but I suppose the quick are those who get out of the way, and the dead are the ones whose relatives collect damages from the owner of the automobile."

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Chicago Daily News: He—Why are you so sad, darling?

She—I was just thinking, dearest, that this is the last evening we can be together till tomorrow.

Punch: "What about this 'ere 'Alley's comet?"

"'E ain't come yet, but I'm ready for 'im. I've got a bit o' smoked glass 'andy."

Life: Florist—Something new and very rare—a black rose!

Pittsburger—Pshaw! We have had them in my town for years.

London Opinion: "You failed in your viva voce exam., George?"

"Yes, but it was purely absence of mind, auntie!"

Birmingham Age-Herald: "Don't you know that little boys who swear won't go to heaven?"

"That's all right, mister. I'd rather be with pa, anyhow."

Pele Mele: Mourner (to widower)—You seem to be enjoying the walk.

Widower—Certainly. When one is in business, it is mighty hard to get away for a day.

Buffalo Express: "I see you only have one chair in the kitchen, Mary! I must get another one for you."

"You needn't mind, ma'am. I have none but gentlemen callers."

Washington Star: "So you don't want the earth?" said the sneering acquaintance.

"No," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, calmly. "If one man owned all the real estate in existence it would be too easy to assess taxes."

Chicago News: "Love," remarked the girl with the quotation habit, "makes the world go round."

"Wrong again," rejoined the mere man. "Instead of making the world go round, love makes the head swim. That's the explanation."

Chicago Record-Herald: "I remember your face very well," he said, "but really, I have forgotten your name."

"It doesn't matter," she replied. "I've had two different names since we met anyhow."

Cleveland Leader: Teacher—What is the meaning of the word "procrastinate?"

Pupil—To put off.

Teacher—Right. Illustrate it in a sentence.

Pupil—I tried to steal a ride on a street car yesterday, but I was procrastinated.

Boston Record: Landlady—The man who is on the third floor back is behind in his rent and they say he wouldn't work.

Second-Floor Lodger—Well, I would not worry about an idle roomer.

Detroit Free Press: "Why don't you buy a house? It's just as easy as paying rent."

"Great Scott! You don't call paying rent easy do you."

Smart Set: A woman's idea of Paradise: A pocketbook full of money, a bargain sale and she the only customer in the store.

Pittsburg Post: "Is it a fashionable novel?"

"Sure thing. The hero even puts on a dress suit to sit alone of an evening and mope."

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: No poetry was ever written in a dental parlor.

Some people would rather join the crowd than go to heaven.

All cats remind us of most women; they think they can sing.

The few matches made in heaven do not worry the match trust.

A man's idea of house cleaning is to have his winter whiskers removed.

Speaking of her callers, a spinster says single men are doubly welcome.

Some things are better in the past or future tense, but kissing isn't one of them.

A man can induce a woman to agree with him by appearing to agree with her.

Matrimony is about the only thing that will take all the conceit out of a silly woman.

It's awfully hard to believe that the man who found the goods on you made the discovery by accident.

When a woman says she enjoys being caught in a rain it's a sign that she believes it is good for her complexion.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The only thing a woman can enjoy more than making a man miserable about her is making herself miserable, too.

Ever when a man knows a girl is just flirting with him he can act as if he had lost a bet on a horse race when she sends him away.

A man always has a clearer conscience when he telegraphs a lie home about being detained by business than when he telephones it.

The average man proposes to a girl with about the same calmness he would go to his execution, and it's pretty much the same thing.

If a man plays a game of dominoes with the children he tries to give an impression downtown the next day it was a game of poker at the club with a $10 limit.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY'S JEWEL.

The Republican party has a precious jewel which is its most highly prized possession. Mr. Bryan, in a letter from South America intended to be read at a Jefferson day banquet, exposed this jewel to the admiration of his Democratic followers, and seems to treat it as a new discovery.

The name of this jewel is inconsistency—not consistency, but inconsistency. What the Republican party would have done without it and without the extraordinary popular credulity and blind faith that have made it effective, it is hard to imagine.

Mr. Bryan points out that in 1896, when he was advocating the free coinage of silver at the sacred ratio of 16 to 1, he said that more money would mean higher prices. He argued that all the money in the country is in the balance, and all the commodities in the country are in the other balance. When you add more money to the money balance goes down and the commodity balance goes up; it takes more money to balance an unchanged amount of commodities, so prices are higher. That was called the quantitative theory, and Mr. Bryan tried it upon the people.

The Republican party said it was perfectly absurd; that it was "shell" theory with no shell; that it was the cart in the donkey without any donkey; that, in short, there was nothing to it.

And now, every high priest have come to such an extent that people wonder how anybody ever looked upon them as things to be sought and fought for, the Republican party is engaged in showing that it isn't the tariff or the trusts or rockefellers or monopoly that makes high prices, but more money. Much gold has been dug, and the store of money is greatly increased; so prices necessarily go up. Mr. Taft has explained it that way in a speech in which he declared that the "best tariff law the world ever had" had nothing to do with the high cost of living.

So tariff is the quantitative theory of money; the very thing Mr. Bryan was preaching in 1896, and the very thing the Republican party said was false. No wonder Mr. Bryan exults at this wholesale conversion of the Republican party to his way of thinking.

Mr. Bryan isn't trying to revive the issue of free silver. Nobody wants free silver now, because nobody wants higher prices. Lower prices are what everybody is looking for now—everybody, that is, except Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Cannon and Mr. Morgan and a few others.

But this abrupt switching about of the Republican party is a new use of its precious jewel of inconsistency, and Mr. Bryan most assuredly has a right to chuckle over it.

The jewel is nothing new, however. The Republican party has declared, in its heart-to-heart talks with the people about the tariff, that the foreigner pays the tariff tax and if there is no tariff tax to be paid. It has proclaimed the policy of protection as a noble instrument for the good of the American workingman, and then it has imported hordes of European workingmen to underbid the American workingman in his own home. It has asserted that the tariff was in the interests of the farmer because it protected his wheat against the competition of foreign wheat, thereby giving him high prices; and it has declared that the tariff has nothing whatever to do with the high prices of farm products, because this country exports so many farm products that the tariff couldn't affect their home prices. It has taken credit for periods of prosperity created by the sun and the rain and the people's need to buy food, raiment and shelter; and when its own bounties to Special Privilege have drained so much of the people's wealth away from the people that they no longer could buy, and hard times came, it has blamed the result to its opponents.

Consistency is a jewel; but inconsistency, as used by the Republican party, is a jewel that is far more precious and vastly more interesting.

THE BAKERS AND THEIR BREAD.

It is a astounding that the bakers are up in arms over the proposed ordinance governing their business in the interest of cleanliness and public health. Probably the public never yet attempted to regulate a private business in the interest of the common good that the men engaged in that business did not become indignant and protest with might and main.

In the present case, the bakers seem willing to accept every proposed regulation except that requiring each separate loaf of bread to be wrapped and sealed. This, they say, will so greatly increase the cost of production that they will have to raise the price from 5 cents to 6 cents a loaf. Turn the cover on its other side, this sounds very much like a threat of punishment if the city takes the step it proposes; and threats are not good arguments in a case of this sort.

The health commissioner declares that this plan of requiring each loaf of bread to be wrapped and sealed is the most important provision in the ordinance; and nobody who has seen bread handled out of baker's delivery wagons will fail to agree with him. It isn't pleasant to go into the details which the requirement that loaves shall be wrapped is intended to cure; let it suffice to say that the provision is needed very much, and that the slight increase in cost it entails is by no means large enough to excuse an increase in the price of bread.

RICH MINES OF WEALTH.

Isn't there an old story about a man who fancied there was treasure buried in his property, and who spaded it all up and, finding no Spanish gold, planted the spaded ground and found, after all, that his land was rich in treasure because its soil yielded fruitfully? If there isn't such a story there ought to be, and in a way it is applicable to Northeastern Minnesota.

If land near Duluth could be capitalized and stock sold to investors, and if exploration resulted in clearing and spading up the ground without discovering mineral wealth, the stockholders could do as well out of farm products as they will out of the average mining exploitation.

Saturday evening The Herald published some vivid sentences from reports made on Northern Minnesota's soil by Prof. Thomas Shaw which are being published and circulated by the Northern Pacific railroad. Prof. Shaw is an acknowledged expert, and his enthusiasms are the products of keen observation and ripe experience. When he says that St. Louis county has room for 300,000 more farmers, that the adaptation of the county for growing vegetables is unexcelled, that the most productive herd of dairy cattle in the state is in St. Louis county, and that Northern Minnesota is fitted to beat Holland for dairy production, Aberdeenshire for beef and Denmark for pork, it means something. It means that rich mines of wealth are being overlooked by men in search of livelihood and fortune.

RETARDING SETTLEMENT.

The sympathy of every community in Northern Minnesota which has had its development retarded by the niggardliness or neglect of nation or state will go out to the communities whose hopes have been centered in the opening of the Cass Lake and Deer River Indian lands which congress ordered placed at the disposal of settlers two years ago.

Last week the Cass Lake Commercial club passed strong resolutions on the subject, and the attention of the senators and congressmen from Minnesota should be directed toward the subject matter of these resolutions.

The act of congress declaring these lands open as soon as the timber was removed was passed in May, 1908. There are now, it is said, between 30,000 and 40,000 acres of these lands from which the timber has been removed. The greater part of these idle acres are suitable for agriculture, and there are settlers anxious to go upon them and till their soil. Indeed, counting upon the prompt opening of the lands in accordance with the will of congress expressed in law, many settlers have in good faith gone upon the lands and now await the opportunity to perfect their titles, so that they may build farm homes in what was lately a wilderness.

They reckoned without the department of the interior, however. That department, on one excuse or another, has postponed the opening of these lands until patience is worn to the breaking point.

It is proposed, therefore, that the representatives of Minnesota in congress shall look into the causes of the repeated delays, and see if there isn't some way to cut the red tape that is holding back these needed acres.

The demand is reasonable, and if the department doesn't act promptly, congress should inquire why its orders have not been obeyed.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

The country has had a pleasant winter and spring discussing the high cost of living, the iniquities of Joe Cannon, the reckless and arrogant greed of the trusts, the perfidy of the Republican party, the treachery of Ballinger, the supine spinelessness of the president, the wicked robbery of the new tariff law, and other choice topics.

The time has come, however, when the country is going to be rather too busy to give so much attention to these subjects as it has during the winter. They will not be forgotten, of course; they will be with us just the same, and will come in handy on the days when rain checks are given out.

But the baseball season is on, and the American people are going to occupy themselves with matters that, though old, are ever new.

The National and American leagues have begun business already. The American association starts this week. The minor leagues will trail along. Our own Minnesota-Wisconsin league will play ball May 11. Vacant lot leagues have already begun work, and hordes of leagueless clubs are arranging dates.

So the American people are about to become very busily engaged in important matters. There are percentages to be made and kept track of, and there are batting and fielding records to be made and kept track of. There are umpires to be hooted at when they fail to see things as we see them. There are batters to be upbraided when they fail to connect with the ball, and there are fielders to be reproached bitterly when the ball slips through their eager fingers.

There is, indeed, much business in hand to be done. There are new excuses to be invented for getting an afternoon off to attend the game, or new eloquence must be acquired for making the old excuses go once more. The lead-voiced fans must invent new patter to hurl at the players for the regalement of the bleachers, or give new twists to the old cries. The baseball reporters must devise new and more cryptic phrases to describe the infinite variety of evolutions in a ball game. The captains must create new excuses for losing, and new ways to fasten the blame on the umpire.

There is much to do, and it will be done with a will. The fan, the baseball reporter, the captain, the umpire and the player approach their momentous tasks with new energy and new enthusiasm. There is a work to be done, and they are the boys to do it. The tariff, the trusts, perfidious public servants and the tyranny of large interests were well enough to discuss in the drab days when the diamond was covered with snow, and they will be good enough now for rainy days. More timely, now, and more appealing, will be stories of how Casey swatted the ball for a three-bagger, and how Niemeyer fanned nine men in succession.

THE PLAYGROUND MOVEMENT.

The movement to provide public playgrounds for city children is a crusade that speaks for itself. Nobody who has witnessed the difference between children playing in streets or alleys and children playing in well-equipped public playgrounds needs to be told that the movement is a splendid thing. The Duluth Playground association, at Saturday's meeting, was able to show that its work thus far in this city has justified itself; and its request for subscriptions to a fund of $1,000 for new work should bring a prompt and generous response.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

SHOULD TEST OFTENER.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In your paper of the 6th inst. is a notice to the dairymen from Health Commissioner H. E. Webster, wherein he says that milk from cows that have not been tested for tuberculosis will be condemned. That is a good idea, but so far the tuberculin testing of cows in our city has been somewhat lax. The health department seems to think it enough to test the cows when they arrive from the country, while they sometimes miss the cows that are bought or exchanged within the city, whose milk is sold with other milk.

Tuberculin test, says the government report, should be done once or even twice a year. The dairymen would favor that, I think. It is just as much in their favor to have all their cows tested regularly, as to the consumers of milk. A healthy herd is a good recommendation. We are glad to have the test.

HACK DRIVERS' CHARGES.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In the history of all great disasters, the ghouls and buzzards, who preyed on the unfortunate as of others, have stood out in sad contrast to the heroes who have worked tirelessly to alleviate the sufferings of those whom disaster laid low.

No one who has had experience in a situation like that in Duluth on Saturday night or during the big storm last July need ask on which side the hack drivers of the city enroll themselves when the opportunity comes, even though it is on a smaller scale than in big disasters. When there is no incentive, the hack drivers observe the ordinance regulating their charges, if one watches them closely enough, but in times of distress, when people cannot say anything if they are held up, the hack drivers do not hesitate to put up their charges to the highest point they think the people will stand.

Saturday night some hack drivers were charging $5 for any kind of a trip within ten blocks. Others were a little easier, charging $3 for similar service, while some went as low as $2. On the whole, however, their charges were exorbitant. Those who needed the service the most, the people living far out in the East end and the West end, Lakeside and West Duluth, were scorned, and the drivers took the passengers going the shortest distance, so that they might reap the greater harvest by many trips.

What good is an ordinance if it is to be flagrantly violated at the times when it should be most effective. Hack drivers are glad to take passengers at any price ordinarily, and they don't object to the regulations imposed on them by the ordinance, but in times of distress, when service to the public is needed, they do as they please and forget there is an ordinance.

SUGGESTION FOR DULUTH SPORTSMEN.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The Eau Claire Rod and Gun club was organized three years ago last March for the purpose of protection of the game and to make fishing and shooting a more popular sport.

This club when first organized had a membership of twenty-six and now has a membership of 219. No liquor or gambling is allowed on the club grounds. Trout fry is bought from the state each year. Also pike and bass. The club is stocking forty-two streams in Eau Claire county alone. Forty-two dollars worth of wild rice was planted in the sloughs in the vicinity of Eau Claire to make duck shooting more popular. Trout less than six inches long are not allowed to be kept. Shooting and casting squads headed by a captain have been formed. The club owns one of the finest blue rock traps in the state of Wisconsin. A yearly banquet, shingle suppers, etc, are given for the members and friends. They own their own home and are improving it all the time. Why can't Duluth have a club of this kind.

Formerly of Eau Claire.

Thanatopsis.
(Part I.)

To him in the love of nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language; for his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness and a smile
And eloquence of beauty; and she glides
Into his darker musings with a mild
And gentle sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness, ere he is aware. When thoughts
Of the last bitter hour comes like a blight
Over thy spirit, and sad images
Of the stern agony, and shroud and pall
And breathless darkness, and the narrow house,
Make thee to shudder and grow sick at heart,
Go forth under the open sky, and list
To nature's teaching, while around—
Earth and her waters and the depths of air—
Comes a still voice—Yet a few days, and thee
The all-beholding sun shall see no more
In all his course; nor yet in the cold ground,
Where thy pale form was laid, with many tears,
Nor in the embrace of ocean, shall exist
Thy image. Earth, that nourished thee, shall claim
Thy growth, to be resolved to earth again,
And, lost each human trace, surrendering up
Thine individual being, shalt thou go
To mix forever with the elements;
To be a brother to the insensible rock
And to the sluggish clod, which the rude swain
Turns with his share, and treads upon. The oak
Shall send his roots abroad, and pierce thy mould.
Yet not to thine eternal resting place
Shalt thou retire alone—nor couldst thou wish
Couch more magnificent. Thou shalt lie down
With patriarchs of the infant world—with kings,
The powerful of the earth—the wise, the good,
Fair forms, and hoary seers of ages
All in one mighty sepulcher. The hills,
Rock-ribbed and ancient as the sun; the vales
Stretching in pensive quietness between;
The venerable woods; rivers that move
In majesty, and the complaining brooks,
That make the meadows green; and, poured round all,
Old ocean's gray and melancholy waste—
Are but the solemn decorations all
Of the great tomb of man.

—William Cullen Bryant.

Slandered.

Idle: Stock brokers are a slandered set.

Yes, to be sure they are; grossly slandered.

Is it wrong to buy and sell stocks?

Not a bit. That's all the brokers do, and it isn't wrong. The whole trouble and dispute of the business comes along of the nasty lambs who will butt into the brokers' offices and play there, and leave tufts of their miserable little wool all over everything.

THE WEATHER

Duluth was given a taste of its old time brand of spring weather Saturday night, just as a sort of reminder that 'tis well not to let the spirits mount too high. Yesterday was fair enough, though a little chilly, and the snow has all disappeared this morning. Fair weather is promised for tonight, with freezing temperatures.

Fine spring weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:14 and it will set at 7, giving thirteen hours and forty-six minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The disturbance that has been affecting this section since April 15 is now central over Indiana. During the past twenty-four hours it caused further rain or snow in the lake region, Upper Mississippi, Lower Missouri and Ohio valleys and Atlantic states. Freezing temperatures still prevail throughout the Northwest and Rocky mountains in connection with a rather strong high pressure area central this morning over Eastern Montana and Western North Dakota. Freezing weather may be expected to continue at the Head of the Lakes tonight, but temperatures may be expected to rise somewhat during Tuesday as a result of a depression developing over North Pacific districts."

Following were the maximum temperatures for twenty-four hours and the minimum for twelve, ending at 7 a. m. today:

The Fast Cure.

(Dr. Forbes Ross in the London Express.) Only in cases of people between the ages of thirty and fifty-five should starvation for one moment be thought of, even then the patient should be one of those beetroot-faced persons known in the medical world as "gastronomical hogs," whose overindulgence makes such treatment necessary. Up to the age of thirty the fast cure would be suicide, for up to the age of twenty-five the bones are still growing, and the brain power of an individual is being strengthened up to the age of thirty, its capacity being greater then than at twenty.

In the young the inevitable result of frequent resource to this cure will be consumption, for the patient is only starving in a literal sense. The feeling of the pangs of hunger which are experienced for the first two or three days means that the digestive organs are working fruitlessly. After that they find work in consuming one another. This is proof that the patient is living on himself. After the age of thirty the danger of consumption is very small, and the body requires less nourishment. Those who think that the "fast cure" will do any good may attempt it at this age with little fear of any serious consequence.

After the age of fifty-five such a course is equally suicidal. This is one of the most critical periods in a person's life. Between this and the age of sixty-five the heart always makes an attempt to fail. And the only means of preventing this is to partake of a rich diet. When this later period is safely past the patient can look forward to attaining the age of 100.

The Arguments of the Stomach.

Puck: There is nothing academic about arguments made by the stomach. They are practical and direct. They go right to the center of things. Similar arguments are advanced by the back which wears a coat, and by the legs which wear pants. To return to the stomach, which is the best spokesman of the three, its way of brushing aside time honored statistics and hitherto impressive warnings is positively inspiring. When arguments against high tariffs were carried on by the brain and tongue alone, the Republican party could afford to stand pat on the tariff issue. The old terms—pauper labor, surplus products, infant industries, the full dinner pail, etc., did great service before the American stomach got busy in the game. That aggressive organ talks like this: "I don't care whether the tariff alone is responsible for the increasing difficulty of keeping me filled and satisfied, but I do know that it is partly responsible. What do you Republican fellows mean by keeping a high tariff on meat when you admit in the same breath that the country has outgrown its food supply? If the country has outgrown its food supply, are you going to keep that tariff in force so as to benefit the beef trust, or are you going to remove it so as to benefit me?" And the back and the legs give vent to "Hear! hear!" and begin to wax wroth about the wool schedule. The obvious fact in all this is that the tariff no longer is an academic issue. Folks see the relation between the tariff and their monthly bills, and while they recognize that there are many causes for the mounting cost of living, they see no reason for maintaining as a sacred thing a tariff which is one of the causes undeniably. We frequently hear the standpatter argue that England must have free trade because it doesn't raise food enough to feed its population. Now he is beginning to say that the United States doesn't raise food enough for its own use, but he offers no audible suggestion of free trade in foodstuffs as a remedy. That suggestion will come, has come, from the American stomach; the vital organ will make a vital issue.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1890.

The Bay View Land company has closed contracts with five people to build as many houses at once in its addition to West Duluth. They will cost from $1,000 to $1,400 each. Plans are also being prepared for six more houses to be erected this spring.

Ever since last fall H. Grill, a miller of Hillsboro, N. D., has been figuring on buying the old Duluth roller mill and has been negotiating through A. C. Batchelor for its purchase. All legal difficulties have at last been removed, and the deal is closed. Mr. Gill will put in machinery for an output of 400 barrels of flour daily. The mill and improvements will cost, over and above all salvage, about $60,000. The dock adjoining the mill will be repaired, and a large elevator and warehouse will be erected.

R. D. Chase of Faribault, R. W. Newport of St. Paul, Lon Merritt and C. N. Merritt of Oneota were in Tower on Sunday taking notes for the new line of railroad, known as the Lake Superior & Northwestern, which is expected to materialize during the coming season. The proposed route is from Duluth through the Mesaba range and on through the Vermilion to the Canadian boundary line, past the Lake of the Woods, with a branch to touch Tower.

The special committee of the chamber of commerce appointed to formulate some plan for inducing manufacturing enterprises to locate in Duluth reported at today's session that it had decided upon a co-operative organization to be known as the Duluth Development company. It will either loan money or give bonuses to such enterprises. The capital stock will be $500,000, and the company will begin business as soon as $50,000 has been subscribed. President Baldwin was authorized to appoint a committee to solicit names for members of the chamber. It is expected that the membership can easily be increased to 250.

The sudden death of Stanley Proudfit, assistant general freight agent of the Omaha road, has caused both surprise and sorrow in Duluth, where he had a large number of friends.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Better Campaign Tactics.

Greenbush Tribune: It is announced that the Taft administration is going to send out a lot of brilliant orators to defend itself. We would recommend instead that Taft fire Ballinger, and cease upholding Cannon and Aldrich and the infamous tariff law that bears their name. Possibly if Taft did this the people would have some confidence in his administration.

The People Will Rule.

Ogilvie Sentinel: The old parties will either be ruled by loyal, patriotic, high-minded men tomorrow who are in line for progress and humanity, or when tomorrow comes there won't be any Democratic or Republican party. The political party that wants to live must base its right to life upon its ability, its power and its willingness to serve the masses of the people, instead of the trusts, railroad and combinations that desire to rob the masses.

The Right to Contest.

Biwabik Times: The opposition, having failed to bring forth another man who would make a better congressman that Clarence B. Miller, and the latter having shown that he possessed all the elements that go to make a good representative in congress, we would suggest that all talk of opposition at the primaries is out of order. As to the Democrats putting up a man against him, that is another question, and the party certainly has the right to contest for the seat if it so chooses.

And Devils Smile.

Cannon Falls Beacon: Aldrich posing as the champion of a reform president is a sight to make angels weep.

Considerate.

Ortonville Herald Star: The Republican state convention, to be held in June, will "nominate" a candidate for United States senator. The gentlemen of the state committee have kindly concluded to allow the legislature to elect, however.

An Invasion of Personal Liberty!

Albert Lea Tribune: The government is pursuing a campaign against bucket shops. It fails to respect the sacred right of the citizen to play the game of heads I lose tails you win.

Or Who Vote the Tickets.

Hallock Enterprise: Cannon admits that his overthrow was 85 per cent Democratic and 15 per cent Republican. In the next campaign we will be told that it was the Republicans who purged themselves of Cannonism, but we will remember and know better. As a matter of fact, the Republican party has never purged itself of any evil. Every reform has invariably been brought about by Democrats, whether Democrats in name, principle or both. It must be remembered there are more Democrats in the country than those who wear the title.

Neighborly Advice.

Zumbrota News: The editor of the Appleton Press busted his office chair over the head of a belligerent citizen who tried to dictate the policies of the paper. We sympathize with the editor in the loss of his chair. Next time use a side stick, brother; they don't break so easily.

Socialism's Unterrifying Policies.

Springfield Republican: Socialism in theory and for propagandist purposes is one thing; socialism in practice under official responsibility is and always will prove to be something a little different. It will talk more or less wildly in theory, and in practice it will talk in moderation and with eyes wide open to actual conditions. This appears rather strikingly in the pronouncement made by Victor Berger, a leader of the Milwaukee Socialist party, on behalf of the Socialist administration of city affairs which is about to be inaugurated. What the Milwaukee Socialists propose to do under official responsibility is thus stated:

Build and operate a municipal electric light and power plant.

Drive out grafters and contractors' rings, through investigation to be first set.

Push public works, especially in winter, to give employment to as many as possible.

Pay union wages, although the law prohibits discrimination between union and non-union labor.

Readjust taxes so that their burden will fall in a less degree upon the poor.

Require street railway and other public utility corporations to give better service.

Drop several hundred superfluous city employes from the pay rolls.

Fill positions requiring technical or scientific skill with men of that knowledge, even if it be necessary to go outside Milwaukee.

Name Socialists to fill places where questions of policy are determined.

There is nothing very terrifying in this program. It is little more than what either one of the regular political parties would promise to do in seeking the suffrages of the people of a city. Practically all of the propositions are admirable, and the declaration in favor of putting men of technical skill in positions requiring technical knowledge, "even if it be necessary to go outside Milwaukee" to get them, shows an enlightened and aggressive spirit on behalf of honest and efficient public administration.

Even more reassuring than what the Milwaukee Socialist administration proposes to do is what it does not intend to do as stated by Mr. Berger:

Abolish capitalism in Milwaukee; create a state of business uncertainty.

Empty every ash or woman out of work.

Fill offices with political henchmen.

Allow loafers to retain office.

Attempt more than the state law authorizes; for instance, institute the initiative and referendum, which must wait on state legislation.

Dignitaries and leaders in the Roman Catholic church around Boston have been holding a conference on the social conditions of the day, with particular reference to a concerted attack by the church on socialism. Assuredly the church cannot have any objection to socialism in so far as it aims to find practical expression in the one city of the country which it now controls in a legislative and administrative way. And it will doubtless become clearer and clearer, as Socialist parties may now and then, and here and there, succeed at the polls, that "socialism" is to reach its ultimate ends through slow and evolutionary processes and not through revolution or violent disturbance. And this attainment of its ultimate ends through evolution—and they must be so attained if they are to have any abiding force—is so far away in the remote future as to fall outside of present consideration.

He Knew Who's Who.

Detroit News: Apropos of Lent, the rector of a suburban Boston church was questioning one of his young charges the other day, and was impressed with the intelligence of the boy's answers. Finally he asked:

"Well, Charlie, you seem to know your catechism very well. Now, tell me the difference between the quick and the dead."

Charlie was thoughtful for a moment and then his face brightened.

"I've really never been told the difference," he said, "but I suppose the quick are those who get out of the way, and the dead are the ones whose relatives collect damages from the owner of the automobile."

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Chicago Daily News: He—Why are you so sad, darling?

She—I was just thinking, dearest, that this is the last evening we can be together till tomorrow.

Punch: "What about this one 'Alley's comet?'"

"It ain't come yet, but I'm ready for him. I've got a bit o' smoked glass 'andy."

Life: Florist—Something new and very rare—a black rose!

Pittsburger—Pshaw! We have had them in my town for years.

London Opinion: "You failed in your Civil Service exam, George."

"Yes, but it was purely absence of mind, auntie!"

Birmingham Age-Herald: "Don't you know that little boys who swear won't go to heaven?"

"That's all right, mister. I'd rather be with pa, anyhow."

Pele Mele: Mourner (to widower)—You seem to be enjoying the walk.
